Housing wealth--the net equity held by households, consisting of the value of their homes minus their mortgage debt--is the most important source of wealth for all but those at the very top.[11] It accounted for three-fifths of wealth in 2013 for the lower half of families and two-fifths of wealth for the next 45. But housing wealth was only one-fifth of total wealth for the top 5 percent of families. The share of housing in total net worth for all three groups has not changed much since 1989.

Since housing accounts for a larger share of wealth for those in the bottom half of the wealth distribution, their overall wealth is affected more by changes in home prices. Furthermore, homeowners in the bottom half have been more highly leveraged on their homes, amplifying this difference. As a result, while the SCF shows that all three groups saw proportionally similar increases and subsequent declines in home prices from 1989 to 2013, the effects on net worth were greater for those in the bottom half of households by wealth. Foreclosures and the dramatic fall in house prices affected many of these families severely, pushing them well down the wealth distribution. Figure 6 shows that homeowners in the bottom half of households by wealth reported 61 percent less home equity in 2013 than in 2007. The next 45 reported a 29 percent loss of housing wealth, and the top 5 lost 20 percent.

Fortunately, rebounding housing prices in 2013 and 2014 have restored a good deal of the loss in housing wealth, with the largest gains for those toward the bottom. Based on rising home prices alone and not counting possible changes in mortgage debt or other factors, Federal Reserve staff estimate that between 2013 and mid-2014, average home equity rose 49 percent for the lowest half of families by wealth that own homes.[12] The estimated gains are somewhat less for those with greater wealth.[13] Homeowners in the bottom 50, which had an average overall net worth of $25,000 in 2013, would have seen their net worth increase to an average of $33,000 due solely to home price gains since 2013, a 32 percent increase.

Another major source of wealth for many families is financial assets, including stocks, bonds, mutual funds, and private pensions.[14] Figure 7 shows that the wealthiest 5 percent of households held nearly two-thirds of all such assets in 2013, the next 45 percent of families held about one-third, and the bottom half of households, just 2 percent. This figure may look familiar, since the distribution of financial wealth has concentrated at the top since 1989 at rates similar to those for overall wealth, which we saw in figure 3.[15]

Those are the basics on wealth and income inequality from the SCF. Other research tells us that inequality tends to persist from one generation to the next. For example, one study that divides households by income found that 4 in 10 children raised in families in the lowest-income fifth of households remain in that quintile as adults.[16] Fewer than 1 in 10 children of families at the bottom later reach the top quintile. The story is flipped for children raised in the highest-income households: When they grow up, 4 in 10 stay at the top and fewer than 1 in 10 fall to the bottom.

Research also indicates that economic mobility in the United States has not changed much in the last several decades; that mobility is lower in the United States than in most other advanced countries; and, as I noted earlier, that economic mobility and income inequality among advanced countries are negatively correlated.[17]

Four Building Blocks of Opportunity

An important factor influencing intergenerational mobility and trends in inequality over time is economic opportunity. While we can measure overall mobility and inequality, summarizing opportunity is harder, which is why I intend to focus on some important sources of opportunity--the four building blocks I mentioned earlier.

Two of those are so significant that you might call them "cornerstones" of opportunity, and you will not be surprised to hear that both are largely related to education. The first of these cornerstones I would describe more fully as "resources available to children in their most formative years." The second is higher education that students and their families can afford.

Two additional sources of opportunity are evident in the SCF. They affect fewer families than the two cornerstones I have just identified, but enough families and to a sufficient extent that I believe they are also important sources of economic opportunity.

The third building block of opportunity, as shown by the SCF, is ownership of a private business.[18] This usually means ownership and sometimes direct management of a family business. The fourth source of opportunity is inherited wealth. As one would expect, inheritances are concentrated among the wealthiest families, but the SCF indicates they may also play an important role in the opportunities available to others.

Resources Available for Children

For households with children, family resources can pay for things that research shows enhance future earnings and other economic outcomes--homes in safer neighborhoods with good schools, for example, better nutrition and health care, early childhood education, intervention for learning disabilities, travel and other potentially enriching experiences.[19] Affluent families have significant resources for things that give children economic advantages as adults, and the SCF data I have cited indicate that many other households have very little to spare for this purpose. These disparities extend to other household characteristics associated with better economic outcomes for offspring, such as homeownership rates, educational attainment of parents, and a stable family structure.[20]

According to the SCF, the gap in wealth between families with children at the bottom and the top of the distribution has been growing steadily over the past 24 years, but that pace has accelerated recently. Figure 8 shows that the median wealth for families with children in the lower half of the wealth distribution fell from $13,000 in 2007 to $8,000 in 2013, after adjusting for inflation, a loss of 40 percent.[21] These wealth levels look small alongside the much higher wealth of the next 45 percent of households with children. But these families also saw their median wealth fall dramatically--by one-third in real terms--from $344,000 in 2007 to $229,000 in 2013. The top 5 percent of families with children saw their median wealth fall only 9 percent, from $3.5 million in 2007 to $3.2 million in 2013, after inflation.

For families below the top, public funding plays an important role in providing resources to children that influence future levels of income and wealth. Such funding has the potential to help equalize these resources and the opportunities they confer.

Social safety-net spending is an important form of public funding that helps offset disparities in family resources for children. Spending for income security programs since 1989 and until recently was fairly stable, ranging between 1.2 and 1.7 percent of gross domestic product (GDP), with higher levels in this range related to recessions. However, such spending rose to 2.4 percent of GDP in 2009 and 3 percent in 2010.[22] Researchers estimate that the increase in the poverty rate because of the recession would have been much larger without the effects of income security programs.[23]

Public funding of education is another way that governments can help offset the advantages some households have in resources available for children. One of the most consequential examples is early childhood education. Research shows that children from lower-income households who get good-quality pre-Kindergarten education are more likely to graduate from high school and attend college as well as hold a job and have higher earnings, and they are less likely to be incarcerated or receive public assistance.[24] Figure 9 shows that access to quality early childhood education has improved since the 1990s, but it remains limited--41 percent of children were enrolled in state or federally supported programs in 2013. Gains in enrollment have stalled since 2010, as has growth in funding, in both cases because of budget cuts related to the Great Recession. These cuts have reduced per-pupil spending in state-funded programs by 12 percent after inflation, and access to such programs, most of which are limited to lower-income families, varies considerably from state to state and within states, since local funding is often important.[25] In 2010, the United States ranked 28th out of 38 advanced countries in the share of four-year-olds enrolled in public or private early childhood education.[26]

Similarly, the quality and the funding levels of public education at the primary and secondary levels vary widely, and this unevenness limits public education's equalizing effect. The United States is one of the few advanced economies in which public education spending is often lower for students in lower-income households than for students in higher-income households.[27] Some countries strive for more or less equal funding, and others actually require higher funding in schools serving students from lower-income families, expressly for the purpose of reducing inequality in resources for children.

A major reason the United States is different is that we are one of the few advanced nations that funds primary and secondary public education mainly through subnational taxation. Half of U.S. public school funding comes from local property taxes, a much higher share than in other advanced countries, and thus the inequalities in housing wealth and income I have described enhance the ability of more-affluent school districts to spend more on public schools. Some states have acted to equalize spending to some extent in recent years, but there is still significant variation among and within states. Even after adjusting for regional differences in costs and student needs, there is wide variation in public school funding in the United States.[28]

Spending is not the only determinant of outcomes in public education. Research shows that higher-quality teachers raise the educational attainment and the future earnings of students.[29] Better-quality teachers can help equalize some of the disadvantages in opportunity faced by students from lower-income households, but here, too, there are forces that work against raising teacher quality for these students. Research shows that, for a variety of reasons, including inequality in teacher pay, the best teachers tend to migrate to and concentrate in schools in higher-income areas.[30] Even within districts and in individual schools, where teacher pay is often uniform based on experience, factors beyond pay tend to lead more experienced and better-performing teachers to migrate to schools and to classrooms with more-advantaged students.[31]

Higher Education that Families Can Afford

For many individuals and families, higher education is the other cornerstone of economic opportunity. The premium in lifetime earnings because of higher education has increased over the past few decades, reflecting greater demand for college-educated workers. By one measure, the median annual earnings of full-time workers with a four-year bachelor's degree are 79 percent higher than the median for those with only a high school diploma.[32] The wage premium for a graduate degree is significantly higher than the premium for a college degree. Despite escalating costs for college, the net returns for a degree are high enough that college still offers a considerable economic opportunity to most people.[33]

Along with other data, the SCF shows that most students and their families are having a harder time affording college. College costs have risen much faster than income for the large majority of households since 2001 and have become especially burdensome for households in the bottom half of the earnings distribution.

Rising college costs, the greater numbers of students pursuing higher education, and the recent trends in income and wealth have led to a dramatic increase in student loan debt. Outstanding student loan debt quadrupled from $260 billion in 2004 to $1.1 trillion this year. Sorting families by wealth, the SCF shows that the relative burden of education debt has long been higher for families with lower net worth, and that this disparity has grown much wider in the past couple decades. Figure 10 shows that from 1995 to 2013, outstanding education debt grew from 26 percent of average yearly income for the lower half of households to 58 percent of income.[34] The education debt burden was lower and grew a little less sharply for the next 45 percent of families and was much lower and grew not at all for the top 5 percent.[35]

Higher education has been and remains a potent source of economic opportunity in America, but I fear the large and growing burden of paying for it may make it harder for many young people to take advantage of the opportunity higher education offers.

Opportunities to Build Wealth through Business Ownership

For many people, the opportunity to build a business has long been an important part of the American dream. In addition to housing and financial assets, the SCF shows that ownership of private businesses is a significant source of wealth and can be a vital source of opportunity for many households to improve their economic circumstances and position in the wealth distribution.

While business wealth is highly concentrated at the top of the distribution, it also represents a significant component of wealth for some other households.[36] Figure 11 shows that slightly more than half of the top 5 percent of households have a share in a private business. The average value of these holdings is nearly $4 million. Only 14 percent of families in the next 45 have ownership in a private business, but for those that do, this type of wealth constitutes a substantial portion of their assets--the average amount of this business equity is nearly $200,000, representing more than one-third of their net worth. Only 3 percent of the bottom half of households hold equity in a private business, but it is a big share of wealth for those few.[37] The average amount of this wealth is close to $20,000, 60 percent of the average net worth for these households.[38]

Owning a business is risky, and most new businesses close within a few years. But research shows that business ownership is associated with higher levels of economic mobility.[39] However, it appears that it has become harder to start and build businesses. The pace of new business creation has gradually declined over the past couple of decades, and the number of new firms declined sharply from 2006 through 2009.[40] The latest SCF shows that the percentage of the next 45 that own a business has fallen to a 25-year low, and equity in those businesses, adjusted for inflation, is at its lowest point since the mid-1990s. One reason to be concerned about the apparent decline in new business formation is that it may serve to depress the pace of productivity, real wage growth, and employment.[41] Another reason is that a slowdown in business formation may threaten what I believe likely has been a significant source of economic opportunity for many families below the very top in income and wealth.

Inheritances

Along with other economic advantages, it is likely that large inheritances play a role in the fairly limited intergenerational mobility that I described earlier.[42] But inheritances are also common among households below the top of the wealth distribution and sizable enough that I believe they may well play a role in helping these families economically.

Figure 12 shows that half of the top 5 percent of households by wealth reported receiving an inheritance at some time, but a considerable number of others did as well--almost 30 percent of the next 45 percent and 12 percent of the bottom 50. Inheritances are concentrated at the top of the wealth distribution but less so than total wealth. Just over half of the total value of inheritances went to the top 5 percent and

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

40 percent went to households in the next 45. Seven percent of inheritances were shared among households in the bottom 50 percent, a group that together held only 1 percent of all wealth in 2013.[43]

The average inheritance reported by those in the top 5 percent who had received them was $1.1 million. That amount dwarfs the $183,000 average among the next 45 percent and the $68,000 reported among the bottom half of households. But compared with the typical wealth of these households, the additive effect of bequests of this size is significant for the millions of households below the top 5 that receive them.

The average age for receiving an inheritance is 40, when many parents are trying to save for and secure the opportunities of higher education for their children, move up to a larger home or one in a better neighborhood, launch a business, switch careers, or perhaps relocate to seek more opportunity. Considering the overall picture of limited resources for most families that I have described today, I think the effects of inheritances for the sizable minority below the top that receive one are likely a significant source of economic opportunity.

Conclusion

In closing, let me say that, with these examples, I have only just touched the surface of the important topic of economic opportunity, and I look forward to learning more from the work presented at this conference. As I noted at the outset, research about the causes and implications of inequality is ongoing, and I hope that this conference helps spur further study of economic opportunity and its effects on economic mobility. Using the SCF and other sources, I have tried to offer some observations about how access to four specific sources of opportunity may vary across households, but I cannot offer any conclusions about how much these factors influence income and wealth inequality. I do believe that these are important questions, and I hope that further research will help answer them.

Subject: Sign our Supreme Court petition: President Obama, nominate a progressive woman of color

Dear Friend,

On Tuesday, Senator Mitch McConnell announced that there would be no hearing or vote -- not even a cordial meeting -- on any Supreme Court nominee that President Obama presents. All of the Republicans in the Senate Judiciary Committee signed off on a letter approving of this obstruction.

Republicans are undermining President Obama's constitutional right to choose a Supreme Court justice nominee. This only underscores how -- historically and throughout President Obama's presidency -- conservatives have worked to prevent social progress at every level of government.

The ferocity of the opposition on the right wing to President Obama's expected nominee stems from the very real understanding that this nomination represents a breaking of the dam holding back the demographic and social change that has been surging into society over the past 50 years.

After centuries of racial and gender exclusion, America has a lot of catching up to do. Since the creation of the Supreme Court in 1789, America has had 112 justices, and 106 have been white men.

That's exactly why President Obama should nominate a progressive woman of color.

We don't have much time. Please join me in signing this urgent petition asking President Obama to pick a progressive woman of color for the Supreme Court.

For the past 45 years, the conservative majority on the U.S. Supreme Court has worked diligently to hold back the full force and impact of the demographic changes becoming manifest in America's modern, multi-racial society.

At every step of the way, the forces hostile to the browning of America have turned to the Supreme Court. Over the past five decades, those forces have found at least five justices willing to be a co-conspirator to block and roll back progress towards equality and justice.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Over the past decade, the Court has undermined the Voting Rights Act in its Shelby decision. It weakened affirmative action programs in its Schuette decision. It turned loose the power of big money in its Citizens United decision.

The stakes of the current appointment are especially high given what's presently on the docket. Cases that could affirm President Obama's executive order protecting millions of immigrants, undercut the ability of unions to collect fees from the beneficiaries of their collective bargaining efforts, and dilute the voting power of people of color are all pending before the Supreme Court. And in the years ahead, the stakes are equally high.

Demands for equality have historically come from communities of color, women, the LGBTQ community, workers, and many other marginalized groups of people. A Supreme Court justice who helps the court reflect the demographics of our country would be a major step forward in balancing the historical scales.

Given the enormous impact on the future direction of the country, President Obama should choose a progressive woman who comes from and deeply understands communities of color in our country. Please sign the petition to President Obama today.

In a recent SCOTUSblog article, President Obama implicitly illustrated his commitment to choosing a nominee who understands the "the daily reality of people's lives":

> "That's why [a quality] I seek in a judge is a keen understanding that justice is not about abstract legal theory, nor some footnote in a dusty casebook. It's the kind of life experience earned outside the classroom and the courtroom; experience that suggests he or she views the law not only as an intellectual exercise, but also grasps the way it affects the daily reality of people's lives in a big, complicated democracy, and in rapidly changing times. That, I believe, is an essential element for arriving at just decisions and fair outcomes… An understanding of the way the world really works."

Right now, the daily reality of people's lives is clearly not reflected on the Supreme Court.

Women of color -- particularly Black women and Latinas -- have suffered the most from the conservative Supreme Court majority and Antonin Scalia's right-wing decisions. When the Supreme Court limits access to abortion, rolls back voting rights, and sides with corporations over people, it is women of color who face the most intense injustice.

That is why our president should unapologetically nominate a proud progressive woman of color who comes from and is committed to the complete inclusion and empowerment of our country's growing communities of color -- whose very presence will help correct the centuries-old gender and racial imbalance on the court.

This is a defining moment. Please let President Obama know he should honor the struggle of those who have gone before and leave a legacy for those who will come after by appointing a strong progressive woman of color as the next justice of the Supreme Court.

Thank you for helping overturn the Supreme Court's legacy of injustice and inequality.

Subject: [big campaign] Re: Did it work?

Here is the original BNA clip for those who want it.

Independent Expenditures
Anti-Obama Group's Future Plans Unclear;
Others Spending on Issue Ads for Hill Races

The American Issues Project-- a "qualified nonprofit corporation," or QNC--that emerged into the spotlight in August with television ads blasting Democratic presidential nominee Sen. Barack Obama (D-Ill.)--has no "concrete plans" for further action during the presidential campaign, according to the organization's president, Ed Martin.

While the group's plans are uncertain, Martin told BNA in a recent phone interview that the American Issues Project would "be around for the long haul" and would not fold up shop after drawing attention with the anti-Obama ads.

Martin said possible future avenues of activity could include "more generic" types of ads related to the issues that concern the group, such as national security. He also hinted that the group could still sponsor more messages related to the presidential race.

The American Issues Project paid $2.8 million for over 7,000 airings of an ad linking Obama to a 1960s radical, William Ayers, and asking viewers if they "know enough to elect" the Democratic presidential candidate. The ads were aired in late August on local TV stations in four key battleground states in the presidential contest: Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Virginia, the group said in a press release announcing that the ad campaign had wrapped up.

QNC Rule Allows Advocacy

The QNC designation allowed the American Issues Project to take advantage of a Federal Election Commission rule (11 CFR 114.10) permitting "independent expenditures" for direct advocacy for or against a candidate's election.

However, the Obama campaign quickly and forcefully disputed the legitimacy of the newly revealed group's efforts. The campaign argued that the rule in question was intended to protect issue-based groups with only a minor interest in electoral politics. The American Issues Project, on the contrary, was an organization unveiled with the clear purpose of conducting a multi-million-dollar ad campaign to influence the presidential race, the Obama campaign charged.

The American Issues Campaign has argued that it is a conservative organization mainly interested in such issues as national security, the economy, and family values.

So far, only a relative handful of other QNCs have been active in the current election cycle, though another group in this category recently made its presence known through a Sept. 4 FEC filing.

The conservative religious group Focus on the Family Action, headed by influential radio commentator James Dobson, filed a report with the FEC indicating that it was a QNC under campaign finance law. Focus on the Family disclosed that it was spending about $40,000 for a radio broadcast of a "2008 issues update" that supported Republican presidential nominee Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.).

Chamber, AFL-CIO Report Spending

While the American Issues Project ad campaign was the most visible foray by an independent group into the presidential campaign, so far, other groups also have reported significant spending on broadcast ads appearing in congressional races, including key Senate races. These include major business and labor organizations, such as the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and AFL-CIO, which are spending for ads airing in about a half-dozen races.

Both the Chamber and the AFL-CIO have filed new reports with the FEC disclosing recent spending for "electioneering communications"--television or radio ads that mention a federal candidate in the weeks before an election. Ads that air within the period 60 days before the Nov. 4 general election or 30 before a primary are covered by provisions of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act, which restrict financing of such messages and require public disclosure.

Recent reports from the Chamber, AFL-CIO and others reveal that they are taking advantage of an FEC rule (11 CFR 114.15) adopted late last year, in the wake of the Supreme Court decision in FEC v. Wisconsin Right to Life Inc. (WRTL). The WRTL decision and FEC rule established that corporations and unions have a constitutional right to pay for ads that mention candidates along with lobbying messages on legislative and policy issues.

The Supreme Court's majority opinion in WRTL, authored by Chief Justice John Roberts, said the corporate and union financing ban could apply only to messages capable of no other reasonable interpretation than as an appeal to vote for or against a candidate.

The FEC's 2007 rule implementing the WRTL decision fleshed out this concept by indicating that corporate and union financing of a particular message could still be regulated if the message refers to an election or to the "character" of a candidate. Otherwise, a message focusing on a legislative or policy matter and urging a candidate to take a particular position may be funded by a corporation or union, though the funding source must be reported, the FEC regulations said.

States With Senate Races Targeted

Citing the new rule, the Chamber has reported nearly $1.6 million in spending for TV ads in six states, focused on Senate races in Louisiana, New Hampshire, and Minnesota, as well as a House race in Wisconsin. The ads are part of a larger advocacy effort centered on the election--the Chamber has put a price tag of $20 million on the overall effort. But details of the Chamber's ad campaign and strategy are not being revealed, according to J.P. Fielder, a spokesman for the Chamber.

Meanwhile, the AFL-CIO has reported to the FEC nearly $100,000 in spending for radio ads in just two states with Senate races--New Hampshire and Louisiana. These ads are part of a larger campaign by the labor federation involving six states with key Senate races, according to federation spokesman Steve Smith. The states are New Hampshire, Oregon, Louisiana, Maine, Kentucky, and Minnesota.

AFL-CIO officials have suggested that the federation is preparing to spend over $50 million on election-related efforts, mostly centered on communication with union members and mobilization of voters rather that broadcasting messages to the general public.

Both the Chamber and AFL-CIO ads appear similar in that they mention specific candidates in the context of advocacy for legislative or policy positions. For example, AFL-CIO ads criticize incumbent Republican senators for supporting President Bush's proposed budget cuts for health care, education, and job training. A Chamber ad, meanwhile, faults Democratic Senate candidates for backing legislation that would aid union organizing by dispensing with requirements for secret ballots when workers vote on whether to form a union.

New Groups Sponsor Ads

Other organizations reporting electioneering communications spending to the FEC are not as well known as the Chamber and AFL-CIO but have cited the same new FEC rules allowing corporate and union funding of their messages. These include such organizations as the American Future Fund, American Rights at Work, and the Alliance for a Better Minnesota, all of which have sponsored recent, hard-hitting television ads focused on Senate candidates' stance on particular issues.

The ads do not ask for votes or explicitly discuss elections but instead generally ask the viewer to call the targeted candidate and ask him or her to vote or take a stand on the highlighted issue.

Robert Lenhard, an attorney with the firm Covington & Burling, was chairman of the FEC last year when the regulations implementing the Supreme Court's WRTL decision were adopted. Lenhard said the FEC rulemaking was an attempt by the agency to follow the principles of Chief Justice Roberts' opinion allowing corporations and unions to fund electioneering communications. The regulations still do not allow companies and unions to pay for "express advocacy" messages that call for voters to elect or defeat favored candidates, he noted.

QNCs Have Drawbacks

Unlike the organizations reporting spending for electioneering communications, those like the American Issues Project and Focus on the Family, which cite the QNC exception to campaign finance rules, can potentially have a way to avoid the toughest restrictions of campaign finance rules.

The FEC rule governing these groups was adopted to implement a 1986 Supreme Court opinion in FEC v. Massachusetts Citizens for Life, which said an issue-based nonprofit corporation could advocate in elections under certain, narrow circumstances.

Despite the potential advantages of this category, very few QNCs have registered with the FEC or reported major spending in the presidential race or congressional races. None has come close to the reported spending level of the American Issues Project or sponsored high-profile TV ads. Rather, money has gone for such efforts as direct mail, phone banks, door-to-door canvassing, or newspaper and online ads.

Asked why there has not been more of a migration of campaign related spending to this category, campaign finance experts note that there are still important restrictions on QNCs. For example, tax laws restrict the campaign involvement non-profit corporations organized under Section 501(c)(4) of the tax code. Generally, an organization must spend no more than half its budget on politics to maintained the coveted 501(c)(4) designation.

Also, QNCs have limited funding sources because they cannot keep the designation if they take money from for-profit companies or unions--a restriction that can severely limit financing of expensive broadcast ad campaigns.End of article graphic

This is a piece of Goldman research on the current state of the US economy that will probably get some pick-up. The WSJ is writing on it this evening and will probably publish tonight on line.

Might want to pass along to the economic team. I suspect Democrats will appreciate the part that talks about how smaller firms are being left behind by big companies. Republicans will seize on the paper's thesis that regulation has contributed to widening that differential.

LEAGUE OF CONSERVATION VOTERS

Dear John,

The next few hours could be a double win for our fight to pass clean energy and climate legislation before this year's pivotal elections.

Time is running out to raise $35,507 to reach our matching gift goal by midnight TONIGHT. For only a few more hours, your gift will be matched dollar for dollar by generous donors.

John, now that the Supreme Court is letting Big Oil spend unlimited funds to kick our friends out of Congress, we can't pass up this opportunity to push clean energy forward NOW, before Big Oil ramps up its campaign of lies in an attempt to distort the public's view on clean energy.

Unless we raise $35,507 by midnight, we'll have to scale back our fight against Big Oil at the ballot box this fall.

Our pro-environment champions are counting on us to come through in these last critical hours – please don't wait!

Have your gift MATCHED by midnight TONIGHT!

Please don't wait a minute longer. Have your gift matched now to help LCV fight TWICE as hard to pass clean energy and climate legislation before this year's elections!

If we can't meet our goal, LCV may be forced to scale back crucial efforts to support clean energy and climate legislation in the districts of on-the-fence Senators – efforts like paid ads, voter education and grassroots lobbying that have proven to cement wavering votes in the past.

Without your support, LCV will have to scale back these key initiatives in 2010:

- Creating a powerful media presence on television, radio, and the internet. Use these outlets to deliver research-driven messages proven to show the public why clean energy is key to job growth.
- Driving massive public education campaigns in the districts that matter – including door-to-door canvassing, phone banks, and targeted mail.
- Telling constituents exactly where their Senators stand on clean energy – and why passing clean energy is key to creating new jobs and reducing our dependence on foreign oil.
- Bolstering environmental support at the state level – supporting pro-conservation governors and building pro-conservation majorities in state houses.

If we can count on you to help us take advantage of this critical matching opportunity, LCV has the savvy, the passion, and the grassroots muscle to use each dollar more efficiently and effectively than Big Oil.

Don't let this opportunity pass us by. Give before midnight TONIGHT, and your gift will be matched, dollar for dollar, up to $60,000.

Don't wait. Taking full advantage of this rare opportunity is critical to our success – and to the planet's future.

Sincerely,

Gene Karpinski
President

Friends-

In advance of tonight's GOP debate, attached are talking points that we hope you'll find useful.

I also wanted to share several products our digital team produced, including www.GOPABCs.com , a website laying out the "ABCs" of the most outrageous things the Republicans have said since the last debate. Also, check out the latest video produced by our team titled, Previously on the Last Presidential Candidate Apprentice: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Sazj9SSpoTg&feature=youtu.be

During the debate Hillary for America will host phone banks in early states and nearly 100 Women for Hillary Debate Watch Parties will take place across the country.

For the latest updates during the debate, follow @TheBriefing2016 on Twitter.

Finally, we will host a call for surrogates near the end of the debate tonight, and will send an update later today regarding the timing and details of that call.

Thank you ! As always, please let me know if you have any questions.

Best -

Progress Texas Stands Strong With Texas Women

Stand With Texas Women Rally

Despite the amazing work of Senator Wendy Davis and the hundreds of Texans that protested the anti-abortion bill last week, Governor Rick Perry called another special session with renewed intentions of passing the bill. The special session started this past Monday, July 1st, and to mark the occasion thousands of Texans joined together to show their opposition to the attack on women's reproductive rights. More than 8,000 people gathered outside the Capitol for the Stand With Texas Women Rally organized by a coalition of progressive groups including Planned Parenthood, NARAL, Progress Texas, and many more.

As a part of the rapid response social media team Progress Texas made sure to capture the action and spread it far and wide. This photo of the crowd from the 4th floor of the Capitol has 2,932 likes and 3,268 shares. Facebook metrics show that 282,368 have seen the post. Progress Texas's photos were used widely and in particular were featured on MSNBC via Chris Hayes's show last Friday.
For those who weren't able to attend the rally in person, they have provided a transcript of the speech given by Senator Wendy Davis. To add to your July 4th barbecue conversations, we have published highlights of the Stand With Texas Women's movement here .

On the morning that Senator Wendy Davis launched her filibuster, Progress Texas initiated a "Thank You Wendy Davis" campaign to offer people a chance to show their support. The organization collected 12,471 support messages during the filibuster – nearly 1,000 messages an hour – and delivered those messages to Senator Davis's office. Through this campaign Progress Texas has given supporters in Texas and across the country the chance to thank the Senator and join the fight to protect women's rights.

Progress Virginia Highlights Conservatives Effort to Restrict Women's Rights

One year ago, legislation went into effect that requires women seeking an abortion to undergo a mandatory ultrasound and then wait 24 hours before she can have a legal abortion. This law was clearly designed to restrict access to safe abortions and has given the government the opportunity to play the role of doctor, even though this should be a women's personal health decision. Progress Virginia marked the one-year anniversary by challenging state legislators to support repeal of the law. Working with medical providers and Planned Parenthood Advocates of Virginia, Progress Virginia highlighted state legislators who think they make better doctors than actual physicians. Progress Virginia is working to inform voters of politicians who put their own beliefs above those of medical practitioners as well as their constituents.

Additionally, the Progress Virginia Education Fund is working in a coalition with women's health advocates to educate voters on the deceptive "medical clinics" known as Crisis Pregnancy Centers (CPCs). CPCs are essentially fake medical practices that seek to dissuade women from obtaining abortions under the guise of providing health advice. Progress Virginia assisted NARAL Pro-Choice Virginia in debuting a new investigative report Crisis Pregnancy Centers Revealed . The shocking report finds the Virginia Department of Health refers Virginia women to 18 CPCs to obtain a free or low-cost ultrasound. Many of those CPCs have indicated they will refuse to provide an ultrasound image to women seeking an abortion, so they cannot comply with the law. Progress Virginia worked with NARAL VA to design a press rollout and social media campaign to make sure every Virginian knows how conservatives and CPCs are working together to limit women's constitutional rights.

ProgressOhio Responds to Governor Kasich's Harmful Budget

Throughout the legislative session, ProgressOhio has worked tirelessly to educate voters about Governor John Kasich's budget and the harsh abortion restrictions that would go into effect. This included a series of press conferences with NARAL Ohio and Planned Parenthood Advocates of Ohio to question the attack on women's rights. Additionally executive director, Brian Rothenberg, discussed the issue on NBC4i's The Spectrum and WOSU-TV's Columbus on the Record.

Despite, the efforts of ProgressOhio and allies, Governor Kasich signed the budget on June 30th. The provisions enacted will make it more difficult for family planning groups such as Planned Parenthood to receive funding for preventative care, women seeking an abortion will be required to undergo an ultrasound, and abortion providers' ability to get transfer agreements with public hospitals will be severely limited. Also, thousands of Ohio women will now be unable to receive crucial cancer screenings or annual check-ups. The controversial budget also undermines crisis and rape centers, leading Progress Ohio to ask…"who does Kasich work for?"

The Governor seems to have forgotten that he works for all Ohioans, including women. However, ProgressOhio intends to remind the Governor that his actions will not be forgotten. What happens in 2013, will be remembered in 2014. By educating and engaging voters, ProgressOhio will show Governor Kasich that this attack on women's rights will cost him votes. By donating to the "Help Kasich Remember" campaign, you can be sure to send the message loud and clear.

There is a post-NH poll out with Huck in third behind McCain and Romney (29/20/18). Strategic Vision I think.

Still, agree that Huck is more likely than Romney at this point.

Subject: Update - Kitchen Call Tour Begins

Joe Sestak for Senate

Dear John,

I hope you had a wonderful New Year. Pennsylvania needs new leadership for a new decade and the opening weeks of 2010 will be the most important of our campaign as we take our message of principle and accountability across the Commonwealth.

Click To Play Video

In Scranton and Bucks County, we've held the first of an ongoing series of "Kitchen Calls," where I meet with local residents to discuss the issues and challenges most important to them. These meetings are modeled after the "Captain's Calls" I used to conduct in the Navy, when I would go around and talk to the crew members of the ships under my command. If you want to know what's going on a ship, you don't just ask the officers, you go right to the crew. If you want to know the biggest concerns in the homes of our working middle class families, you don't hold a hearing in Washington, you go right to the people.

Joe speaks at the Bucks County Kitchen Call

The message we're bringing is one of honesty, integrity, and effectiveness. That means you can count on me to take a clear stand on the issues, base my decision on the merits and not politics, and work hard until we get results.

We're going to bring to all of Pennsylvania the work we've done in my District, where we've worked diligently to make government more accessible and responsive to the people, helped small businesses grow by improving access to federal contracts, encouraged educational innovation to prepare students for real-world success, and where we continue to partner with local leaders to meet the challenges of difficult times.

Here are just a few of the issues we've discussed at the Kitchen Calls we've held so far:

Joe answers questions at the Westmoreland Kitchen Call

Green Energy Manufacturing Creates Jobs. My grandfather was a steelworker in Coatesville. I know that our Commonwealth's industrial base and proud manufacturing tradition can allow us to be a leader in the green infrastructure revolution. For example, a shuttered steel mill in Bucks County has been repurposed to make wind turbines and now employs hundreds of unionized steel workers. At a Green Jobs Training Program recently, I met again with a local entrepreneur who owns Community Energy, the first wind power company east of the Mississippi. That entrepreneur and his partner were actually forced to initially sell their company to a Spanish firm in 2006 because our policies made it so American-owned renewable energy companies simply weren't viable. Recent changes, including the House passage of a green jobs bill, have convinced him that American companies can thrive in this booming industry. He and his partners have again struck out on their own and are providing Pennsylvania jobs at a Pennsylvania-owned company.

Marcellus Shale Natural Gas Development. The Marcellus Shale is one of the largest natural gas deposits in the world. It stretches beneath much of Pennsylvania, from Greene County to Erie to the Delaware Water Gap. Development of this resource can bring much needed tax relief, good jobs, and renewed economic opportunities across the state, and we must take full advantage of it. As we go forward, however, I propose we adhere to one firm principle: Pennsylvania's natural resources belong to Pennsylvania, and they should be utilized in a way that provides the best long-term benefit for our citizens. That's why I've cosponsored federal legislation to close the "Halliburton Loophole" -- supported by Arlen Specter -- which allows gas drilling to ignore safeguards and has contributed to drinking water contamination in seven Pennsylvania counties.

Please join me in at one of our upcoming Kitchen Calls in Erie, Bethlehem, Butler County, and Pittsburgh. Let me know what's on your mind. And let's focus on moving forward together to rebuild Pennsylvania.

Other important initiatives I've been working on:

Strengthening Health Care Reform: I joined members of Health Care for America Now (HCAN) at a rally in Philadelphia to help ensure that the best possible health insurance reform bill is sent to President Obama's desk. I have outlined a number of key areas in which the Senate version can and should be improved: The inclusion of a public option, or something that achieves its purpose in lowering the cost of health care by providing individuals a choice aside from private insurers that dictate prices while often denying access to desperately needed care; a real employer mandate that recognizes health insurance as a shared responsibility between individuals, employers, and country; sufficient federal assistance to ensure that health insurance is affordable for lower income families; removal of the disproportionate burden on working families in the Senate bill, which relies heavily on a tax on high-cost insurance plans that will affect one in five workers by 2016.

School Food Safety: I have introduced new legislation to protect the 31 million children who receive food through the National School Lunch Program after a report by the Government Accountability Office (GAO) revealed that federal agencies are not properly communicating recalls to schools. Read more here.

Heating Assistance: Governor Rendell has responded to my urging to properly fund the state's LIHEAP heating assistance program by taking some important steps. Read more here.

Dear Colleagues,

I want to recommend the paper and the talk on the Sacco and Vanzetti case next Tuesday by Brad Snyder, who is visiting with us this year. I like to think of myself as an archive rat who knows a thing or two about Felix Frankfurter and Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr., but Brad makes me look like a piker. The paper begins with a one-page cover memo that says what's new about this chapter and the book it's taken from and suggests why both matter.

This is very similar to the Fast Food workers campaign which HRC has weighed in on, its just Walmart and not McDonalds. I do believe when she meets with UFCW she will be asked this directly, so to get ahead of that I wanted to propose a proactive tweet to address.

Subject:	Reality

Dear John,

Speaker Boehner and the House Republicans are pursuing an agenda that is so extreme, so divorced from reality, it's clear they have no intention of delivering the economic relief the American people need.

We've already had to fight off their efforts to repeal health care reform, undermine women's health, and weaken environmental protections. I can only imagine what's in store.

Now more than ever, we need to prepare for the fight that's coming in 2012 and we need to start now. We need a wave of grassroots resolve and the resources to keep this campaign running strong. That's why I need you to give before the February 28 deadline.

We were so successful in last year's election because we started early and maintained our focus. I know we can succeed again if we stick with that winning formula.

Click here to make your donation of $250, $500 or more to my campaign before the February 28 deadline. We need to get ready now for the big fight in 2012.

President Obama and Congressional Democrats are working to find solutions to the problems we face, looking for ways to revitalize our economy and bring new jobs to the people who need them so desperately.

Meanwhile, the Republicans are intent on thwarting those efforts. They're pushing through a hard right agenda that caters to the extreme right wing of their party, rather than an agenda that improves life for all Americans.

The only way we can move forward with our progressive agenda is if we beat the Republicans in 2012, and the only way I can do that is with your help. I've always depended on grassroots supporters like you to carry me to victory—and you've always come through. Please, help me once again by giving whatever you can today.

Click here to contribute $250, $500 or more to my campaign before the February 28 deadline and let's make sure we have the resources to win in 2012.

Starting now, my potential opponents will be looking carefully for any sign of weakness. Help me show them that my campaign will be as strong in 2012 as it was in 2010.

Sincerely,

Kirsten Gillibrand

Help Us Protect Our Water And Our Health

Hello Mary,

Make A Stand For Clean Water

Clean water isn't a luxury. It's a right. Help us make sure our waters are protected.

GRAPHIC: Donate button

Last week we told you that Congress is debating new changes that would strip the EPA of its authority to enforce the laws that protect our water, our air and our health. Many of you responded by making a donation to support our campaign. If you've already made a contribution, thank you...if not, we need your support now, more than ever!

The budget bill being considered in Congress has several provisions that would limit the EPA's ability to protect our water. One would prevent EPA from taking action to restore protection for small streams and wetlands. That would leave the drinking water of 117 million Americans at risk of contamination.

There are also hundreds of proposed amendments that would make the bill even worse, limiting the EPA's ability to control toxic mercury emissions, regulate drilling for oil off our coasts or even just study the effects of climate change.

Please help us fight for clean water by sending a donation of $36, $60, $120, or more - today. Your contribution will help Clean Water Action make sure that our Representatives and Senators know that we can't afford to play politics with our water and our health.

Congress should be urging the EPA onward, advancing new protections for our water. Instead, it's debating how to weaken the laws and increase profits for polluters at the expense of our health and the clean water on which we all depend.

With your help Mary, we can stop these attacks and tell our legislators to strengthen, not weaken, protection of our drinking water.

Please join me in making a stand for clean water. Make your online donation now. Help us fight the threats to our water before it's too late.

Yours for Clean Water,

Bob Wendelgass, President
Clean Water Action

P.S. Polluters are spending millions of dollars to weaken our clean water laws Please make your gift today so we can fight back!

TALKING POINTS: HILLARY CLINTON: CHAMPION OF EQUAL PAY

Secretary Clinton's record on equal pay is an insight into her core values – her belief that every American, regardless of gender, should be able to earn an equal day's pay for an equal day's work. By virtue of hard work and fair play, all Americans should have the opportunity to live the American Dream.

Hillary Clinton Pushed for Equal Pay Legislation:

- In the Senate, Hillary Clinton championed the fight for paycheck fairness, introducing the Paycheck Fairness Act in 2005 and 2007 to help prevent and eliminate paycheck discrimination.

- Senator Clinton fought to expand workers' rights to take pay discrimination issues to court. She was an original co-sponsor of the Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act.

Hillary Clinton Bypassed Congress to Fight for Pay Equity:

- Senator Clinton worked directly with young women to help them be paid equally for equal work. Senator Clinton published a guide for young professional women on getting equal pay, titled, "Know How to Ask & Know Your Rights: A Pay Equity Guide on How to Help Yourself in the Workplace."

- Senator Clinton pushed the Bush Administration to enforce equal pay laws by calling for an investigation into their enforcement of equal pay. The investigation found that the Bush Administration was not monitoring the enforcement of pay equity laws.

Hillary Clinton Fought for Equal Pay Worldwide:

- As First Lady, Clinton went to China and spoke forcefully about wage disparities. It was there that she famously said, "women's rights are human rights." Clinton pointed to wage inequities as a problem that needed to be solved: "Families rely on women for labor in the home; and increasingly, families rely on women for income needed to raise healthy children and care for other relatives. As long as discrimination and inequities remain so commonplace around the world - as long as girls and women are valued less, fed less, fed last, overworked, underpaid, not schooled and subjected to violence in and out of their homes - the potential of the human family to create a peaceful, prosperous world will not be realized."

- As the Secretary of State, Clinton launched the Equal Futures Partnership to fight for women's political and economic empowerment.

- Secretary Clinton asked U.S. embassies to help "unleash the potential of women to spur economic development."

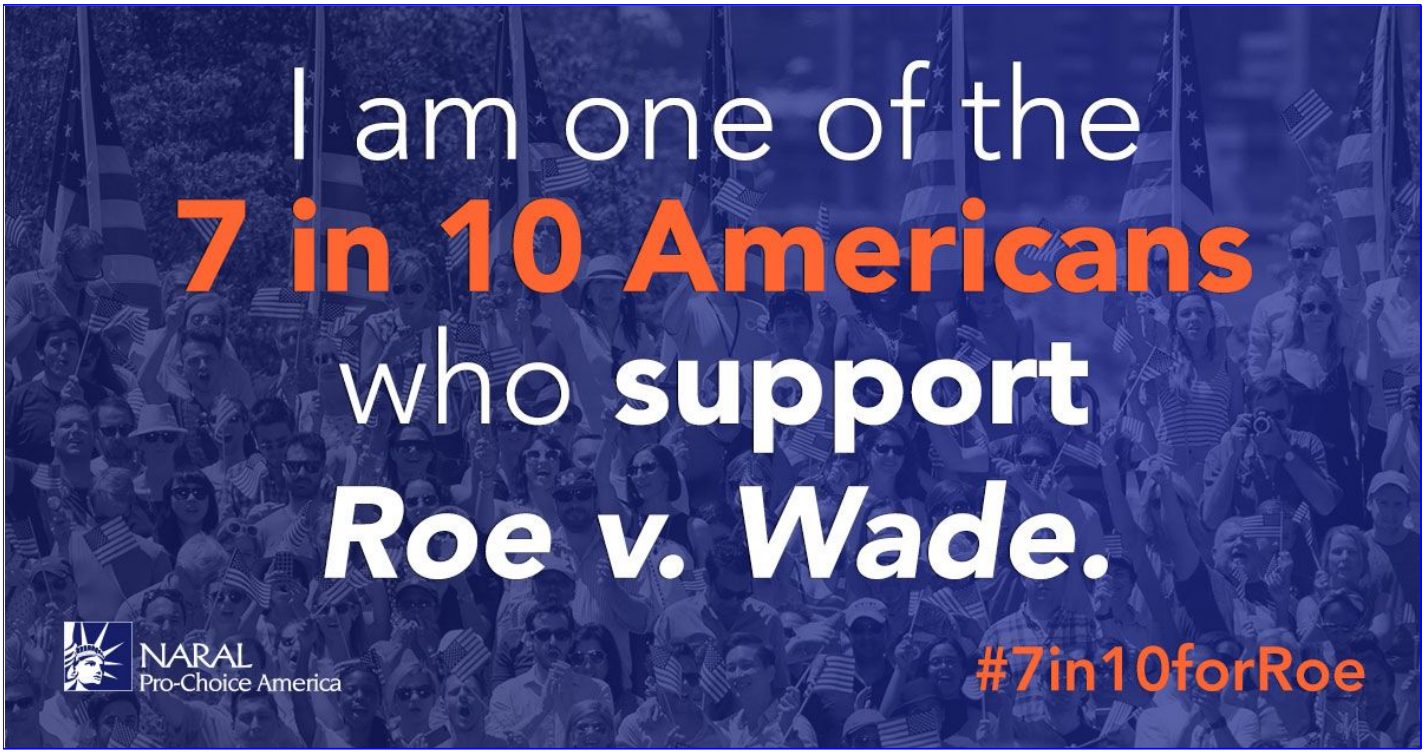
NARAL Pro-Choice America



John,

Today is the anniversary of that historic day in 1973 when the Supreme Court, in a landmark decision, affirmed abortion as a constitutionally protected right.

But you and I both know the story didn't end there.

In the 43 years since Roe v. Wade, anti-choice extremists have partnered with politicians across the country to pass wave upon wave of legislation with a singular goal: to reverse the Supreme Court's decision and make abortion so inaccessible that it's effectively illegal all over again.

Sure, those extremists are vocal. They're also the minority in this country: Polling consistently shows that 70% of Americans believe in safe and legal access to abortion. On the anniversary of Roe, will you share this graphic on Facebook to show you won't be silent in the face of these relentless attacks?

Reproductive freedom—which is key to a woman's ability to decide if, when, how and with whom to start a family—is in danger in this country.

- In 2015 alone, 22 states enacted 41 anti-choice measures.
- 23 states have anti-choice governments, where the state governor & majority of legislature are anti-choice.
- 29 states have measures that prohibit insurance plans from covering abortion.
- 32 states and D.C. impose restrictions on low-income women's access to abortion.[1]

Every Roe anniversary that passes is another reminder that too much is at stake to say silent. Click here to share the above graphic on Facebook today and help spread the message of the pro-choice majority.

Teachers union says DPS blocked its health inspectors

Officials from Detroit's teachers union blasted Detroit Public Schools on Wednesday after the district blocked the union's environmental experts from investigating possible mold growth, water damage and other problems inside nine schools.

"Our members are demanding that we give them specific answers as to what's going on in their schools," Ivy Bailey, interim president of the Detroit Federation of Teachers, said at a news conference outside Spain-Elementary Middle School.

AFT sues Detroit schools over decrepit conditions

Mold, rodents and water-damaged ceilings were among the unsafe classroom conditions cited in a recently filed lawsuit against the Detroit Public Schools by the American Federation of Teachers-Michigan, the Detroit Federation of Teachers and parent groups. David Hecker, the president of the AFT-Michigan, said the action was taken to force the district to respond after years of neglect. The January lawsuit — and rolling teacher sick-outs — drew national attention to the long-neglected schools.

Detroit Public Schools will be completely broke by April. Here's how things got to this point.

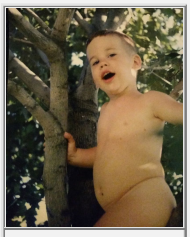
Subject: Why Backbone?

Backbone Campaign



Dear Friend --

Today is Backbone's 13th anniversary. Backbone Campaign has grown from a humble group of friends and artists conspiring over potlucks to now earn international headlines, defeat multinational corporations, and be a pillar of support to passionate change agents nation-wide. To commemorate this occasion, I thought it timely to share with you a few revelations that have occurred to me on my personal journey and why Backbone may be the perfect metaphor for what our social movements need most.

Celebrate Backbone's 13th anniversary by joining the Lumbar Club Today!

Why Backbone? A personal perspective from co-founder and E.D. Bill Moyer--

As a rugrat I had a rebellious spirit then too.

As far back as I can remember, I always loved climbing trees. I sat in one on May 29, 1992, feeling inspired by nature's beauty and our part in it, peering over the canopy of trees padding the landscape and the birds flitting from tree top to tree top. After sunset, I began making my way down, but my adult weight was too much for the upper branch of the fir. It snapped. I lost my grip and fell, thinking "This could be it." That's all there was time for in my rapid 60-foot descent.

But when I hit the ground I was conscious: surprised to be alive, shocked that neither legs nor arms had broken, and amazed to have not been skewered. I attempted to stand up, but I could not manifest the idea of standing into the structure of my body as my T12, L1 and L2 vertebrae were shattered. Fear set in. I called out for help. Each call became weaker as the blood was flooding my lung cavity.

Blessedly, my friend Don Roberts was on his way to see me. He heard my call, ran to me, and then ran to get Susie his wife who comforted me while he called 911. Jason, a volunteer fireman who I knew from the lumberyard, arrived first. Others followed. They stabilized me and got me on a stretcher. On the way to the ambulance I was in a place of utter vulnerability and surrender. "I trust you God" was what came to my agnostic mind, along with the internal unconditionally loving voice of the inner parent "I love you Bill." I repeated each in turn as a mantra, a buoy of sorts.

I was delivered into the ambulance, where Stan the Vashon paramedic put a flutter valve in my chest and gave me oxygen. A helicopter was waiting in the park by the woods where we lived. Flight EMT Robyn soothed me as we flew to Harborview trauma center. My doctors there stabilized my spine with a titanium apparatus first. A week later they went through my side to extract bone from pelvis and rib cage, and combined them with fragments of the vertebrae, constructing a bridge and fused my damaged spine.

Make Backbone Strong and Stand With Us All Year Long.
Join the Lumbar Club Today!

After just two weeks I returned to Vashon. Donald and Susie had installed a hospital bed where their kitchen table had been. Their 800 square foot house somehow had room for me, along with them and the periodic presence of 3 kids and a dog. The love of friends and family, along with the special nursing care of my new love Esther, paved the way for healing of my body and transformation of my life. In the fall I returned to school to study music. (Life is too short and precious not to do what you love!)

Manifest our shared aspirations.

Join the Lumbar Club Today!

Eleven years later, some friends and I founded the Backbone Campaign. We choose the spine metaphor to displace the dismissive labels "bleeding heart" and "weak-kneed" that were often assigned to progressive-minded folks. Amazingly, it took months for me to realize that the Backbone metaphor may have jumped out at me from my own direct experience of loosing, and regaining, the power of the backbone.

Backbone is a resonant biological metaphor: as long as there have been vertebrates, there have been moments like mine under the tree. And these biological metaphors may well be anchored in our collective cellular memories.

For me, the metaphor of Backbone is more than personal courage for principled action. It's more than the natural connection between causes unified by a common array of underlying values. It is also an instructive metaphor for building Power. One way to define power is the capacity to manifest your aspirations. Today, I see the metaphor of Backbone, and my experience of being on the ground unable to get up, as an analogy for aspirations without the power to realize them. A social movements is to our collective aspirations, what a functional spine is to a creature desiring to stand up.

We can have infinite brilliant ideas or aspirations for a better world, but merely having those ideas and shouting them from the street corner to the halls of power is a waste of energy, and not much fun. It will only wear out your voice.

When training activists and organizers, I find it helpful to deconstruct the idea of "Political Calculus." It's often said that politics is the art of the possible. Elected officials and others in positions of institutional power almost always do only what is necessary to remain electable or relevant to their constituents. That's what they see as politically "possible" given the constraints of their public roles.

Build Power for "We the People."

Join Backbone's Lumbar Club Today

Calculus is the mathematics of changing variables. Our goal as agents of change is not to ask politicians or power holders for favors -- which in any case never works -- but to shift what is politically possible. We are victorious when we shift the social, political, or economic variables in a way that makes delivering on our demands - making our values and vision manifest in the society essential to their political survival and their connection and relevance to their constituents.

This is another way to translate the wisdom of community organizer Tom Kertes, formerly of Baltimore's United Workers. Kertes told me, "It is not the role of the change agent to ask for favors, but to build power." And, "You build from the power you have to the power you need."

As director of a movement-building organization called the Backbone Campaign, I utilize my personal story of being on the ground, unable to manifest my aspiration to stand up, as an analogy for the importance of social movement for manifesting change. We build that movement power by using every campaign, every strategy, and every tactic to expand alliances, increase the cohesion amongst those allies, and deepen the resolve of our people. When we do that our social movement grows and we win. We win because our collective backbone becomes stronger - and together we change the variables in the political calculus, expanding what is politically possible - often making what was said to be impossible - inevitable - manifesting a world more aligned with our deepest values and aspirations.

Finally, the deep sense of connectedness I felt before the broken branch and shattered spine was also simple, real and rings true for me still. Nature is wondrous and beautiful. We are all part of nature and inextricably connected to it and to each other. Division is an illusion that undermines our power. Love is the connective force that draws us together to dream and co-author a beautiful future into being.

Love Wins! Forward Together!

Subject: [big campaign] McCain's Foreign Policy: Where's the Beef?

McCain's Foreign Policy: Where's the Beef?

Washington, D.C. - Throughout this campaign Senator McCain has failed to lay out concrete plans on some of the most important national security issues before the U.S. McCain has either adopted an incoherent approach, such as with Iran, where he will attack his opponent's position in one sentence and then agree with it in the next, or replaced policy proposals with empty platitudes about "not surrendering" and achieving "victory" in reference to Iraq and Afghanistan.

- On Iran, McCain's position is completely incoherent after the last debate. In a well publicized exchange McCain said he was in favor of "diplomacy" and endorsed his advisor former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, views' that there should be high-level talks at the Secretary of State level with no preconditions. Yet McCain called Sen. Obama's plan to meet at the highest level without preconditions "naïve" and "dangerous." Is the only difference then that McCain is for talks at the Secretary of State-level while Obama would favor talks between the President and the Iran's Supreme Leader?
- On Iraq, McCain has never laid out a clear plan to bring the troops home. He has simply said he would achieve "victory" and bring troops home before his first term in office ends. He has insisted that conditions on the ground be met, but he has never explained what those conditions are or how he would push Iraqis to achieve political progress.
- On Afghanistan, McCain has said he supports an Iraq-style surge there. But he has failed to explain how this would work. Meanwhile both Generals Petraeus and McKiernan have said that Iraq and Afghanistan are very different and rejected the idea of a parallel surge.

Tonight is the last Presidential debate in which foreign policy issues can be raised. While the focus will likely be on the economy, Americans deserve more clarity on McCain's positions on the most crucial foreign policy issues before us.

After debates, McCain's position on Iran is completely incoherent. McCain takes a confrontational approach on Iran: singing "bomb, bomb, bomb Iran," and blasting Sen. Obama's calls for high-level diplomacy without preconditions at the first debate as "dangerous. It isn't just naive; it's dangerous." McCain has claimed Kissinger as an adviser and argued that Kissinger's position was in sync with his. Yet at a forum hosted by CNN a week before the debate Kissinger said he was "in favor of negotiating with Iran" and said "I do not believe that we can make conditions for the opening of negotiations." McCain and Kissinger also seem out of sync on the appropriateness of high-level talks. Yet McCain said during the first presidential debate, "Look, Dr. Kissinger did not say that he would approve of face-to- face meetings between the president of the United States and the president -- and Ahmadinejad. He did not say that. He said that there could be secretary-level and lower level meetings. I've always encouraged them. And I guarantee you he would not -- he would not say that presidential top level." McCain is correct that Henry Kissinger has called for meetings at the Secretary of State level, but Kissinger described this as "high level" saying, "Well, I am in favor of negotiating with Iran, at a high enough level so that they have to study it. And, therefore, I actually have preferred doing it at the secretary of state level so that we -- we know we're dealing with authentic." CNN's Frank Sesno followed up "Put at a very high level right out of the box?" Kissinger responded, "Initially, yes." Yet despite having the opportunity to clarify their positions between the Presidential and Vice Presidential debates, Gov. Palin said at the debate that "Henry Kissinger especially. I had a good conversation with him recently. And he shared with me his passion for diplomacy. And that's what John McCain and I would engage in also."[Presidential Debate Transcript, 9/26/08 . CNN's "Live Event," 9/20/08. New York Times, 10/2/08]

McCain has never laid out a plan for bringing the troops home from Iraq. In May of this year McCain laid out an aspirational vision for his administration, "By January 2013, America has welcomed home most of the servicemen and women who have sacrificed terribly so that America might be secure in her freedom. The Iraq War has been won. Iraq is a functioning democracy, although still suffering from the lingering effects of decades of tyranny and centuries of sectarian tension. Violence still occurs, but it is spasmodic and much reduced. Civil war has been prevented; militias disbanded; the Iraqi Security Force is professional and competent; al Qaeda in Iraq has been defeated; and the Government of Iraq is capable of imposing its authority in every province of Iraq and defending the integrity of its borders." Yet McCain has not given any details or even an over-all approach to achieve these goals. In a just released interview, Michael Gordon of the New York Times writes when "asked to explain his plan, Mr. McCain did not provide any specific suggestions for how he could persuade Iraqi officials to make headway on these thorny political issues, beyond the sort of behind-the-scenes cajoling that American officials are already undertaking." [John McCain, 5/15/08 . New York Times, 10/6/08]

McCain's simplistic approach for Afghanistan - to apply the "surge strategy" from Iraq - has been publicly rejected by commanders on the ground. During the Presidential debate, McCain said of the surge that "that same strategy will be employed in Afghanistan," but even earlier he had said that "it is precisely the success of the surge in Iraq that shows us the way to succeed in Afghanistan." Speaking in Washington last week, General David McKiernan, head of the NATO-led coalition in Afghanistan and former head of ground forces in Iraq, rejected McCain's plan for Afghanistan. McKiernan argued that more troops "are urgently required to combat a worsening insurgency, but he stated emphatically that no Iraq-style 'surge' of forces will end the conflict there." The commanding general clearly stated "Afghanistan is not Iraq." General David Petraeus, now the head of CENTCOM and former commander in Iraq said, "People often ask, 'What did you learn from Iraq that might be transferable to Afghanistan?'" The first lesson, the first caution really, is that every situation like this is truly and absolutely unique, and has its own context and specifics and its own texture." [John McCain, 9/26/08 . John McCain, 7/15/08 . Washington Post, 10/2/08 . New York Times, 10/1/08]

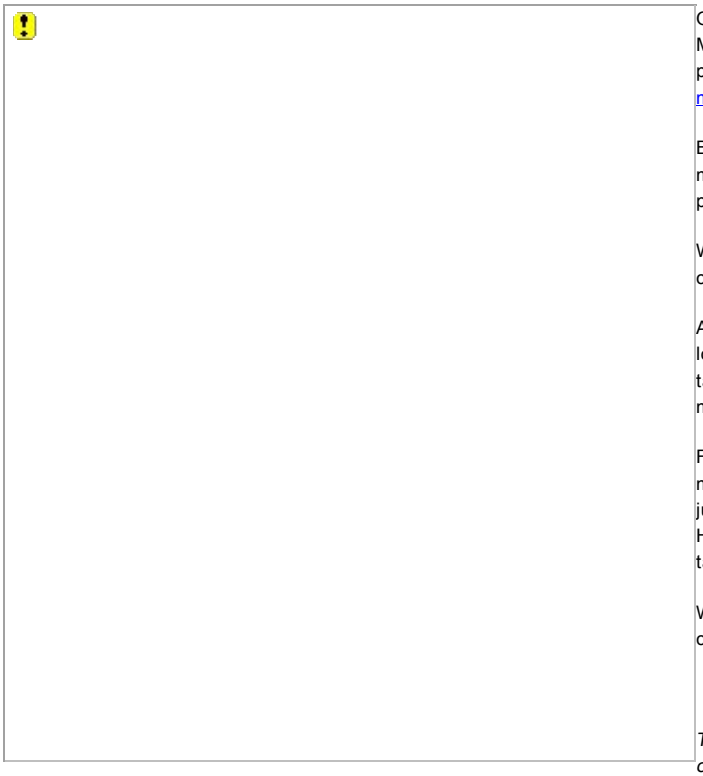
McConnell's 'Middle Class' Tax Cut Gives 10 Times More To Mega-Rich Than To Middle Class Families

WASHINGTON, DC—Today, CAPAF Senior Fellow James Kvaal released the following statement on conservative proposals to fix our economy through tax cuts for the very wealthy:



"Earlier today, the Congressional Budget Office projected that the deficit would hit $1.2 trillion this year while the economy will shrink. The sobering analysis underlines the urgent need for economic recovery legislation and the importance of getting it right.

"But while the year is brand new, the conservative agenda is the same old, tired one. According to proposals released this week, Senator McConnell, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Club for Growth have made it clear that they want big tax cuts for corporations and the richest Americans, no matter the hour or season.

"Tax cuts alongside investments in clean energy, health care, and education can strengthen our economy and create jobs. But skewing those cuts to benefit the wealthiest Americans is not smart policy. Tax cuts for low-income Americans will not only serve as a lifeline for the most vulnerable families, they will also do the most good for the economy. Struggling families are most likely to spend tax relief rather than save it, generating economic activity."

Today, the Wonk Room published the following post on Sen. McConnell's proposal:

McConnell's 'Middle Class' Tax Cut Gives 10 Times More To Mega-Rich Than To Middle Class Families

On Sunday, during an appearance on ABC's This Week, Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell proposed cutting the 25 percent tax bracket to 15 percent as part of an economic recovery, a move which he claims would cut taxes for "the middle class":

But Republicans, by and large, think tax relief is a great way to get money to people immediately. A possibility would be to take a look at the 25 percent rate currently applied to the middle class, lower it to 15 percent.

While McConnell's proposal would provide some limited "immediate" relief, his cut would disproportionately benefit the super rich, not middle class Americans.

A new analysis from the Tax Policy Center finds that this tax change would lower taxes by less than $400 for average middle-class Americans, give a $4,000 tax break to those making over $2.8 million a year, and do nothing for households making less than $40,000.

For households with children the benefits are even more uneven. Families making less than $70,000 a year would see their taxes go down by an average of just $21 and those making between $70,000 and $140,000 would get even less. Households making over $600,000 with children, however, would get an average tax cut of $3,600 .

While McConnell and the conservatives would like to dress this up as middle class relief, it's really just another giveaway for the mega-rich.

Subject:	Prime Minister Trudeau to Speak at CAP

Dear Members of the Board,

I am pleased to let you know that CAP, in partnership with Canada 2020, will be hosting a speech by Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau during his first state visit to the United States next month. Prime Minister Trudeau has been a longtime progressive ally of CAP's. He spoke at our 10th anniversary policy conference in 2013 and is an active and engaged partner in our Global Progress program.

The speech is scheduled to take place on Friday, March 11th. We will have more details on the timing and additional events with the Prime Minister in the coming weeks. We would of course welcome you to join us for this event; please let me and my chief of staff Lindsay Hamilton (lhamilton@americanprogress.org) know of your interest, and we will ensure you get all of the information as we have it. We will be announcing this event in the next few days, so please treat it in confidence for now.

Thank you.

Best wishes,
Neera

Here is the text of a note I sent to a very high level official of the Obama Administration, which understates my views. I would add that he could well do to Hillary Clinton what he accomplished with Democrats losing control of the House, the Senate, major governorships and state legislatures on his watch.

Here is my note to the high level official, and if I seem bitter and angry I am because more terror attacks on American soil are coming:

Tonight the president took up space in the Oval Office on national television to say nothing, praised himself for a job well done, promised to stay the course, vowed to do more of the same, was eloquent in saying we can win a war by bombing alone, subcontracted the prevention of any coming terror attacks on American soil to Middle East despots and Vladimir Putin, and to demonstrate the gravity of the situation about which he addressed the nation in the Oval Office, he then proceeded to the Kennedy Center Awards ceremony for his most important business of the evening.

Throughout the day his White House was putting out the word that the purpose of addressing the nation was to educate the American people who do not understand what a great job Obama is doing against ISIS and in Syria, and to reassure the nation that the president is on top of events, and should not be worried after Americans were attacked by terrorists again on his watch.

Perhaps he should be president of the Kennedy Center?

We just got word that there is no movement on a date for testifying.
John had given us a deadline of today for making decisions.
So proposing the following for next week:
- no trip to DC. Scheduling house and senate caucus for next trip.
Same with women senators. Boxer just told me she can't do next week anyway and we need her there. John is ok with this.
- moving jims filming to NY.
- moving forward with SEIU in ny next week or Chicago on the 20th but engaging with them today and moving forward.
- keeping the 4 finance events for nyc next week as is.
- confirming Iowa for the 18th and 19th and Chicago for the 20tn for message and finance.
- last point is that if SEIU does not work for NYC, we need something else open press or messagey or we have a dead week.
Happy to discuss by phone but I wanted to give people something to react to.

John,

There are only 11 days left in this election and, because of you, an important win for Illinois families is within sight!

As you may have heard, our polling shows Cheri with a 4-point lead. But this race is still within the margin of error, and we cannot let up. Cheri needs your continued support to make sure we get out the vote on Election Day.

Click here to sign up to volunteer and help us Get Out The Vote!

We are also encouraging all of our supporters to vote early. If you and your friends vote early, you cannot only help us on Election Day, but we'll be able to use our resources to reach even more voters!

Don't wait until November 6th - c lick here to find out where you can vote early .

In case you missed it, I wanted to also include the video of Cheri's appearance on MSNBC's Ed Schultz Show from Freeport, Illinois.

Cheri has been talking a lot recently about the 170 employees at Sensata Technologies in Freeport, who are losing their jobs to China. Mitt Romney's former company, Bain Capital, owns Sensata, and we are thankful that Ed Schultz took interest in telling these workers' stories as outsourcing continues to be an important issue for Illinois.

Thank you again for all of your help and support

Onward to victory!

Here are some additional names for your consideration:

Janet Murguia - Hispanic, current Executive Director of La Raza; former legislative liaison for the White House. Bright. Articulate. Wonderful family history. Could go in almost any domestic department, but HUD, Labor, and HHS come to mind.

The Hon. Mary Murguia - Hispanic (Janet Murguia's twin sister) - Currently a very young federal district judge. Formerly head of EOUSA and, before that, head of the criminal division of the US Attorney's office in Arizona (she was my criminal deputy). If she's willing to leave the bench (and she might be), a possibility both at DOJ and Homeland Security, esp. ICE.

José Cardenas - Hispanic - former managing partner at Lewis and Roca, one of the Southwest's largest law firms. Numerous boards and commissions, including board chair of the Translational Genomic Consortium. Stanford law grad. Great colleague and great people skills. Consider for Commerce.

Jacob Moore - Native American - member of the Tohono O'odham Tribe and employee of the Salt River-Pima Indian Community. Member of the Arizona State Board of Education and slated to be its first Native American Chair. Very smart and articulate. Possibility for the Department of Education.

Colonel Joey Strickland - Native American - of Choctaw-Cherokee-Lumbee descent. Most recently head of the Arizona Department of Veteran Affairs, where I recruited him after a national search. Before that, he headed the same department in Louisiana. Very well regarded in the veterans' community. Possibility for the Department of Veterans Affairs or HHS.

Ned Norris - Native American - Chair of the Tohono O'odham Nation. Obama delegate to the DNC. Smart, progressive tribal leader. Operates one of the largest casinos in Indian Country. Possibility for Commerce, SBA, or HUD.

Peterson Zah - Native American - former president of the Navajo Nation (the second largest tribe in the U.S.) Currently handles tribal affairs for Arizona State University. Nationally known tribal leader. Extremely well regarded. Possibility for Education.

Mike Fong - Asian American - Current General Manager of Calence/Insight Networking Solutions. Brilliant, young hi-tech business founder. Great on issues affecting entrepreneurs. Another possibility for Commerce or the SBA.

Also, on governors, here are some suggestions:

Kathleen Sebelius, Kansas. Really knows insurance. Would be a serious contender for HHS or Department of Education.

Tom Vilsack - former governor of Iowa. Very good policy leader and excellent manager. Consider for Agriculture or Education.

Mike Easley, North Carolina. An intriguing possibility for Commerce.

Ed Rendell, Pennsylvania. Multi-talented. HUD and Transportation come to mind.

Below and attached is a draft memo on week by week policy rollout plans for her and ways for campaign to make news without her. It's rough, but a good starting point. Please note section at end that lists what I think we need to build out and add in here. Let me know what you think. Thanks, JP

DRAFT Summer Memo (June, July, early August)

Launch speech goals:

- Lay out vision for America's future
- Establish contrast with GOP
- Establish that you're fighter for everyday Americans

Summer guiding principles - post launch through August:

- HRC: Put forward key policy ideas that define a Clinton presidency, offer key contrast with Republicans, and establish a foundation for fall debates.
- HRC: Continue to demonstrate that you're a fighter for everyday Americans.
- HRC: Aid efforts to organize and grow volunteer base.
- HRC: Cultivate settings that allow for personal interactions, demonstrate openness, and show a personal and lighthearted side.

- Campaign: Demonstrate our strategy to earn every vote.
- Campaign: Find ways to showcase enthusiasm and support for HRC (w/out her)
- Campaign: Use social and earned media to amplify her bio, values (weighing in on policy; current events)

- Campaign and HRC: We are best when we are unpredictable and put her and campaign in settings that demystify and show her true self.

Week of August 15

Campaign: Amplification around August 20 anniversary of ratification of women's right to vote.

Miscellaneous – To Add In

- For July and beyond – I have no idea if the ideas for her work for her schedule, so this is just a strawman.
- Each month we should focus on particular constituency to focus on to generate excitement in social and earned media – possible examples: Hispanics in June around DACA; LGBT in June for LGBT month and SCOTUS; Women in July around Seneca Falls anniversary)
- Possible Boston roundtable on Mental Health w/ Mayor Walsh
- Civic engagement program – either around mental health or service.
- Don't have enough here on GOP contrast with her or campaign staff.
- Need to build out social media noted here for both her and campaign – just placeholders.
- Also need to add NH and Iowa's plans in here because they also have plans to make news without her.
- More on Bio; longtime friends and supporters – bio video should offer good launch of a longer term effort on this (akin to the Hillary I Know effort of past campaign).
- Feel like we have mapped out a good start here – but there is not enough unpredictable, unconventional ideas in here for her or campaign, so will keep at that.

Dear John,

Wonderful to hear from you. I will be in DC in March and would love to schedule a time to come in and see you then. I will reach out to see what dates might work for you a bit closer to the time.

I hope you had a good trip to Delhi. Following are links to two pieces you might find interesting -- the first is a Washington Post / Bloomberg story I was quoted in, and the second is an op ed i co-authored in The Week , both discuss the Modi government's efforts to expand the renewable energy sector (over emissions cuts) as a means of addressing climate change, but also sparking innovation, manufacturing and job creation to spark 'pro-poor' growth in the nation.

Warmest regards,

John,

Hope all is well. Just a head's up that Markey and four Senate colleagues, including Sanders, sent a letter to the DOJ and FCC calling for higher scrutiny of the Charter-Time Warner deal. It's not a surprising development, and we don't anticipate the letter getting much play, but it could come up on your end given Sanders' involvement. Please keep us in the loop if it becomes an issue for you. Happy to get you or someone on your team more information if need be. Much appreciated.

Many thanks,

BLUEGREEN ALLIANCE GOOD JOBS, CLEAN ENVIRONMENT, GREEN ECONOMY

Dear John,

Week two of climate negotiations in Paris is now underway and, as of now, the language in the agreement to ensure a just transition for impacted workers is hanging by a thread.

Tell President Obama to make human rights, including the just transition of workers, a priority in any final agreement.

This is a big problem. We need explicit language on just transition in this agreement to require that when each country submits its contribution every two years or so describing how they are addressing climate change, they also have to describe how they are taking into account the impact on workers and communities.

Workers' rights are human rights. For this agreement to truly capture the comprehensive nature of climate change, we must address core human rights issues like gender equality and workers' rights.

Tell President Obama that this climate agreement cannot leave workers behind.

Sincerely,

Michael Williams

Subject:	An outsourcing machine

Friend,

Don't let him fool you.

Bruce Rauner may say job creation is his top priority -- but for whom?

As CEO of his private equity firm, GTCR (the “R” stands for Rauner), the Republican billionaire built an outsourcing machine.

He started an outsourcing business to help other companies ship jobs to other countries.

Today, we're releasing a new ad to shine a spotlight on Rauner's record of outsourcing.

You can help get the word out -- share the new ad with your friends:

If Bruce Rauner is going to make his business savvy a central plank of his campaign, you can bet your bottom dollar we're going to make sure he's held accountable for what that business really was.

This is about transparency, and we're working hard to shine a light on the real Rauner.

Let's keep 'em honest.

Thanks.

It takes just two minutes, and will really help us start the year off strong. Will you make just one donation to Progress Iowa right now? Thanks for all your help. Let me know if you have any questions, and happy new year! -Matt

Ristorante Luigino Closes After 17 Yearsof Serving Penn Quarter

Luigino Hosts Closing Reception Dec. 20, 2008

Chef Carmine Marzano

Washington, D.C. - Dec. 19, 2008 Ristorante Luigino will close its doors on December 31, 2008 after 17 years of serving authentic Italian cusine to Washington, D.C.'s Penn Quarter district.

To commemorate its long-standing presence, Ristorante Luigino will host a closing reception on Saturday, December 20 featuring signature dishes, wine tasting, operatic entertainment and highlights on Luigino's owner/chef Carmine Marzano's new website, a cooking dvd and cooking tours to Italy.

"It's been an extraordinary journey to have evolved as a pioneer in the Washington, D.C. culinary scene. We -- the city and the culinary scene -- have come a long way," says Chef Carmine Marzano.

Chef Carmine Marzano is slated to launch www.carminemarzano.com in January as a portal for dining, cooking and travel. Browsers may enjoy cooking tips, recipes, cooking demonstrations, cooking tours to Italy and more!

"With my new website, I have found a way to connect to the culinary hearts of everyone," says Chef Carmine Marzano.

In the interim, fans of Luigino may learn family recipes and the history of the restaurant in Chef Marzano's new dvd release, "Cooking with Carmine." Special appearances by noted Washingtonians such as Restaurateur Roberto Donna, Lawyer Brendan Sullivan and Food & Friends Executive Director Craig Shniderman.

Tickets for Luigino's closing party are $70 exclusive of tax and tip. Ticket includes Italian buffet of signature Luigino dishes: Pizza, Pumpkin Agnolotti, Veal Scallopini, Tiramisu, and house wines. Limited seating available. Call 202-371-0595 for reservations.

All -

Thanks for your patience through our multiple conversations this afternoon regarding this week's schedule. I wanted to pass along our (hopefully) final major development.

Due to a serious impending storm on Wednesday and to give our GA team more time to prepare, we are going to remain in South Carolina all day Wednesday. We will make the trip to Atlanta on Friday morning and return to SC Friday afternoon.

We'll follow up with the respective teams separately to work the details but wanted to make sure everyone was on same page with this latest development.

Thanks

John,

Look, we know what is at stake in this election. Whether it's writing off 47% of us or turning back the clock on women's rights, the extreme Tea Party agenda is pretty clear.

That's why we need Kirsten in the Senate – fighting for all of us. But with just 38 days until Election Day, we can't waste a minute. We need her fighting back when Republicans try to take away our rights and our freedoms or attempt to slash the social safety net.

Can you help right now, before the deadline, just 39 hours away? We need $61,000 before midnight tomorrow – the last quarterly FEC deadline of the campaign. Kirsten is already buying expensive TV ads across the state, but we can't let the other side get even the slimmest edge – not this close to Election Day.

Click here to rush $250 or more to Kirsten's campaign right now – before midnight Sunday. She only needs $61,000 to make her goal.

While our opponents are not focused on the well-being of half of America, they are 100 percent focused on launching false attacks and protecting loopholes that reward corporate special interests and making middle-class families pay for it, to boot.

Kirsten's focus has been on standing up for middle-class families, preserving the environment, making our streets safer, and ensuring equal rights for all.

We can't lose a fighter like Kirsten. The Senate needs her. We need her. So please give whatever you can as soon as you can.

Thanks for your help,
Ross

My theory is that we do not want to be in a one on one with Trump - but want to hit him occasionally. In which case, we also need to be hitting Sanders occasionally so we can credibly say we are not only focused on the general.

For example, we were going to do a press call tomorrow in AZ with locals about guns (number one testing contrast issue). So I thought good to do here.

Maybe it is too hard here - but thought we should have some measure of contrast.

CAPAF URGES SENATORS TO VOTE "NO" ON ALL AMENDMENTS AND "YES" TO HEALTH REFORM

President Obama signed into law yesterday a historic health care reform measure that will expand affordable coverage to millions, end abusive insurance company practices, and bring down the deficit. This week, the Senate is working to finish the job by passing the same package of improvements to this historic bill that was passed by the House Sunday night.

Unfortunately, Republicans are attempting to stall this process with the same obstructionist tactics they have used since the beginning of the health care reform debate. Their latest political tactic is offering amendments that progressive lawmakers would be inclined to support, but that in this context amount to nothing more than attempts to stop this last step in the process of reforming our health care system. Senators should see these political stunts for what they are and vote 'no' on all amendments - because in doing so, they will be voting 'yes' to enacting the best health care reform measure possible.

TRAFFIC ADVISORY

Phase 2 of the Third Street Tunnel Utility Relocation Project along Massachusetts Avenue and H Street NW will Begin Tuesday, November 18, 2014

Crews to Work Overnight November 17, 2014 (starting at 7 pm) to implement Traffic Pattern Shift -- Expect Detours

(Washington D.C.) The District Department of Transportation (DDOT) announces that Phase 2 the Third Street Tunnel Project for utility relocation work along Massachusetts Avenue and H Street NW, between 2nd Street and 4th Street, is scheduled to begin Tuesday, November 18, 2014. The related work, involving removal, relocation and replacement of existing underground utilities will impact both vehicular and pedestrian traffic, and is expected to last six months, weather permitting.

Construction activities during this phase will generally occur during the following hours:

- Monday to Friday, from 7 a.m. to 12 a.m.
- Saturday and Sunday work, scheduled only as needed, from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Phase II Traffic Pattern Shifts:

- 3rd Street will be closed north of the H Street; traffic will be redirected around this intersection (to utilize 4th and I Streets) for the full duration of Phase 2.
- H Street will be re--opened westbound, allowing traffic to travel directly through the Massachusetts Avenue intersection from 2nd to 4th Streets; eastbound traffic will remain as currently configured.
    - Temporary Lane Closures should be expected between 7:00am to 12:00am. Traffic barrels, cones, and flaggers shall be implemented to redirect traffic as necessary.

Motorists, pedestrians and cyclists are urged to stay alert and use caution when traveling through the work zone. Pedestrians are reminded to follow the sidewalk detours and not to enter into the work zones for their own safety and the safety of the construction crews.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Motorists are advised to plan for additional travel time, use alternate routes or seek alternate means of transportation, as traffic delays are likely to occur.

For additional details please contact the project's public outreach office at 202--719--0196. For more information about the project, please visit: www.3rdsttunnel.com

My pitch to Jake is to do a big child care investment paid for an FTT. We can under emphasize the pay for in the child care rollout this week but may need it for a debate.

Regardless of where we were, we may need to say a tax on Wall Street in the next debate. And if he comes at us for not supporting a Wall Street tax, I think we are gong to sound terrible opposing it, so we should support it.

I don't think he was prepared for us hugging him so much on Wall Street. Next debate he may just list his positions and go at the FTT; which gives us a big choice regardless.

Anyway, Jake was taking the child care issue up the chain, but I don't know if he was taking the pay for up. He may well. But wanted to share regardless.

And I'm happy to report that that crazy video is being sent around - someone sent it to me.

Subject: Middle Class Donor program
To: john.podesta@gmail.com

Hi John,
It was such a pleasure to meet you at the Hillary fundraiser in Berkeley on Thursday evening. I particularly appreciated your gracious patience with my questions and comments.

As I mentioned to you, if Hillary Clinton is basing a large part of her campaign on being a champion for the middle class, and because there is now so much emphasis on money in campaigns, many in the middle class are feeling left out of the process and seeing that only the wealthy have access to the candidate. I'm attaching a revised version of the proposal I handed you last night that I've renamed the Middle Class Donor program. Hillary could be the first candidate to reach out to the middle and working class supporters and welcome them into the campaign with more access to the candidate. I only ask in return that I be kept aware of your consideration and implementation of this program as it has been my idea (which I share freely).

My other comments to you were in relation to the Hillary Clinton web site with regards to use by grassroots supporters. Here are my concerns:

Events are not listed chronologically.

There is no way to include "shifts" with a phone bank - so we have to list the same event twice with different times. If we split an event to do this, the shifts are not listed chronologically

The event host is not able to email individual attendees. If we want to email RSVP's it's either EVERYONE receives the same email or NO ONE receives an email. Because Everyone sees the email, we have to be judicious with sending them.

The old OFA web site allowed shifts and the option to email ALL or specific respondees.

You'll note that very few people are posting events at hillaryclinton.com and even fewer people are going there to find events. Facebook has become the organization tool of choice but I'd think you'd want people going to hillaryclinton.com first for information.

Thank you for your offer to share our concerns.

Best regards,
Susan Pfeifer

Tomorrow, the Senate is expected to vote on defunding Planned Parenthood. Will you chip in $15 to help defend reproductive rights and stand with Planned Parenthood?

Donate Now

Dear John,

Last Friday, the U.S. House of Representatives voted to kick Planned Parenthood out of federal health care programs.

Tomorrow, it's the Senate's turn to vote on whether to defund Planned Parenthood as well.

But this vote is different—it's happening with less than a week to go before a government shutdown.

That means anti-choice Republicans aren't just attacking Planned Parenthood—they're threatening to shut down the government to get their way.

Will you chip in $15 to help defend choice and stop the defunding of Planned Parenthood?

If you watched last week's Republican presidential debate, you know that these people are dead set on defunding Planned Parenthood, even if they have to lie and shut down the government to get their way.

But here's the reality: Even after months of dishonest attacks and doctored attack videos, most voters oppose defunding Planned Parenthood.[1] And when Mitt Romney ran on a platform of defunding Planned Parenthood, we all saw what happened.

So if anti-choice Republicans want to run in 2016 on a platform of defunding Planned Parenthood, we say: Bring it on.

We've launched a major campaign called "Own It" to make sure voters know where anti-choice politicians stand and hold those politicians accountable for pushing to defund Planned Parenthood. But we're counting on you, our members, to chip in so we can make this campaign big enough to make our message heard.

Will you chip in $15 to help defend choice and stop the defunding of Planned Parenthood?

Thank you for helping to make reproductive freedom real for all women.

Subject: Friday Debate Prep Thread + Tricky Questions

Team,

First, use this thread for Friday debate prep matters.

Second, I want to set some time in the afternoon for quick, hard questions – to avoid doing it hours before the debate, as we did in Las Vegas. I have started a list below. Feel free to add. But then we will lock this list, and not bomb her with tricky nasty things right before the debate (unless something new comes up). (Also, we have a separate list of Iowa questions. Send any Iowa things to KC/SS.)

SPECIFIC QUESTIONS

1. Did you actually consider joining the Marines?

2. You supporting building a border fence with Mexico. What is the difference between a fence and a wall? And should be have either on the Canadian border?

3. You say your plan won't raise taxes on the middle class. What is middle class?

4. What should be the highest tax rate?

5. Do you think the fight over gender identity & restrooms is eroding support for vital LGBT issues, as we saw in the Houston vote?

6. Are you sympathetic with college protestors who are demanding the ouster of university administrators over an alleged lack sensitivity to minority concerns on campus? Do you think the journalism professor who tried to ban reporters from covering a protest should be disciplined?

7. At the last debate, you avoided answering this question: Do black lives matter, or do all lives matter?

8. What do you think the top tax rate, on the top earners, should be?

9. Knowing what you know now about how it was abused, do you regret your vote for the Patriot Act?

Please add on THIS THREAD so I can keep them all together!!!

Ron

John --

I just got back from Iowa, where we are being outspent 2 to 1 on the air. Voters there mentioned it to me more than once.

We expect Mitt Romney and the Republicans to outspend us.

What I will not abide is getting outspent by a margin that negates all the hard work our volunteers are doing -- talking to voters, knocking on doors, making calls.

We are in control of that outcome, but our time to close the gap is dwindling. After three consecutive months of being significantly outraised, it couldn't be more urgent.

Will you make a donation of $3 or more?

https://donate.barackobama.com/Outspent-in-Iowa

If we win this election, it will be because of what you did.

I don't get to tell you enough how grateful I am.

Thank you,

Barack

P.S. -- In a few weeks, I'll accept our party's nomination for president onstage in Charlotte, North Carolina. I wouldn't be there without you. Any donation you make today automatically enters you and a guest for a chance to join me and Michelle as VIP guests of the convention. Hope to see you there.

No purchase, payment, or contribution necessary to enter or win. Contributing will not improve chances of winning. Void where prohibited. Entries must be received by August 21st, 2012. You may enter by contributing to Obama for America here , or click here to enter without contributing. Two (2) winners will each receive the following prize package: round-trip tickets for winner and a guest from within the 50 U.S. States, DC, or Puerto Rico to a destination in or near Charlotte, North Carolina; hotel accommodations; and tickets for winner and a guest to one or more speeches, events and/or proceedings at the Democratic National Convention, as well as the opportunity to meet President Obama and Michelle Obama, on a date, at a venue and for a duration to be determined by Sponsor (approximate retail value of all prizes $5,000). Odds of winning depend on number of entries received and timing of entries received. Promotion open only to U.S. citizens or lawful permanent U.S. residents who are legal residents of 50 United States, District of Columbia and Puerto Rico, and 18 or older (or age of majority under applicable law). Promotion subject to Official Rules and additional restrictions on eligibility. Sponsor: Obama for America, 130 E. Randolph St., Chicago, IL 60601.

Dear Mr John Podesta,

The (new) ambassador of Denmark, Mr. Lars Lose would like to invite you to dinner in the residence on the occasion of a visit by the Danish Minister for Justice on September 8th.

The Minister will be in Washington for 2 days and has a meeting with his counterpart. The minister would greatly appreciate a discussion on big data, and is particularly interested in the report you did when at the White House. The Minister would also greatly appreciate to hear your take on the domestic political landscape.

I hope to hear from your office on your availability.

He was suggested by Bill Ivey. Apparently he was considered for Archivist of the US by Clinton and knows Podesta through that process.

Stanley Katz, Lecturer with the rank of Professor in the Woodrow Wilson School of Princeton University, is President Emeritus of the American Council of Learned Societies. He graduated from Harvard University in 1955 with a major in English History and Literature, and his Ph.D. in the same field from Harvard in 1961. He attended Harvard Law School in 1969-70. His recent research focuses upon the relationship of civil society and constitutionalism to democracy, and upon the relationship of the United States to the international human rights regime. Formerly Class of 1921 Bicentennial Professor of the History of American Law and Liberty at Princeton University, Katz is a scholar of American legal and constitutional history, and on philanthropy and non-profit institutions. He is the Editor of the Oliver Wendell Holmes Devise History of the Supreme Court of the United States and of the forthcoming Oxford International Encyclopedia of Legal History (6 vols., February, 2009). The author and editor of numerous books and articles, he has served as President of the Organization of American Historians and the American Society for Legal History and as Vice President of the Research Division of the American Historical Association. He is a member of the Board of Trustees of the Newberry Library, the Copyright Clearance Center and numerous other institutions. He is currently Vice President of the International Society for Cultural Property and a Commissioner of the National Historic Publications and Records Commission. He also currently serves as Chair of the American Council of Learned Societies/Social Science Research Council Working Group on Cuba. Katz is a member of the New Jersey Council for the Humanities, the American Antiquarian Society, the American Philosophical Society; a Fellow of the American Society for Legal History, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and the Society of American Historians; a Corresponding Member of the Massachusetts Historical Society and an Academico Correspondiente of the Cuban Academy of Sciences. Hi all --

Here are some bullets we're planning to give her for tomorrow. This is similar to what we gave her today (which worked great), with small updates based on today's transcript and feedback from Joel... plus an ACA insert instead of the gun insert she had today.

We're trying to keep this very simple and high-level, no more than two pages, so she doesn't need a podium and can just absorb the closing argument and make it part of her usual stump.

Please send any changes by 6pm. Thanks!

Friend,

I wanted to make sure you saw that the Quinn campaign is now accepting applications for the Fall Organizing Fellowship.

Applications are due Wednesday, August 20th, so don't miss your chance to apply.

My time as a Summer Organizing Fellow was an amazing experience. The skills I gained from the program were invaluable -- I can already tell that I'm a better leader now.

Not only that, I've met some amazing people who share the same interests and values as me, and I feel more connected to my community than ever.

If this sounds like a great opportunity, trust me: It is.

If you're interested, apply today:

https://www.quinnforillinois.com/fall-fellowship-program

Deciding to apply to be a Summer Organizing Fellow was one of the best decisions I've ever made. It will be for you, too.

----------ORIGINAL MESSAGE----------

From: Michael Brenner
Subject: Sound like someone you know?

Do you know someone who wants to work on Governor Quinn's campaign? The Fall Organizing Fellowship might just be the perfect fit.

This is a great opportunity for someone looking to get their start in organizing, or for anyone looking to take their skills to the next level.

If this sounds like someone you know, pass this application along -- or apply yourself.

The fellowship is a volunteer program, but Fellows will receive professional training and hands-on experience in grassroots organizing -- working 20 to 40 hours a week alongside some of the best organizers in Illinois.

Our Summer Organizing Fellowship was a huge success, and we can't wait to welcome our next class. They'll be on the front lines of this campaign, fighting for the people of our state.

This program is especially close to my heart, because I got my start as an organizer through a fellowship just like it.

Joining a campaign was one of the best decisions I ever made. It gave me access to opportunities I never imagined -- and it's the reason I'm on this team now.

The deadline to apply is August 20th, and space is filling up quickly.

If you know someone who might be interested, share this application with them today:

Subject: Tell Congress you oppose Syrian intervention

John -

After careful consideration and an overwhelming response from tens of thousands of veterans, military family members and supporters, we have come to the difficult conclusion that VoteVets cannot support military intervention in Syria.

Sign our petition urging Congress to vote against intervention. We'll share your feedback with leaders in each chamber before they vote.

http://action.votevets.org/syria-vote

First, there is no doubt that the use of chemical weapons in Syria is a horrific tragedy, and very likely a war crime.

But if our goal is to eliminate Assad's chemical weapons cache, then missile strikes, alone, won't achieve that goal. And If the goal is to give Assad a deterrent against using them again, missile strikes don't achieve that, either.

And after yesterday's hearings, I get no sense that the United States has any clear idea of our strategic or operational end state in Syria.

Above all else, we must not ignore the warning of our senior military leaders, like we did in the lead up to the Iraq War. In a letter to Congress several weeks ago Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Martin Dempsey's words speak for themselves.

"We can destroy the Syrian air force," he said. "The loss of Assad's air force would negate his ability to attack opposition forces from the air, but it would also escalate and potentially further commit the United States to the conflict. Stated another way, it would not be militarily decisive, but it would commit us decisively to the conflict..."

I hope you'll join us by signing our petition to Congress and make your voice heard today.

I hope you'll join us.

All the best,

Urgent international petition launched, calling upon Tel-Aviv Mayor Ron Huldai to stop actions against the homeless in OccupyTLV camp!

Please sign the ptition: http://www.thepetitionsite.com/992/671/738/

Petition:

We the undersigned, joini celebrated author Sami Michael and the Israeli Association for Civil Rights, and call upon you to delay any actions against the homeless in the OccupyTLV camp, and exapnd the area, now being fenced, which unreasonably restricts the ability to accommodate all the people already living in the camp.
The city should provide some living options also for the poor and the homeless, not only for the rich!

Overview:

OccupyTLV, October 4 - request has been forwarded to Tel-Aviv Mayor Ron Huldai, for reconsideration of actions against the homeless in the OccupyTLV camp, scheduled to start October 19, 2014!
The letter joins the calls by celerated autor Sami Michael and the Israeli Association for Civil Rights for delaying any actions against the homeless in the park, and expansion of a wall that has been built in recent days, to drastically restrict the area of the park, where the homeless live. The Israeli Civil Rights Association also launched a Hebrew petition site. [2]

The letter to Mayor Ron Huldai also notes that current actions by the Tel-Aviv municipality against the poor and the homeless are inconsistent with its ongoing, costly campaigns to "brand" itself as a friendly, hospitable, international party city...

The camp was established in November 2014, based on an agreement by the Tel-Aviv Municipality and the Israeli Social Protest movement.

In the two years since then, the camp has become the only place in the Greater Tel-Aviv area, where the homeless can sleep safely and build a tent.

Today's letter by Joseph Zernik, PhD, of Human Rights Alert (NGO), notes that actions of the municipality are arbitrary and capricious and are is likely to create even less reasonable living conditions for those of the underprivileged persons who stay. Others, will be driven from the only shelter available to them in Tel-Aviv, unreasonable as it is, to the streets, where they would create unnecessary disturbance for other city residents and would likely face daily confrontations with municipality enforcement personnel.

The letter requests:

a) Extension of time before any action;
b) Expansion of the unreasonably restricted walled area, and
c) Decent conduct by the authorities. A copy of the letter is posted online. [1]

Subject: [big campaign] GOP Leadership Site Touts Recov Project

On House GOP Website, Republican Leadership Takes Credit For Successful Stimulus Project

http://thinkprogress.org/2010/02/18/mcmorris-rodgers-hypocrisy/

Yesterday marked the one-year anniversary of the historic American Recovery and Reinvestment Act, better known as the stimulus. Despite being called a success by most economists and independent analysts, Republicans have mocked the stimulus, calling it a boondoggle that has "failed to create a single job ." Essentially, the GOP has lied about the stimulus in order to justify their unified opposition to its passage.

Yesterday, GOP.gov, the official website for the House Republican caucus, continued the anti-stimulus drumbeat, blaring press releases calling the stimulus a failure. Ironically, posted just above two releases attacking the stimulus, the website features a release from Rep. Cathy McMorris Rodgers (R-WA) taking credit for $35 million dollars in stimulus highway money. Below is a screen shot:

GOP.gov website screen shot

The $35 million in TIGER highway funds were provided by the stimulus McMorris Rodgers tried to kill. McMorris Rodger's press release, however, claims she was a "champion " in gaining the funding.

Yesterday, ThinkProgress released a report detailing how over half of the GOP caucus, 110 lawmakers — from the House and Senate — have either taken credit for its success or requested more money from the stimulus. As part of the GOP leadership team, McMorris Rodgers helped corral every single House Republican in voting against the stimulus. She is simply the next lawmaker hypocritically trying to "trash and cash " the bill.

Attached is the updated John McCain document. Per usual, updated items have been highlighted and, of course, research is ongoing. In addition, this document is available on box.net.

Updates include:

- Additions to the political notes section; a section on McCain and the Democratic candidates have been broken out within this section
- Additional bullets linking McCain to Bush, notably Bush agreeing to help McCain if he is the nominee
- Additional campaign finance bullets
- Earmarks section has been broken out
- Rapid Response research on McCain and telecom/FISA vote
- Rapid Response research on McCain's flip flop on torture

Please let me know if you have any questions. Thanks!

Subject:	Invitation to Facilitate First-Year Course – Jan 7, 20 15
Attachments:	Week One FCPA alumni FAQs.pdf

Dear members of the Strategic Planning Council,

I am writing today to describe an exciting first-year initiative taking place at Georgetown Law and to ask for your help with it on January 7, 2015. Week One: Law in a Global Context ("Week One") is a one-week course we offer to first-year students at the beginning of their Spring semester. It was developed to introduce first-year students to lawyering in a transnational setting and is entirely problem-based—students must step into an advocate's shoes and practice real lawyering skills over the course of the week. It is a signature element of our international curriculum, and is unique amongst top tier law schools.

Last January, we developed and piloted a new Week One problem, which is based on the application of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA) to an international corporate acquisition. As part of the problem, we asked volunteers to play the role of general counsel of the acquiring or target company. They met with one or two small groups of students—who play the part of outside FCPA counsel—as they described their analysis of potential FCPA liability unearthed during due diligence and their recommendations for how to move forward with the deal. The volunteers listened to the student presentations, asked questions (based on a teacher's guide that was provided), and offered feedback on content and presentation skills. Because it went so well, we have expanded it to three of our six sections of first-year students for this academic year, and I am looking for committed volunteers to help make it a success.

This program is a wonderful opportunity to take part in something distinctly Georgetown Law and to interact with our students during this formative first year of legal education. I would be especially excited to see members of this Council participate, as the problem embodies so much of what you helped develop in our Strategic Plan—cultivating students' professional competencies, providing them with opportunities to engage in problem-solving involving the use of multiple skills, and exposing them to a growing practice of law in the Washington D.C. area and beyond. Let me assure you that no General Counsel or FCPA experience is required—just the ability to ask good questions, and give good feedback.

As the attached flyer outlines, we are looking for volunteers on Wednesday, January 7, 2015 to assist in each of the following three time slots: 9:15 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., 1:45 p.m. to 4:00 p.m., and 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. We will be hosting an informal reception for the volunteers and students after each of these sessions. If you are interested in participating, please contact Margaret Gerety, Director, J.D. Program, at meg239@law.georgetown.edu or 202-662-9041 and indicate your preferred time.

All the best to you and yours during this holiday season, and I hope to hear from you soon.

Bill

IN NEW TV AD AIRING TODAY ROXANNA GREEN, MOTHER OF NINE YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER KILLED IN TUCSON SHOOTING, DEMANDS A PLAN TO REDUCE GUN VIOLENCE FROM WASHINGTON

Mayors Against Illegal Guns Launches New TV Ad on Second Anniversary of Tucson Shooting-
www.DemandAPlan.org

Two years after the Tucson mass shooting in which six were killed and former Representative Gabrielle Giffords was shot, Mayors Against Illegal Guns today released a new television ad featuring Roxanna Green, mother of Christina-Taylor Green, the nine year-old girl murdered that day. The 30-second spot opens with a scene from the shooting at Sandy Hook Elementary School in which 20 children were killed. In the ad, Green demands that elected officials in Washington D.C. take immediate action to reduce gun violence in America. The ad can be viewed at www.demandaplan.org/christina-taylor .

"How many more children must die before Washington does something to end our gun violence problem?" said Mayors Against Illegal Guns Co-Chair and New York City Mayor Michael R. Bloomberg. "We need political leaders to hear Roxanna loud and clear: we cannot wait any longer for you to do something about gun violence. Another child should not have to die."

"Roxanna Green knows all too well the pain of losing a loved one to gun violence – sadly, there are parents and siblings and friends who learn this every day in our country," said Mayors Against Illegal Guns Co-Chair and Boston Mayor Thomas M. Menino. "It's time for Washington to act to reduce gun violence – for the 33 Americans that are killed everyday and for all of our children."

The ad will air on Washington D.C. cable through January 14 and in the following markets where there have been mass shootings: Tucson, AZ; Waco, TX; Roanoke, VA; Denver, CO; Binghamton, NY; Milwaukee, WI. In Tucson the ad will air at or very near 10:10 AM MT – the exact time of the shooting.

The Demand A Plan campaign was launched following the theatre shooting in Aurora to demand that the President and Congress take concrete steps to prevent 12,000 Americans from being murdered with guns every year. Since the Newtown shooting, Mayors Against Illegal Guns has issued policy recommendations to leaders in Washington for ending the country's gun violence epidemic including fixing the broken background check system by requiring a criminal background check for every gun sale, removing military-style assault weapons and high-capacity magazines from our streets and making gun trafficking a federal crime.

Full script of the ad follows:

Before we get started, I'd like to take a minute to talk about the topic…of emails.

I think there has been some confusion out there about my emails as Secretary of State, so I want to talk about it directly.

When I was in the Senate, I used a Blackberry for both work and personal emails. When I got to work as Secretary, I wanted to do the same thing. So I opted to use my personal email account - which was permitted by the department - because I thought it would be easier to carry just one device for my work and for my personal emails, instead of two.

A lot of you know, I'm not exactly a technological whiz.

Looking back, it would have been better if I had simply used a second email account and carried a second phone, but at the time, this certainly didn't seem like an issue.

I sent my work emails to government employees at their government addresses, which meant they were immediately preserved on the system at the State Department.

After I left office, when the Department asked for all emails from former secretaries of state sent from their personal accounts, I responded right away and we have turned over all of my work related emails, which total roughly 55,000 printed pages.

I have also asked that the State Department make all of these emails public so everyone can see them for themselves.

Doing some research over the weekend (my mom wants one very similar to what you want, and I'm helping her with the decision). A couple follow up questions:

Most devices these days come with the Windows operating system. Is that what you want or were you considering Mac or Google operating systems?

Most the size you want are touch screen or flip over into a tablet. Do you care about any of these features?

All laptops will slow down without getting cleaned up after a year or so. That's even with normal use. So we need to keep that in mind for this time next year.

Often these devices can be purchased directly through Verizon, which makes the internet bundling easier. I'll see what they have. Is your intention that this be paid via reimbursement every month, or the campaign tech/ comms fund directly? Fine if we don't know yet.

Americans spend 12.7% of their digital consumption time listening to Internet audio — this is more than double the time spent on Facebook. However, they listen while they're doing other things such as driving, walking, exercising and while viewing other apps. By using "voice clicks" rather than "touch clicks" user engagement is increased dramatically and so are the number of clicks per thousand impressions.

Dear Mr. Podesta,

There are only hours left to make your 2015 tax-deductible gift for nature.

As the clock ticks down on this year, I can't help but worry that time is running out for the cherished lands, waters and wildlife that we love. Your generous donation can help save our natural wonders before they're lost forever.
Please make your tax-deductible year-end gift for nature by our midnight deadline!

Your generous year-end donation will be put to work immediately to help with efforts like replanting millions of trees, reducing harmful contaminants from our drinking water, and reconnecting vital wildlife corridors around the globe.

Give now to save the natural world you love.

Thank you for continuing to take action for nature.

With gratitude,

Copying in Brian too. Just discussed in senior comms so we are prepared for when it airs tonight. Brian will do talking points for us that could be used as a statement too if we need it. For her prep we should give her guidance on a stronger, more positive answer on her middle class tax cuts. Charlie even tried to help her on that answer.

I think we need to be ready for all, but the payroll tax answer seems the most problematic if the spin is that the payroll tax isn't big deal to most people as opposed to a small cut in the payroll tax wouldn't be smart.

John,
Attached is a brief memo requesting a meeting and updates on our food security scenario game as well as three reference documents.
We had a very good meeting with Tom Daschle today and will move forward quickly to define game focus and list of VIP invitees by mid-March.
It would be great if we could discuss soon to get your input and advice.

Subject:	Re: Recommendations on Mandatory Federal GMO Labeling

Hi John (I see you are still on China time),

To answer you directly, a consistent, national disclosure would ensure that all consumers have basic information about their food and create a simpler regulatory environment for food manufacturers. FDA has the authority to compel such a disclosure.

However, state action will inevitably move us towards a national solution, albeit not as swiftly. Many companies will choose to comply with Vermont's GMO labeling law by changing their packaging for all 50 states, not simply for Vermont. 17 states are now considering legislating mandatory labeling and apparently there will now be a CA referendum again in 2016 with a stronger and better crafted proposal. As more states enact GMO labeling laws, the numbers of companies that choose to label for the national market will grow. In addition, more companies will work with us to craft a national solution — just like menu labeling for restaurants.

So, permitting states to continue to require GMO labeling is certainly an option and Secretary Clinton could stand for the principle that states have long held the right to require disclosure on food packages — a right enshrined in the preemption provisions of the NLEA (which only apply to the nutrition facts panel and the ingredient line, not the rest of the food package). States have used their power to compel everything from use-by and sell-by dates to grading for butter and maple syrup.

And though as you say, it is probably obvious, nothing less than mandatory labeling is going to ensure a level playing field for all manufacturers. While most complain about any new labeling requirements, every CEO I know prefers the certainty of a single national solution over a patchwork one. I lived through the food industry's endless protests against the NLEA (passed as you know during the Clinton Administration), but once it was in place, everyone has been happy and gone back to business as usual.

Let me know if you need more information.

Gary

Gary,
I guess it's probably obvious, but can you say a bit more about why national mandatory is preferable to no preemption? Discussing today with colleagues and will brief her before she sees you so you can discuss.

Hi John, as you requested, I am forwarding a memo that summarizes the state of play with the national GMO labeling debate as well as policy recommendations for Secretary Clinton. I have also attached an Executive Summary of the recent Mellman polling data. The full 60 page report is available if you'd like to receive it.

I had a very nice chat with Robby at yesterday's lunch and am cc'ing him as well.

Please don't hesitate to reach out to me if I can provide further information or clarification. As I explained to you on the phone, there is very clear and compelling USDA and USGS data demonstrating a strong likelihood of serious health and environmental threats due to the skyrocketing increases in herbicides associated with GMO usage. The most prolific of these compounds has now been found by the WHO to be "probably carcinogenic", and the USGS reports that 60-100% of Iowa rainwater contains them. Leading agronomists and public health scientists are extremely concerned that these trends are rapidly increasing. To me, this is the key reason why citizens need the right to know and therefore choose, but in the interest of brevity, I have spared you a summary of those data. As you will read, we believe that the Right to Know is a compelling and rational position even without the Secretary having to become conversant about the herbicide "treadmill", but I am happy to supply you with a brief on that problem if you wish.

I am looking forward to briefly discussing this matter with the Secretary when she visits our home on July 3rd. Until then, please let me know if and how I can be useful.

On a separate and related note, I have heard both you and Robby speak about Secretary Clinton's strong interest in promoting sustainable and clean industry and job growth. Needless to say, this is where my last 30 years have been focussed and I sit on many boards and invest in a great many sustainable food businesses. If I can be helpful in developing policy and talking points in the clean food and energy space, I am at your and her service.

New Rule Prohibits Voters In Miami-Dade County From Using The Restroom, No Matter How Long The Line

During the 2012 presidential election, voters reportedly waited on line for upwards of six hours . That wait alone is enough to deter would-be voters from going to the polls. But now residents in Florida's most populous county will have another disincentive: they won't be able to go to the bathroom.

Earlier this year, the Miami-Dade County Elections Department quietly implemented a policy to close the bathrooms at all polling facilities, according to disability rights lawyer Marc Dubin. Dubin said the policy change was in "direct response" to an inquiry to the Elections Department about whether they had assessed accessibility of polling place bathrooms to those with disabilities.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

"I was expecting them to say either yes we have or yes we will," Dubin said.

Instead, he received a written response announcing that the county would close all restrooms at polling places "to ensure that individuals with disabilities are not treated unfairly," a January email stated. "[T]he Department's policy is not to permit access to restrooms at polling sites on election days," Assistant County Attorney Shanika Graves said in a Feb. 14 email. Elections Department officials did not immediately respond to ThinkProgress inquiries.

Dubin said he was "shocked" at this response, and not just because it suppresses the vote for everybody. The Americans with Disabilities Act also requires entities to make "reasonable accommodations" to those with disabilities. For those with a number of conditions, including diabetics and those taking diuretics, closing the restroom will make standing in that line impossible, and thus discriminate against disabled voters.

But those with disabilities are not the only ones who would suffer disproportionately from this policy. A Massachusetts Institute of Technology analysis found that blacks and Hispanicswaited almost twice as long to vote as whites in the 2012 presidential election. Another analysis found that this "time tax" also impacted young voters . And this would be one of a number Florida voter suppression policies that have a particular impact on the elderly.

The state's next-most populous counties, Broward and Palm Beach, told the Sun Sentinelthey would not implement this policy.

Now, Scott Walker does have one idea for how to cut costs -- universities should spend less on faculty. Actually, I agree that colleges need to do their part by tightening their belts. We need a real compact -- colleges and universities working with states and the federal government to increase innovation, decrease administrative costs, and deliver more value to students.

The contrast with the GOP:

If you watched the Republican debates the other night, you may have noticed something. Seventeen candidates talked for four hours – and not one of them said a single word about how to address the rising cost of college. Not one. [NOTE: RUBIO DID TALK ABOUT HIS STUDENT DEBT, BUT NO ONE SAID ANYTHING PROACTIVE]

That's because they don't believe states should increase investment in higher education – they believe states should slash investment in higher education. They even want to cut Pell Grants from students who need the help the most.

What's their answer to people struggling with student debt? "Sorry – you're on your own."

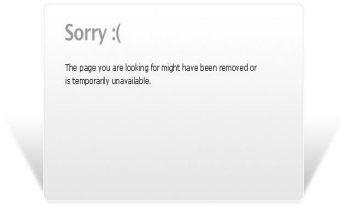
This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

I'm not making this up. This is their record.

Look at what Governor Walker's done in Wisconsin. He slashed funding to public universities and rolled back financial aid programs. He scapegoats teachers while ignoring the real pressures on families. He wants to get rid of programs that forgive the student loans of doctors and dentists who work in under-served communities. Eliminate scholarships for poor students. Deny students the chance to refinance their loans. He even rejected legislation that would make loan payments tax-deductible. I'm not sure why he wanted students to pay more in taxes – but that's what happened.

[I THINK WE SHOULD ALSO RESPOND TO HIS IDEA THAT THE ONLY PROBLEM IS THAT UNIVERSITIES ARE SPENDING TOO MUCH ON FACULTY. I SUGGEST ADDING:

I DON'T DISAGREE WITH SCOTT WALKER THAT COLLEGES NEED TO DO THEIR PART TO DECREASE TUITION BY TIGHTENING THEIR BELTS. BUT I DON'T BELIEVE YOU DO IT BY SLASHING STATE FUNDING AND REPLACING FACULTY WITH ADJUNCT PROFESSORS WHO DON'T GET PAID FAIRLY. I BELIEVE WE NEED TO HAVE A REAL COMPACT - WORKING TOGETHER BETWEEN THE FEDERAL AND STATE GOVERNMENTS AND COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES TO INCREASE INNOVATION, DECREASE ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS, AND ALL DO OUR PART TO MAKE COLLEGE MORE AFFORDABLE"



And the worst part is – Scott Walker isn't special. Nearly every other Republican candidate shares his out-of-touch and out-of-date views. They wouldn't do anything to help hard-working students and families.

Subject: Year End Payroll Information for 2015

Dear Colleagues:

The Payroll Office is currently preparing for the close of calendar year 2015 and for the timely distribution of W-2's by Friday, January 29, 2016. In order to minimize errors in your W-2, we are asking you to please take a moment to review the following items on your most recent paycheck or in GMS:

NAME AND SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER

Your name and Social Security Number (SSN) should be stated exactly as shown on your Social Security Card.

To correct your legal name in GMS follow the steps below. Any changes made to your name will be routed to your HR Contact for verification and approval.

- Go to the GMS Home Page
- Click on the Personal Information worklet
- Under Change select Legal Name

To correct your Social Security number. Please contact your HR Contact or Department Administrator to assist in processing your request or routing it to the appropriate resource. If you need help identifying your HR Contact or Department Administrator, you can search for them in GMS by taking the following steps:

- From the GMS Home Page, click the hyperlink for your Name (which is located in the upper hand corner)
- Click the View Profile button
- In the Job section, click Support Roles
- Scroll until you come to HR Contact or Department Administrator

ADDRESSES

The Home (Primary) address shown in GMS under Home Contact Information (which is located in the Personal Information Section) is where your 2015 W-2 will be mailed. If this is not your current home address, a correction/update is required in GMS by December 23, 2015. Changes to your Home (Primary) address after December 23th will not be reflected on your 2015 records.

At this time you can also update your home phone number and emergency contact information. For any updates to your work contact information please contact your HR Contact or Department Administrator for assistance and they will process or route your request to the appropriate resource.

VOID OR UNCASHED CHECKS

It is important for Department Administrators to determine if there are checks employees have not cashed due to overpayment, or termination in 2015. These checks should be sent to Payroll with a memo as soon as possible and no later than December 23, 2015.

Thank you for taking the time to review (and update, if needed) your information as we prepare to close out the current year. All of us in the Payroll Services Office wish you a wonderful holiday season and look forward to serving you in the new year. As always, if you have questions, please contact me at 202-687-4258 or email Payrollservices@georgetown.edu .

State by State Medical Assistance FY 2012 LTSS Data for Aged and Disabled.
Information Bulletin #389 (May 2014)

For the past eleven years, we have tracked Medicaid funds by State by comparing community versus institution expenditures for people with disabilities. The FY 2012 data is now available. This Information Bulletin will focus only on Older Adults and People with Physical Disabilities from both a six year (FY 2007-2012) perspective with a more detailed look at FY 2012.

It was reported that "Federal Fiscal Year (FFY) 2012 marked the second consecutive year with little or no growth in national Medicaid spending for long-term services and supports (LTSS) [which includes both institutional and home and community-based services (HCBS)] Average annual growth from FFY 2010 to FFY 2012 was 0.4 percent, compared to 6.2 percent from FFY 2000 to FFY 2010."

Some good news: the "total LTSS spent on home and community-based services (HCBS) increased from 48.7 percent in FFY 2011 to 49.5 percent in 2012. The shifting balance was attributable to both an increase in HCBS spending of 2.4 percent and a decrease in spending for institutional services of -2.3 percent."

However, this national average significantly "masks differences across population groups. HCBS accounted for 70 percent of spending in programs targeting people with developmental disabilities," but only "39 percent of spending in programs targeting older people or people with physical disabilities." That means for people with ID, only 30% of the entire MA LTSS went to institutionalize people, but for people with A/PD 61% went to nursing facilities.

Yes, once again the ID advocates and ID community continues to spend a significantly higher percentage of their LTSS in the community and not institutions, as compared to the PD/A advocates.

Focusing on the LTSS for people with physical disabilities, including aged people with disabilities [yes, the "aged"] group is counted only if they have a disability that would qualify for nursing facility care, there is some encouraging data.

The "good" news is that in FY 2006, the national average of community versus institutional Medicaid expenditures was 29.6% to the community and 70.4% to the nursing homes. In FY 2012, it was 38.8% to 61.2%. Yes, it's a slow, incremental change. And yes, inherent in the lethargy and pace are people being discriminated against in violation of the ADA. Without a serious national attack, the arc of history will continue to bend, but very, very slowly.

We all know why this imbalance is so slow to change: the nursing home industry is very powerful and contributes a lot of money to Governors and State legislators, and they set your State budgets. Given that most people want to live in the community and not nursing homes, the quid pro quo is obvious. The nursing home industry "contributes" to your elected State officials, who in return continue to raise the per diem nursing home reimbursements and continue to allocate Medicaid funds with an institutional bias.

Unlike the for people with Developmental Disability, where 28 States spend more than 75% of their Medicaid expenditures in the community and only 3 States spend less than 50% in the community, for the Older Americans and People with Physical Disabilities no States spent more than 65% in the community and 48 spent less than 50% in the community. Quite a difference!

Here are the States that spent the least in the community in FY 2012 for A/PD, and therefore spent the most in the nursing homes. The worst/least Medicaid expenditures in the community was North Dakota, followed by Kentucky, Alabama, New Jersey, South Dakota, Indiana, New Hampshire, Rhode Island -- all spent less than 20% of their MA LTSS in the community for people with A/PD, and by definition therefore spent more than 80% in nursing homes.

Six of these "worst" A/PD states either have an exceptionally strong nursing home industry or the State elected officials have a particular dislike of Old Adults and People With Physical Disabilities. Compare their community-based Medicaid expenditures for people with Developmental Disabilities versus Older Adults and People with Physical Disabilities. The following five states spent more than 70% of the Medicaid funds in the community for people with DD, while spending less than 20% in the community for people with A/PD: New Hampshire, Alabama, Rhode Island, South Dakota and Kentucky. Quite a difference!

Here are the States that spent the most in the community in FY 2012 for A/PD, and therefore spent the least in the nursing homes: Minnesota, Alaska, Washington, Oregon, California, District of Columbia, Texas and Wisconsin. These States are the winners -- virtually the same as in 2011. What are advocates in these States doing right? Tell us.

Advocates for Older Adults and people with Physical Disabilities should sit down in your State with the advocates for people with Developmental Disabilities to discuss their successful strategies.

Hi, John,

Unsolicited advice from a pr person.

Hillary needs to learn to memorize the first 60 to 90 seconds of prepared remarks.

Just saw her on the news talking about Trump and his remarks denigrating women.

She had great things to say but was reading from a script which made her looked programmed.

If there's any topic she can talk about passionately without a script this was it. A missed opp.

She was very good answering questions.

BTW, if you're coming to MA or NH s.this fall let me know and I can stop by and say hello.

Clinton tells Radio Iowa trade deals are 'fraught with all sorts of problems' (AUDIO)

June 14, 2015 By O. Kay Henderson

Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton spoke with Radio Iowa this afternoon following her rally in Des Moines.

AUDIO of interview, 21:00

The conversation began with a discussion about trade and the Trans Pacific Partnership. What follows is the sequence of questions and some of her responses.

Did President Obama mishandled it in his negotiations with Republicans?

"Any trade agreement is going to be fraught with all sorts of problems," Clinton said.

Is it time for a rethink, time to send US troops to do combat-type maneuvers in Iraq?

"I do not believe that U.S. troops should be on the ground in Iraq doing combat," Clinton said.

Your Republican friends have already cited (universal preschool) as one example of a big government approach as opposed to their view. What would you say to that criticism?

"I think investing in early childhood and pre-kindergarten is good for our economy. It's good for our democracy. I make absolutely no apologies for believing that," Clinton said. "I also notice that many Republican governors are beginning to institute preschool programs."

In your husband's administration you had a significant policy role. In a Hillary Clinton administration, what role would Bill Clinton play in regards to policy?

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

“I don’t like to think about what might happen unless it does happen,” Clinton said.

In 2008, members of the Clinton team, including Bill Clinton, had some concerns about the Caucus process…Are you comfortable with the process…and how does this feel different than it did eight years ago?

“I am very committed to competing in the Caucus system and I do think that the Democratic Party in Iowa has made some changes that will provide some greater opportunity for people who wish to express themselves in the Caucuses to be heard,” Clinton said.

There are sort of two Americas…it seems as if in one America you’re well respected, your admired. In the other America, you’re hated and your vilified. How in presenting what many are describing as a progressive agenda do you then govern for the two Americas as president when maybe the proposals you’re presenting don’t appeal to that sector of the country?

“I will work with anybody anywhere anytime to find common ground,” Clinton said. “…I think a lot of the political heat that is directed at me is kind of a strange form of respect and even flattery because if they weren’t so concerned about me, they’d leave me alone, but they get up every day you know worried that the case I’m making will break through.”

In 2007 when I covered you, you to paraphrase said I’m not running for president because I’m a woman but because I’m the most qualified, Now you’re talking about breaking the glass ceiling. Why the change?

“There is an eagerness that I find now in crowds here in Iowa and elsewhere, not just to support me because they’d think I’d be a good president because of X, Y, or Z…but because we would shatter that highest and hardest glass ceiling,” Clinton said.

One of the things I hear from Iowa Democrats at (Sanders & O’Malley) events is that they’re unsure about your commitment to Wall Street reform or going after the big banks. How do you reassure skeptics?

“I will have to do a better job of explaining my record,” Clinton said.

Some of them use the phrase Clinton fatigue as well. Is that something that can be cured?

“When I ran for the Senate the first time in New York I heard all of this,” Clinton said. “…I’m going to work hard to earn every vote and then the voters will decide. I understand what my opponents in both the Democratic Party and Republican Party are trying to do. I don’t blame them. That’s their campaign, but I’m going to set forth what I believe, what I think will work…and then people will make their own decisions.”

Your mother was here in December before the Caucuses. You talked in your speech yesterday about going home from work and talking about your travails with your mother. I’m sure the Caucuses came up. What was her advice to you?

“She didn’t immerse herself in the political details. She was there to support me and to be there in that wonderful way she had of kind of reminding me of what’s mportant in life,” Clinton said.

Friend,

When I signed up for Ken Cuccinelli's email list, this was not what I expected.

Ken Cuccinelli's campaign manager forwarded Terry's email from yesterday — the one asking if you'd like to meet Michelle Obama — to their email list. And he's challenging Cuccinelli's supporters to match your contributions.

He seems to think their grassroots movement is stronger than ours. Let's prove him wrong.

Donate $5 today and show Cuccinelli's campaign how a grassroots campaign is really run. And, as an added bonus — we'll automatically enter you for a chance to meet Michelle Obama.

We're proud to have the President and First Lady's support — and we're proud of the campaign you're helping us build.

Thanks for your help,

Robby Mook

Of the two operational systems, only Iron Dome has been used in combat. Defending against short-to- rockets, it intercepted roughly 90 percent of its targeted projectiles during Operation Protective Edge, figures released by the army. The other three systems – Iron Beam, David’s Sling, and Arrow 3 – are become operational within the coming two years. The Arrow 2 was rolled out in March 2000. “This is a for the Air Defense Forces, for the Air Force, the defense establishment and, I would say, for the Stat Maj. Gen. Eitan Ben Eliyahu said at the time. He called the Arrow 2 “the only weapon system of its kin entire world,” adding that Israel is the first country to “succeed in developing, building and operating a system against ballistic missiles.” Tuesday’s test, the Defense Ministry said, has no bearing “on the Is operational systems’ capability to cope with the existing threats in the region” and is merely “intended future threats.” The Arrow 3, still incomplete, is designed to intercept missiles at a higher altitude, in sp above the earth’s atmosphere, minimizing the threat of fallout from weapons of mass destruction and i the likelihood of a successful interception of incoming missiles.

Ted Strickland for SENATE

Friend,

There's no doubt about it -- Ohio will make or break the race for Democrats to win back the Senate in 2016.

As my friend Chuck Schumer said earlier today, our race is key to building a blue Senate. Winning will mean we make real progress towards some of the most critical issues of our time, and losing could mean even more years of Republican stonewalling.

That's why it's so important that we join forces to defeat Rob Portman. Senator Portman will do anything to hold onto his seat, and the Koch brothers are doing everything they can, and spending millions, to keep the Senate red.

Will you contribute to make sure that we can reach our $1 million grassroots funding goal and take back the Senate from Portman and his backers?

We can do this if we work together. We're so close to hitting our goal already -- we are on track to raise a whopping $1 million. And, like Chuck said, it's so important that we do. In fact, it's absolutely necessary for the state of our nation in the coming years.

With your help, we will have the power to win this election and win back control of the Senate. Will you make a final contribution of $50 -- the most popular amount donated to the campaign -- before the deadline?

If you've saved payment info with ActBlue Express, your donation will go through immediately.

$50 »	$100 »
$250 »	Other »

You are going to make all the difference. Are you with me?

Ted Strickland

Subject:	Re: Launch date

Alex and I spoke this am after they talked logistics with the venue.
It is doable but extremely risky and both Alex and I are concerned we have no margin for error if we proceed.
Here is what we know:
- may 26 and 27th: out because of Sanders and site being built for an event on the 30th.
- June 2nd: it is sandwiched between huge events on may 30th and June 3rd, so there are unforeseen risks with the 2nd. Normally we would have 7-10 days to advance and this give us 30 hours to load (remember we are on an island with basically one road), build, test sound and light before HRC walks on to stage. Also since we will have to expedite getting all our equipment off island, I'm sure our costs will escalated.
- June 11th, 12th or 13th: they are the best options for the venue and frankly for us in terms of logistics. It is not ideal message wise I know but it's our practical reality. They can close the park, we have as much time to build and take down as we need. Chelsea cannot do the 11tn but we might be able to get her to change. This also enables us to do the swing to 4 early states. We have to be in Iowa and Nevada that week anyway.
Our recommendation is we move to June 11th, 12th, 13th. The indoor backup option would remain one of the armories.

Hello Mr. Podesta,
Thank you again for taking my call especially considering its unorthodox nature. As I said on the phone, I currently serve as Political director for Penn for Hillary: a student-led organization building a Philadelphia base for Hillary Clinton's next political endeavor. Our group started out as a campus franchise of Ready for Hillary but after surpassing the goals set by the national organization, we broadened our vision to include the greater Philadelphia area. We've formed partnerships with most of the major schools in the trip-state region and we have established a network of students approaching 500 members. These partnerships include strong ties to the Pennsylvania College Democrats.

As I mentioned, we'll be traveling to DC this week to attend the Winter Meeting. Our hope is for us to form more connections within the party and to establish ourselves as a resource in Philadelphia. We'd love to meet with you informally if your schedule allows. If we're unable to meet in DC, you always have an open invitation to visit us here at Penn (we'd love to have you speak to our student body).

Travel Details:
Arriving in DC Thursday evening and leaving Saturday night.

Delegation Members:
Mitchell McVeigh, Co-Founder and Co-President
Emily Irani, Co-Founder and Co-President
Michael Ramdatt, Political Director
Robert Klein, Outreach Director

Thanks again for being so kind. I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Supreme Court Decision Will "Open Floodgates" for Big Oil, Corporate Spending Against Energy Reform

Washington, DC – Today, the Supreme Court issued its opinion in Citizens United vs. FEC, declaring that corporations are permitted to make independent expenditures and electioneering communications under federal election law. This ruling would allow all corporations to make unlimited communications, such as advertising, that advocate for or against federal candidates.

LCV President Gene Karpinski released the following statement on the Court's decision:

"This decision will open the floodgates for oil companies like Exxon to spend vast sums of money to influence the outcome of federal elections in favor of candidates who stand with them and against a clean energy future. With unlimited spending in the electoral arena, misinformation campaigns by Big Oil and other special interests will be amplified and more lethal, potentially drowning out the voices of the majority of Americans who support investing in clean American energy and reducing harmful carbon pollution."

With this decision, opponents of energy reform will become especially empowered in federal elections. For-profit corporations such as Exxon Mobil now have the ability to tap into their general treasuries for their electoral work, as opposed to having to work through more restricted connected federal PACs. For example -- Exxon Mobil's federal PAC spent just over $800,000 in the 2007-2008 cycle.* During the same time period, Exxon Mobil spent more than $46 million on lobbying at the federal level, an advocacy area where there are no limits on how much can be spent.

Subject: [big campaign] New Ad Campaign Calls For Serious Debate

America is in trouble. We face big challenges that cannot be ignored , but the issues are getting lost in the media frenzy and political distractions. It's time to call the media and the candidates to account. To help get us back on track, the Institute for America's Future begins a major ad series in The New York Times this week to highlight critical crises our country must address - and to enlist others in challenging the campaigns and the media - particularly those preparing for the debates - to address fundamental questions. We're inviting everyone to join in this effort to object to the gotcha journalism, the politics of diversion, lies and posturing - and demand that this debate address real questions. More details about the ad campaign and the first in the seven-week series are in the news release below. --Toby.

NEW AD CAMPAIGN CHALLENGES CANDIDATES, MEDIA TO "GIVE US A DEBATE WORTHY OF A GREAT NATION IN TROUBLE"

Starting Tues. with Ad on "Reviving The American Dream," Ad Series Aims to Rally Americans to Demand Debate on Seven Crises We Must Face

WASHINGTON – A major new advertising campaign will begin running this week to focus the national debate on important issues at stake in this year's elections. The ad campaign, sponsored by the Institute for America's Future, challenges candidates and the nation's media to "give us a debate worthy of a great nation in trouble," encouraging Americans to demand a real debate focused on "seven national crises that won't wait."

The first in a seven-week series of provocative "op-ed" print ads will appear on Tuesday facing the editorial page of The New York Times. Each ad seeks to provoke widespread discussion of major challenges facing the country. Leaders of the Institute are urging people to take the ads to public meetings, church groups and civic associations - to demand the debate the country needs.

A full-page ad announcing the campaign will appear this week in the main news section of The New York Times and on Tuesday, the first issue ad on how the American Dream is slipping out of reach for more and more families will run on the op-ed page. Other ads in the series will focus on our soaring global debt and financial crises, broken health care system, collapsing public infrastructure, the looming global warming challenge, increasing Robber Baron corruption and the endless occupation of Iraq and the "war on terror."

Institute for America's Future co-director Robert Borosage said the campaign is designed to change the tone of the debate surrounding the presidential elections.

"These issues are simply too important to be lost in the media frenzy and amid political distractions," said Borosage. "It is time to shelve the gotcha politics and the horse-race journalism of the past. We're urging the candidates to confront the major challenges facing our country and the debates to focus on them."

An electronic copy of the first ad on "reviving the dream" is available online at http://assets.ourfuture.org/documents/debate_we_need/debate_we_need2b.pdf. Text of the ad follows.

REVIVING THE DREAM

#1 In A Series

A Debate Worthy Of A Great Nation In Trouble

"Is a dream a lie if it don't come true. Or is it something worse."
--Bruce Springsteen, The River.

The American Dream is on life support. It is not expiring of old age. It is being killed off by calculated policies hostile to working people.

"The fundamentals of the economy are strong," says the President. The fundamentals of that statement are bunk. Yes, for entrenched corporations, for the rich and for some other privileged souls, this economy works. But for tens of millions of working families, life in 2008 is a hard slog and getting harder by the day.

Costs of living keep rising. Wages don't keep pace. Savings vanish. Debt builds up. Poverty spreads. Those are the joys of what they told us are "good times." Now as the economy sours, home values plummet and job losses spread, it will get worse.

And inequalities scream out for change. A typical worker works a whole year to earn what her CEO takes home in one day. A hedge fund billionaire pays a lower tax rate than his secretary.

The old deal between the people who own the country and the workers who make it go has been busted. It's time to cut a new one. Here are three places to start:

Over the last seven years profits and productivity soared. But workers didn't see the benefits. This is a question of power. It's time to empower workers to organize at the workplace and crack down on employers who trample their rights.

Corporations are shredding promises they made on health care and pensions. It's time to forge a new social contract - health care, paid vacation and sick leave, pensions and a decent minimum wage - and enforce it.

When the economy is at full employment, workers can demand a fair share of prosperity. Make full employment the central target of our economic policies, with government acting, when necessary, as employer of last resort.

What do you think? Don't stay silent. Join the debate at www.ourfuture.org .

Fellow Big Campaigners,

As the midterm elections approach, I'm working closely with The Media Consortium to carefully watch and spread awareness of reports on the effects of the Citizens United ruling, which -- as you probably know -- freed corporations to spend unlimited sums of money on the electoral process and will undoubtedly help contribute to the effing headache that is the 2010 midterm elections.

So keep your eyes peeled for Campaign Cash -- a daily blog with some of the best independent reporting on the effects of corporate spending. It's our attempt to measure just how widespread the effect of Citizens United will be on this -- and the next -- election. RELEASE: Bush's Weak Dollar

By Scott Lilly

READ THE FULL REPORT WITH CHARTS HERE

WASHINGTON, DC - The Center for American Progress released a report today outlining the grave impact the weak dollar has on consumer prices, including the analysis that 40% of the increased price of oil for Americans is attributed to the weak dollar. In dollars, oil cost about 28 percent more on average in 2004 than it had cost in 2000, but in Euros, the price was 8 percent lower in 2004 than in 2000.

America's working families have been squeezed for most of this decade by stagnant wages and diminishing health and retirement benefits. Now they face new economic pressures from rising gasoline, food, heating, and electricity prices. A portion of those higher costs are directly attributable to the weakening of the dollar and the economic policies that have produced a weak dollar.

Energy companies are directly benefited by a weak dollar since the value of their domestic reserves increase in proportion to the dollars decline. At the beginning of 2001, ExxonMobil shares traded at less than $36 apiece. By early 2008, the share price had jumped to nearly $85. For most of that period, the increase in ExxonMobil's share price matched almost precisely the appreciation in the price of a barrel of crude oil.

The fall of the dollar has affected oil prices in two specific ways.

- First, as the dollar falls against the euro and other major currencies, oil-exporting states have been demanding more dollars per barrel of oil to protect their ability to meet expenses paid in euros and other currencies.
- Second, more recently, retirement funds, hedge funds, speculators, and other institutional investors around the world have tried to protect themselves against further declines in the dollar by moving money into commodity futures that are denominated in dollars-financial instruments that will remain stable or even rise against other currencies even as the dollar falls. These investment strategies create, at least temporarily, additional demand for those commodities, driving the price upward.

The fact that oil prices have risen nearly fivefold when measured in dollars, but slightly less than threefold when measured in euros, would indicate that nearly 40 percent of the increased price American consumers are paying for oil is attributable to the weak dollar.

If only 10 percent of the price increase is attributable to the flow of dollars and other currencies into commodities to hedge against further weakening, then at least half of the explanation for high gas prices is the weak dollar.

Subject:	[big campaign] New Huff Post from Creamer- Messina Perfect Choice To Manage Obama Campaign

Jim Messina-- Perfect Choice to be Obama Campaign Manager

I first got to know Jim Messina right after the Democratic disaster in 2004. Bush had been re-elected – along with a Republican Congress. The centerpiece of their program for a second term was the privatization of Social Security – their plan to trade Social Security's guaranteed benefits for a risky investment scheme that allowed Wall Street to get its hands on the Social Security Trust Fund.

Messina was Senate Finance Chair Max Baucus' Chief of Staff. I was working with a group of unions and other progressive organizations to set up a campaign to stop the privatization of Social Security.

With Messina's help, the coalition recruited Paul Tewes to manage that campaign. Tewes would go on several years later to run the most extraordinary grassroots effort in the history of American politics – managing the Obama victory in the Iowa caucuses that made him a contender for the Presidency. Brad Woodhouse – who is now Communications Director at the DNC – became Communications Director of the Social Security campaign. I became Field Director.

Through the next nine months, the coalition – that became Americans United to Protect Social Security – ran a major grassroots effort that was successful at stopping privatization dead in its tracks.

I can tell you for certain that much of the credit for the campaign's success went to Jim Messina.

Messina worked the Senate – helping to hold wayward members in line – and devised strategy with his boss and the Democratic Leadership. But there was never a day that he didn't focus on what he said really mattered: that out in the Districts people were mobilizing to support Social Security.

Jim has always been absolutely committed to the view that Progressives win through a grassroots movement – through people taking action. And he understands that you engage people by making them simultaneously feel that they are part of something bigger – something historic – and at the same time they can each make a personal contribution that really matters to the movement's success.

When Messina left Baucus to join the Obama Campaign as Chief of Staff, those of us who had worked with him were thrilled. Messina was a committed Progressive who started out in politics as a grassroots organizer in Montana. He has the management skill of a top CEO coupled with boatloads of political savvy.

And there was one other quality that made him the perfect choice for Campaign Chief of Staff then – and Campaign Manager now:

From my personal experience working with Messina over the last six years, I can tell you firsthand that he is completely committed to progressive values. But he doesn't believe that is good enough. Messina believes that you have to put those values into practice – that you have to convert them into public policy. Messina is passionate about winning.

I haven't always agreed with every tactical choice of the Obama Administration – or with Messina's approach to every issue. He'd be the first to tell you that I am regularly hounding him with suggestions on how he – or the Administration – should do something, or not do something.

But I have no doubt whatsoever that Messina is absolutely devoted to the fulfillment of the Progressive vision that is at the heart of what is special about America. And more times than not he is successful at making progress happen.

Messina is sometimes criticized by Progressives for his management of the health care battle. Progressives like myself believe strongly that the Affordable Care Act would be better if it had included a Public Option. So, by the way, does Messina.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

I personally would have preferred if the White House would have fought more forcefully for the Public Option.

But having been deeply involved in the health care battle working with Americans United for Change and Health Care for America Now (HCAN), I'm not sure we could have gotten a Public Option no matter what the President did or did not do. The Senate Filibuster, the health insurance lobby, and Senator Lieberman were our chief obstacles. The Administration and Senate leadership had negotiated a deal with Progressive Senators to include a Medicare buy-in for people from 55 to 65 years of age -- which would have been a huge advance. But then the insurance industry told Lieberman – who had favored the plan – to drop it. And that was that.

I think Messina and others, like David Axelrod, would agree that there were mistakes made in the campaign. One of those was allowing the battle to go on for so long – indulging Senator Baucus' attempt to get bi-partisan compromise over so many months that it amplified our opponent's ability to dominate the air waves. By the way, I don't know that Messina could have personally done a lot more to get Baucus off of the bi-partisan program more quickly – notwithstanding their close relationship -- though I suspect he tried. The White House was being told that the bill had to go through the committee process in order to keep sixty votes. Getting Baucus to move that process more quickly would have required a major confrontation, that at the time the White House apparently did not think would be productive. In retrospect Messina may view it differently, I don't know.

Another problem was not shifting soon enough to framing the battle as a fight with the insurance industry – a message frame that ultimately allowed us to win. But the decision for the Administration not to use the insurance frame early was not made to "coddle" the industry. It was made to keep their money off the airwaves as long as possible. I think there is now general acknowledgement that the campaign would have been better off moving to the insurance frame earlier.

But all of that being as it may, the fact is that Obama – and Jim Messina – won a major reform in the health system that others had tried to win for almost 100 years and failed to achieve.

After Scott Brown's victory in the Massachusetts special Senate election in January 2010, there were those who believed the health care fight was lost. Messina led the battle that helped overcome the Massachusetts disaster that cost Democrats a 60-vote margin in the Senate. Nancy Pelosi's iron-willed leadership, the President's determination, and Harry Reid's skill – were all necessary ingredients for the victory. But without Jim Messina, I don't believe that health care reform would be the law of the land.

Health insurance reform wasn't tough to pass because it was so complicated. It was tough to pass because it gored the oxen of major vested interests that weren't just going to roll over and play dead. Messina was the general who beat those forces in a major war.

Jim has also been criticized by some in the gay rights community for not moving forcefully enough to eliminate Don't Ask, Don't Tell (DADT). But in the end, his strategy – of getting buy-in from the Defense Department and leading Generals – worked. It got the votes the President needed in Congress to pass the bill.

And in case you mistakenly believe Messina is just a hard-bitten political operative and not a true-believer, here's what Joe Solmonese of the Human Rights Campaign Fund said about the day that Don't Ask, Don't Tell was repealed, in a recent article in The Nation:

Solmonese said that Messina was "unquestionably one of the great unsung heroes of DADT repeal." Solmonese then described how he stood side by side with Messina on the Senate floor as the bill cleared the body on December 18. When the sixtieth vote came in, Solmonese said, Messina began to cry.

The same thing happened at a Common Purpose meeting where all present toasted Messina and each other for passing health care reform – after a century of trying.

Messina represented the Administration week after week at Common Purpose – an organization that was the first effort of its kind to assure systematic contact between the leadership of Progressive organizations and a Democratic president.

Others may differ. I think they that those meetings have proved invaluable, assuring passage of progressive initiatives like the health care law, financial reform, repeal of DADT, the economic stimulus bill that saved the economy from a depression, and the critical first Obama budget.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

My understanding is that the campaign plan for 2012 is still in formation. But one critical element is clear. The campaign will be even more reliant than it was in 2008 on its grass roots ground game. Messina is devoted to the central values of the Obama campaign culture: respect, empowerment, accountability and inspiration.

His management style is to treat the people who are part of his organization with respect; empower them to do their jobs; and hold everyone in the organization accountable for meeting concrete goals. And he understands that people excel when they are inspired – when they feel that they are part of something historic, and are called upon to contribute personally to make that historic goal a reality.

Those are the principles that gave the 2008 Obama campaign the most successful field operation in the history of American politics. Messina intends to build on that success. That's why he's chosen 2008 alums Mitch Stewart and Jeremy Bird to manage the field operation in 2012.

If you talk to the people who've worked for Jim over the years, you find nothing but respect and admiration for his talent and for the way he treats the people who work for him.

Obama's 2008 field organizers revered Campaign Manager David Plouffe. I predict the same will be true of Jim Messina.

In President Obama's first two years the Progressive forces took enormous amounts of new ground. We didn't win everything. One of the most heartbreaking defeats was the failure to pass Comprehensive Immigration Reform. Another was the defeat of energy legislation. But we were definitely back on the offensive after a long period in a defensive crouch.

None of those victories would have happened without a massive battle. Last November, Wall Street, the Insurance Industry, the Big Banks and the Chamber of Commerce regrouped and the empire struck back. Change isn't easy. If it were, it would have happened a long time ago.

Now we have to defend our gains and regroup for a Progressive counter-offensive in 2012 – one that will allow us to make this period in our history a real "big change" moment like the New Deal or the 1960's.

The stakes are enormous. If we are successful at taking back the House, holding onto the Senate and re-electing the President we can realize the promise that millions felt as we watched Barack Obama take the oath as President just over two years ago. If we are not successful, we could fall back into the political dark ages.

In a battle like that, I can't think of anyone I would rather have as Commanding General more than Jim Messina.

John/Todd --

Christine points out an issue of importance to the discussion we were having yesterday about Agency Reviews. We should think carefully about the threshold issue whether it's appropriate to go in at all to the independent/regulatory agencies, some of which have law enforcement roles and, if so, what constraints to put on the review to avoid potential problems.

See below - have we thought through sending teams into independent (non executive branch) agencies? In 92 we did not for the reasons discussed below.

The actual names for the agencies I know look fine, with one suggested switch. You have Phil Weiser doing both DoJ antitrust and FTC. I would keep Phil at FTC and move Bill Baer (currently listed for FTC) over to DoJ antitrust.

I have talked to Lisa about a bigger overall concern with independent agencies e.g. those agencies specifically NOT in the executive branch. At the SEC, CFTC, FEC< and the FTC 90% of what they do is law enforcement - investigate and bring cases. During the Transition (and even in the WH) we can't know anything about that. To the extent these agencies "make policy" it is largely through the cases they bring and to a lesser extent through rulemaking. Rulemaking (a lot of which the FCC does) is governed by the Administrative Procedures Act and any conversations with anyone about a proposed or ongoing rule must be publicly disclosed, recorded, etc.

I don't know if there are specific rules about going into independent agencies, but as I recall in 92 at the end of the day we decided the risks of appearing to involve the transition personnel in ongoing law enforcement or rulemaking were just too high and we did not go in.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

There is also - arguablely - a separation of powers issue as these are not executive branch entities. We concluded that everything we needed to know we could get from people familiar with the agencies and the public record. Obviously we have concerns like this at DoJ, but there are more controls in place there than at the agencies, and it is part of the executive branch. c

I would be interested to know if we have done any thinking or analysis on this. Hate to raise a question with out answering it, but this one is worth it.. C

Attached is the latest version of the Agency Review teams. It is a closely held document, so please treat it with the same sensitivity as ours.

If you all could take a quick look at the lists for the agencies in your area, that would be helpful. I think the hope is that, while there are no guarantees, some of the people on these lists might make their way into the agencies ultimately. Our role, therefore, is to check whether there is much overlap between the names here and the names were seeing/generating for sub-cabinet positions in each agency. There doesn't need to be total overlap, but if there is a total disconnect, it would probably be better to rectify that now vs. later.

I hate to ask, since I just send you another long spreadsheet to check, but if you could do this tomorrow and get back to Lisa (copied here) and myself, that would be great.

Thanks.

We encouraged them to think carefully about the optics of the teams since they will be public, and to try to include people of diverse ethnicity, geography, employer etc. without creating unwieldy teams. In the interest of time, we are sending you the list before Don, Melody and I review it -- we are meeting later today to go over it. It is a draft, and we look forward to your input. Subject: Drugs and Terror Monster Conjugated Aggravation in the Middle East

SALVATION OF MANKIND BY NARCOTIC VEGETATION ERADICATION FROM THE AIR BY UNMANNED AIRCRAFT VEHICLES

Mr. President,

Unmanned Aircraft Vehicles

Development proved being capable of hitting even point targets. It is well known that Afghanistan has World record of Poppy Opium Production of about 200 tons annually yielded from a cultivated 157,000 hectares area. That enormous dope amount (90% of world opium production) is in my opinion the main financial source for Terror Organizations' Weaponry Acquisition. According to my assessment, UAV could have been Redemption for Entire Mankind if being utilized as follows: 2,4 D Defoliant is splashed on the Narcotic Vegetation causing its Desertification within several days inevitably. The following favorable consequences might have been anticipated:

1) Severing of Terror Organizations from their Financial Source that dry up with Narcotic Vegetation Desertification
2) Salvation of millions of Potential Drug Addicts from Awful Agony and Death
3) Rehabilitation of US Deterrence that has weakened considerably after Nine Eleven Horrendousness
4) Precipitation of NATO Troops Evacuation from Afghanistan as a result of UAV Bombardment Intensification resulting in Terror Suppression Reinforcement
5) Deterrence of El-Qaida Reactivation by leaving a Souvenir of dry Poppy-Opium Bushes from pulling out NATO Troops
6) I suggest having a Debate in the Senate that might hopefully lead to successful termination of the Afghan War after being stuck in its Marsh for 12 long years
7) Waiting for your Response as US friend since 1948
8) There could not have been any doubt about terminating the Armed Conflict in Afghanistan Honorably averting an Ignominious ending up as currently impending.
9) Similarly, Central American Dope Smuggling could have been drastically diminished by UAV Utilization for Narcotic Vegetation Eradication Grown on Mountainous Gradients. Very large amounts of Dope are smuggled annually into the US having found hitherto no efficacious way of overcoming that calamity
10) Please contact me by scheduling a meeting at US Embassy in Tel -Aviv for Clarifications with your experts' participation specializing in Explosives, Electronics and Aviation
11) I have got all the required specifications for getting mankind be extricated from the two conjugated calamities, Drugs inundation and Terror attacks of Innocent Population thanks to UAV activities.
12) To my great astonishment, my correspondence versus US Senate Committee on Armed Services has been irresponsive despite the extraordinary importance for entire Civilization Meanwhile as many as one billion of Muslims are threatening America encouraged by their Nine Eleven Precedent Success
13) In reminiscence, as many as 50,000 Aircraft were ordered according to Presidents' Roosevelt Ordinance after the Japanese Attack of Pearl Harbor while 7000 UAV by comparison are being idled in Storage letting the Afghan Armed Conflict be continued indefinitely.
14) Please let me explicate for US Air-Force an efficacious way emerging victorious from Afghan Entanglement in favor of Entire Mankind instead of suffering an ignominious defeat.
15) To my great surprise, US Does not exercise its Self Defense Right according to UN Charter Chapter 51 (1946), enabling Criminal Organizations of Third World Countries attacking it with impunity. Nine Eleven Catastrophe could have been averted if the US had utilized its complete Arsenal particularly UAV in high numbers instead of being kept idle in Magazines.
16) I propose meeting your Experts for UAV, Explosives and Electronics at US Embassy in Tel Aviv for thorough debate about Dual Headed Monster Decapitation in favor of beleaguered Mankind believing in great success of my Innovative Unprecedented Method as an only feasible efficacious expedient against it.
17) Is White House Correspondence Team busy to such an extent being unable responding even most important letters?

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

18) To my great Astonishment Dereliction of US Air Force results in smuggling of Tremendous Dope Amount from Central America via Mexico into the US with its Awful damage for many millions American's Health
19) I don't see any reason for hesitancy! The President may issue tomorrow an ordinance in order to open emergency Magazines, getting ten thousands of UAV
Aloft in order to achieve Narcotic Vegetation Desertification with achievement for Posterity
20) Emerge preferably with an Upper hand honorably instead of being ignominiously defeated!
21) Despite being Non US Citizen I think to have done my best in assisting ending up
Afghan War victoriously thanks to my Innovative Narcotic Vegetation Eradication Method, however not a single word of Acknowledgement has hitherto Reached my mailbox! In my opinion, Disparagement and Ungratefulness are conjugated at least according to my feeling!
22) There could not have been any justification keeping as many as 7000 UAV unused in magazines instead of operating them against Nine Eleven Cruel enemy. Moreover, US taxpayers have already paid for that arsenal!
23) I believe Mr. Attorney General that Narcotic Vegetation Desertification Utilizing UAV is the only Feasible way of getting Mankind been extricated from the Doubling Stricken Menace Grabbing, Drug and Terror Simultaneously.
24) November election is going to be beginning of President Obama last Congress Tenure working with but if the President is being able Indicating Monumental achievements. He might have been eligible into the Parlor of great Leaders having annihilated Drugs and Terror calamities for Posterity affluence
25) Wiping out Narcotic Vegetation and launching consequently an Overwhelming
Strike on Terror Organizations by UAV Utilization might have been an Unprecedented Achievement of Entire Mankind and President Obama personally.
26) Incredibly, no reaction has come from the White House in latest four years despite My pure intention for assistance for the US as well as Entire Civilization!
27) In my opinion Nobel Institute might have contributed to a very great extent to Drug and Terror Monster Decapitation in favor of Entire Civilization.
28) Prime Minister of Israel might have contributed a great role in exerting an influence on US and Western Governments in General in a Universal Effort of Dual Headed Monster, Drugs and Terror simultaneous eradication

Be successful

Gideon Rodeh

There is no justification losing an Election Campaign Ignominiously instead of emerging Victorious honorably! The Democrats should have mobilized the entire US Media attacking the Republican for an Exploitation of US Contingency to vote against their own Interests in favor of big Oil Corporations! Such incessant Transmissions would have been a very efficacious Deterrence for most Democratic families to abstain from voting against their own Interests!

Be successful

Gideon Rodeh

Subject:	Liu He Meeting Confirmed -- Requesting Topics for Meeting

Hello John,

Liu He meeting now confirmed for Friday morning 9:00am.

His office is requesting meeting "topics" in advance. Some suggestions for the advance list:

1. What are his personal views on the potential for US-China cooperation on finance for sustainable development, particularly regarding common standards for AIIB and other new and existing financial institutions? How might such international cooperation best overlap with domestic policy needs that his team is working on for 13th five-year plan -- what types of cooperation would he see as the most beneficial for China's domestic objectives?
2. US policy toward China-to-US energy FDI: to what degree is this a priority issue for the Chinese leadership? Is there anything Chinese planners would view as a real 'win' here that is actually doable?
3. Updates regarding 13th five-year plan

What are your thoughts? They may use this to prep so will wait for a green light from you to send.

Looping Pete.

Subject: FW: Names for guest list

Tina:

Wanted to run this by you before proceeding. EB would like to send the following email to the list below. Okay with you?

Dear FIRST NAMES:

In April you received a save-the-date for The Broad's inaugural dinner on Thursday, Sept. 17. Since that communication was sent we have learned that President Clinton plans to attend the dinner we are hosting on Friday, Sept. 18. The Thursday and Friday celebratory opening dinners are essentially twin events—both are seated dinners with the same live entertainment. Because of your close relationship with President Clinton we would like to move you to the Friday, Sept. 18 dinner. Printed invitations with more details will be mailed mid-July.

Edye and I very much hope you can join us in LA in September to celebrate the opening of our museum.

With best regards,

Eli

Vernon and Ann Jordan
Gene Sperling and Allison Abner
Mickey Kantor and Heidi Schulman
Haim and Cheryl Saban
Roger Altman
Henry and Mary Alice Cisneros
Wes Clark
Chelsea Clinton and Marc Mezvinsky (email will be adjusted appropriately for them)
Al Gore
Donna Shalala
Larry Summers and Lisa New
Tobey Maguire and Jennifer Meyer

Subject: [big campaign] Tracking Update: Palin Rally in Findlay, OH 10/22/08

Hello All,
Just got off the phone with our tracker, Lisa, on the ground in Findlay. Below are the notes from our call.

Big Highlights

- Again outlines the 4-5 scenarios, based on Obama's foreign policy, that might lead to "international crisis" test Biden warned us about
    - says that we can't just brush this off as a stupid thing biden says -- madeline albright said biden's comments were just "a statement of fact"
- When ron paul demonstrator disrupted and was escorted out while palin was thanking vets in audience, palin says if that was a protester, i think they escorted them out too early- they wouldve learned from you honoring our military.
- ends speech saying He, I, We are "proud" to be an american
- Continues to allege that Obama is "hiding his real agenda" of redistributing your hardearned money

Findlay, OH: Palin Rally 10/22/08

(Disclaimer: The following are notes, not direct quotes. If you'd like a quotable transcript or video of any part below, please email us.)

Background details

- 2500 ppl
- Lee Greenwood sings
- Speakers:
    - President of Findlay University
    - Congressman Jim Jordan - praises Scott O'Brady, shot down in Bosnia
    - Chair of Women for McCain, Betty Montgomery
    - Mike Chrise (sp?)
    - Congressman Bob Ladder, mentioned ANWR
    - Duran Davidson (previous speaker of the house) i love Whirlpool, i love Firestone, but what's really important are our small businesses
        - When davidson asks who should be our next VP, crowd member yells Ron Paul!
    - Senator... Roydavich: in 2004,we showed 'em, palin deserves to be our VP, will be great, this is a crusade -- quotes bible verses
- no overt negativity from the crowd
- Ron Paul supporter continues to yell Ron Paul! during palin's speech, escorted out -- palin says: if that was a protester, i think they escorted them out too early- they wouldve learned from you honoring our military.

Speech Highlights

Mr. Patriotic, Lee Greenwood. Couple kids here today: Willow and piper; and my husband, Todd Palin. he's a commercial fisherman and production operator, steelworkers union, great dad 4x iron dog champ. 13 days from today, its time for choosing. theres no time to wait or to waste. are you ready to make mccain next potus?

we'll start by asking if you heard what biden said at a fundraiser on Sun? he guaranteed if obama is elected, we'll face internatl crisis in we also heard from Madeline Albright if it was true we should expect an internatl crisis if obama is elected. she said, its just a statement of fact.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

joe didnt specify, so looks for clues at obama's fopo.

did you hear that senator biden said at a fund-raiser on sunday that he guarantees if barack obama is elected we will face an international crisis within the first six months of their administration? i guess we've got to say, "thanks for the warning, joe." he told his dem donors there were at least 4 -5 scenarios that would threaten Dem administration. he did not specify what these scenarios would be. you'll just have to go to the obama foreign-policy agenda for clues.

for clues, look to Obama fopo policy. crisis situation #1 meeting with terrorists without iran without preconditions. #2 sending the military to pakistan without the approval of the government. invading the sovereign territory of a partner in the war on terror. #3 opposed the surge that has brought vicotry in iraq w/in sight. he's voted to cut off funding for troops. he wants to pull out leaving our military men and women and risk. he wants to wave white flag leaving iraqis at mercy of iranians and shiite extremists and AQ. by his own admission, american troops might want to go back. #4 indecision and moral equivalency after georgia invasion, the kind of response that would only encourage putin to invade ukraine next. #5 the real crisis biden's next speaking engagement the real problem is that these warnings from joe biden are similar to his earlier assessment throughout the primary. he said that barack obama was not up to the job. he is not ready to be president. he said that the presidency is not something that lends itself to on-the-job training. the same joe biden who said he would be honored to run on the ticket with john mccain because he said the country would be better off with john mccain.

here we have some common ground with biden. i too, want a pres who spent 22 yrs in country's uniform. i want a pres. who's not afirad to say 'victory. a president ready to lead on day 1, pres w/ judgment and wisdom truthfulness experience ready to meet-- or better yet, avoid next internatl crisis. i want a pres who wants to win the war on terrorism and as mom of troop in iraq, i know we need mccain as next comm-in-chief in hancock county, youre known for letting your spirit show so lets use that to thank the vets and active military here today. TY. TY sir. yes we do TY for service and sacrifice. if that was a protester, i think they escorted them out too early- they wouldve learned from you honoring our military.

its great to be in hometown of Steeler QB rothersberger. ben and findlay obvi know a lil something about victory and i hope you can put us over the top on election day. OH, are you ready to carry this state to victory? make JM the next potus? to send us to dc to shake things up?

i hope youre all here b/c you know the stake:: the future of our country. tough econ times, now more than ever we need someone tough as pres, w/ experience, courage, good judgment and truthfulness. someone w/ bold and free and fair plan. we need JM.

we'll help families keep homes and retirees keep investments. we'll help all get affordable HC. we help students. we'll get econ back on rgith track. we'll bring tax relief to all americans and businesses. small business is backbone. how many are SB owners here today? we're speaking today. we'll help you keep more of what you earn so you can hire more ppl. families, we'll lower income taxes and double chidl tax deduction for every family and cut the capital gains tax and cut business taxes - right now, the business tax in US is 2nd highest in world, we'll cut that to help keep Am businesses in america.

on taxes, clear choice. our opponent is not being candid about his tax plans. again, its not neg or meanspirited, we're gonna keep doing this - calling someone out. its in fairness to you to have everyone understand what the choice is. you have to really listen to his words. he's hiding his real agenda of redistributing your hardearned money. he says hes for a tax credit, which is when govt takes your money and gives it to someone else. we're for a tax cut which is when govt just takes less. this allows you to invest acc. to your priorities.

it's not meanspirited or neg to call someone out on record and assocs. its in fairness to the electorate. he's hiding his real agenda of redistributing your hardearned money. he says he's for a tax credit, when govt takes and redistributes your money acc to their prirorities. we want a tax cut, we want we need to hand it to Joe The Plumber. he succeeded in getting our opponent to do something no one else has: state his agenda in plain language. senator obama says that he wants to spread the wealth. what that means is that government is taking your money and doling it out however a politician would see fit. barack obama calls it spreading the wealth. joe biden calls higher taxes patriotic. but from right here in ohio, joe the plumber said to him it sounded like socialism. and now no time to experiment with socialism.

when he left joe's neighborhood in toledo, i dont think our opponent was too pleased. it seems their staged photo-op got ruined w a real person w/ a real question. he asked question, stood for so many americans. and now theyre investigating and attacking Joe The Plumber.

but americans are IDing w/ Joe The Plumber. in NM i saw a sign saying ed the dairyman. at a VA rally for Mccain, i saw a man named Tito Munoz, we call himTito the builder. tito the builder isnt pleased at how obama camp and the media have been roughing up Joe The Plumber. Tito wants to know why the heck are you going after Joe The Plumber? joe has an idea, a future, he wants to be somewhere else. why is that so wrong? tito is an immigrant from colombia. he says everything is possible in america. i made it, joe can make it bigger than me. i was born in colombia, but i was made in the usa.

so tito isnt the only mccain supporter who feel that way. signs have shown the same: phil the bricklayer, ann the engineer... if you work hard and want to get ahead and believe america is the land of possibilites and dont want your dreams dashed by obama tax incr, and dont like how our opponents have treated a guy who just was asking obama a question, then we're all Joe The Plumber. do we have some here? doesnt sound youre supporting obama the wealth-spreader in this plan. [communist!]

thats b/c you understand obamas plan discourages productivity and it will stifle the entrepreneurial spirit that has made this country unique and it has made it the greatest country on earth.

our opponent's plan is just more big government, and john and i think that is the problem, not the solution. instead of taking your hard-earned money and spreading your wealth, we want to spread opportunity so people like you and joe the plumber can create new wealth and create new jobs.

so we're gonna put govt back on side of ppl. we're going to confront the $10 trillion debt that the federal government has run up. thats not right, not fair, that wont happen on our watch. john and i will impose a spending freeze in the federal government's budget on but the most vital functions of government. we have to do this for the fed gvot to be expected to live w/in its budget as you are in your homes, in your businesses, as we have to do as govs and mayors.

you can count on us to follow thru on our promises b/c we're the only ones w/ track records of reform. we will balance the fed budget by the end of our first term.
we havent just been talking the talk, but walked the walk.

as a sen, mccain has confronted abuses of pwr and as he'll tell ya, he has scars to do it. from his own party and from other party also, he's been known as teh maverick taking on the special interests and insider dealings. as pres, he'll end them once and for all.

my track record. as mayor, i eliminated personal prop. taxes and sm. business inventory taxes. we made our town a place where businesses could grow and thrive. it was a progrowth, proprivate sector agenda. we were able to hang that shingle outside our city door that said We're open for business! and it worked, and we took off a vibrant, booming community b/c we had a progrwoth, proprivate sector agenda. we got govt out of the way to let businesses grow and thrive.

as gov, i vetoed nearly $0.5B in wasteful spending. there too, we ruffled some feathers. we suspended state fuel tax and returned a chunk of surplus back to ppl b/c they can spend it better than govt can spend it for them.

in AK, we got back to basics and put govt back on side of the ppl, we'll use that same commonsense approach to reform DC b/c in our admin, i promise we'll never forget who we're accountable to, we'll be working for you, the ppl of USA. you the ppl.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

are you ready to send us to DC shake things up and clean things up?

john and i will set this country firmly on a path to energy indep. we're gonna develop new energy sources and tap into what we've already got: oil, natural gas, coal. we'll create thousands of new jobs instead of circulating billions and being beholden to volatile regimes that use energy as a weapon. we'll develop alternative sources, clean coal technology and safely drill. we'll drill here and drill now. and that's when you start to chant. we'll drill baby drill and mine baby mine. for security and for prosperity and job opportunities, we need american energy by american ingenuity and american workers. USA!

i appreciate that. you really do get it and i appreciate you guys.

1 of the missions that we'll take on for you, in addition to energy indep and govt reform, should we be blessed to serve you, esp close to my heart, that is to help fams w/ kids with special needs. it was mother teresa who said that god has created everyone of us, every human, for greater things, to love and be loved. no matter our party or backgrd or affiliations or gender, there is a voice of humanity there in those words. it speaks to all of us. john and i have vision of america where every innocent life counts and everyone has the chance to contribute. where every child is cherished. thats the spirit i want to bring to DC. as gov, i secured more assistance and funding to students w/ special needs. as VP, we'll do more, ushering spirit that says life is sacred, it matters, it should be protected. ill make sure that children, that all our fams know, yep they'llhave advocate in WH.

nov 4 coming quickly. itll come down to what we believe in. mccain and i belivee in what reagan believed in: fwd mvmt of frdm not constant expansion of govt. best of USA not all gahtered in DC, but in goodness of everyday, hardworking ppl in ppl in our factories, teaching, fighting our wars, protecting us and protecting the virtues of frdm. we so believe in the promise of this country in all of its opportunites. and we believe america is not the problem, america the solution. USA. we may not be a perf nation but we learn from our mistakes. collectively we represent some perfect ideals. we're that beacon of hope for all that seek equality and frdm and opportunity. we're still that shining city on a hill reagan spoke of.

and i thank god we have a man ready and worthy to lead that nation. he inspires us w/ heroic and trustworthy deeds and not just words. if you believe what we believe, you're ready to shake up DC and WS, and you want to clean up DC, , we're asking for your vote.

you'll hear our opponents go on and on about how they'll "fight for you". since my running mate usually wont say this for himself, ill tell ya: there is only 1 candidate in this race who has ever really fought for you. he, i, we are proud to be an american. he is the only man with courage to keep fighting for you. he is john mccain.

Subject:	No means no

John--

Extremist Congressman Todd Akin's callous reference to “legitimate rape" means he is no longer just running against one woman for U.S. Senate. He and his radical allies in Congress are now running against women everywhere. Well we're hear to tell them that no means no.

Virginia women who have been violated need you to hurry up and fight back now -- your support is critical.

I was just in our nation's capital for the "We Are Women Rally" this weekend. I joined thousands of women because here in Virginia, like other parts of the country, our rights are under attack -- first painful ultrasound procedures and now this.

My husband John Douglass defended our rights during his military service to our country. And if it wasn't for the heroism of one young female corporal, he may not have survived one of several kidnap attempts on his life. So I know he'll be a champion for our rights in Congress

But he urgently needs us to join him in our effort to take back Congress. Will you rush a contribution to our campaign today?

The personal liberty of Republican and Democratic women alike is at stake in this election. And I don't care what Congressman Akin, Congressman Hurt or others on the extreme right have to say about the matter, no rape victim is illegitimate. If we let them get away with forcing their political agenda on Virginia women, what's next? Donate Now.
With Women Everywhere,

Susan Douglass

DEMOCRACY
A JOURNAL OF IDEAS

New Issue of Democracy: A Journal of Ideas Now Available

December 11, 2013

Dear John,

Five years ago, the Tea Party burst onto the scene, animated by resentment toward Barack Obama and economic anxiety. Far from a fleeting populist eruption, it has been arguably the defining political movement of our time—a sobering thought considering what we hoped the world would look like after Obama's historic 2008 election.

A government shutdown and a near-default later, it must be asked: Has the Tea Party finally exhausted itself? Or is its grip on the conservative establishment as tight as ever? We assembled a symposium of some of the finest thinkers and writers on politics and conservatism—Theda Skocpol, Alan Abramowitz, Sean Wilentz, Leslie H. Gelb & Michael Kramer, Christopher Parker, and Dave Weigel—to tackle these and other questions about Tea Party America.

Next, three very sharp essays: First, from Nick Hanauer & Eric Beinhocker, is a vital interrogation of the way we measure growth and prosperity—and how progressives can redefine those terms and make our country a more just place. Next is Jonathan Lusthaus on the growing problem of cybercrime, and why we need to rethink our defensive approach to the problem. Finally, Heather Hurlburt ruminates on the changing nature of warfare in an age of unbound drones and limitless surveillance—a subject that will likely be at the center of our security debates for years to come.

In our previous issue, William Galston & Elaine Kamarck wrote about what today's GOP can learn from the Democrats of 25 years ago. In this issue, Ramesh Ponnuru and Jamelle Bouie each give their take on Galston & Kamarck's argument. Elsewhere, Jillian York responds to Henry Farrell's much-discussed piece on technology intellectuals.

The reviews, as usual, are stellar. Jeffrey Goldberg on Pakistan's dysfunctional relationship with the United States. Sheri Berman on Edmund Burke, Thomas Paine, and how their debate informs our politics today. Mike Abramowitz on Raphael Lemkin, the man who coined the term "genocide." And Emily Bell on the twilight of the Rupert Murdoch empire.

It's the season of giving, so we hope you'll consider giving a tax-deductible donation or signing up for a subscription, for yourself or a loved one. If you're on Twitter, be sure to follow us @demjournal. And we have a Facebook page, so please take a moment to "Like" us. We are also debuting a brand new mobile site. If you visit our website on your mobile device, you'll find reading Democracy on your smartphone a smoother, more user-friendly experience.

Thank you as always for reading, and enjoy! I'm sure you will.

Is the Party Over?
The Tea Party came out of the October fiscal fiasco looking pretty awful—to everyone, that is, except Tea Partiers. With establishment conservatives now starting to push back, what comes next? Our experts examine the movement's staying power, its historical antecedents, its foreign-policy impacts, and its chances of nominating the GOP candidate in 2016.

Why the Tea Party's Hold Persists by Theda Skocpol

Republican Leaders' Two Choices by Alan I. Abramowitz

The Anti-Jacksonians by Sean Wilentz

R.I.P. Republican Internationalism by Leslie H. Gelb & Michael Kramer

Will the Tea Party Outlast Obama? by Christopher S. Parker

The Tea Party and the 2016 Nomination by Dave Weigel

Capitalism Redefined by Nick Hanauer & Eric Beinhocker
What prosperity is, where growth comes from, why markets work—and how we resolve the tension between a prosperous world and a moral one.

Electronic Ghosts by Jonathan Lusthaus
A technological approach to cybercrime will only lead to a tech arms race. We need a new plan that starts with figuring out who cybercriminals are.

Battlefield Earth by Heather Hurlburt
This year, Congress will reconsider our expansive, post-9/11 definition of war. It must start with a realistic assessment of the existing threats.

Responses

Evasive Maneuvers by Ramesh Ponnuru
Today's GOP hasn't bottomed out, but it still needs to be more open to change than it is. A response to William A. Galston and Elaine C. Kamarck from the right.

Demography Is Not Destiny by Jamelle Bouie
It might be true that the GOP's appeal will remain limited to whites. But it might also be true that the definition of "white" will change. A response to William A. Galston and Elaine C. Kamarck from the left.

Closed Network by Jillian C. York
Technology may be redefining our intellectual life, but some things never change—especially for women. A response to Henry Farrell.

Dear John –

A thousand thanks for rejoining Team Obama to support the work of the Administration. With the departure of strong players like Pete and Heather who really understand climate change, conservation and the need for a balance approach to development, my concern about making meaningful progress was increasing. I look forward to working with you over the coming year to really help deliver on the Climate Action Plan and a conservation legacy that the President and American people will be proud of.

Welcome back!

Archdiocese of Guatemala Files International Petition against US and Guatemala for Human Rights Violations and Crimes Against Humanity STD Experiments

Overdue Justice for Guatemalan Victims of Venereal Disease Experiments

A petition for the victims of U.S. and Guatemalan experiments that infected vulnerable Guatemalans with venereal diseases was filed today in the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights by the Office of Human Rights for the Archdiocese of Guatemala, represented by the UC Irvine School of Law International Human Rights Clinic and The City Project of Los Angeles.

Hannah Robinson, Consultant for the Oficina de Derechos Humanos de Arzobispado de Guatemala (785) 312-4533
Catherine Sweetser, Co-Director, UC Irvine School of Law International Human Rights Clinic (646) 549-6817

First there was silence, then investigation, and then denial of a remedy. Now, over 70 years later, may come international justice. Today, the Office of Human Rights for the Archdiocese of Guatemala filed a petition in the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights on behalf of the victims of the U.S. and Guatemalan governments' scientific experiments that infected vulnerable Guatemalan people with syphilis, gonorrhea, and chancroid. At least 5,000 Guatemalans were purposefully infected, and only a small fraction received treatment. The rest were left to suffer, almost without purpose; though the experiments were well-documented, the results were virtually abandoned before the research team pursued their purported aim: the discovery of whether penicillin could be used as a preventive treatment, or prophylaxis.

The experiment were motivated by the government's desire to stamp out sexually transmitted infections that were ravaging soldiers during the Second World War. Similar experiments were started in the 1930s in rural Alabama with African American men with syphilis, known as the Tuskegee Experiments. The experiments were conducted with a team of researchers from the US Public Health Services. Dr. John Cutler, who directed the Guatemala experiments, also took part in the Tuskegee experiments. Other similarities between the Tuskegee and Guatemala experiments include the lack of individual consent to the experiments, lack of treatment for infected victims, and deception of victims and the public. In Guatemala, researchers intentionally infected the victims and generally left them without treatment or compensation for the remainder of their lives. In Tuskegee, the nearly 400 victims were already infected but were left without treatment for nearly 30 years while U.S. government researchers observed the progress of their infections. The United States eventually provided treatment and compensation for victims, families, and heirs in Tuskegee, including funding to locate the victims and pay attorneys' fees.

In Guatemala, experiments were conducted beginning in the 1940s and continuing through at least the 1950s on some of the most vulnerable populations in Guatemala: mental health patients, prisoners, soldiers, prostitutes, and even orphans. There is no documentation that orphans were ever purposefully infected, but orphans already infected with syphilis did receive experimental treatment options in exchange for medical supplies given to the orphanages. The rest of the vulnerable populations were infected through injections and the topical application of infected material, usually transmitted by causing an abrasion on the victims' genitals. These experiments were conducted without the victims' consent and without any compensation — sometimes, the research team gave the victim a pack of cigarettes afterward.

The drastic effects of the experiments have been passed down through generations, since untreated syphilis also infects children. The petitioners in the case before the Inter-American Commission are children and grandchildren of the infected population, who suffered from birth defects such as blindness, paralysis, and still-birth. The victims are petitioning with the Office of Human Rights for the Archdiocese of Guatemala, one of the leading non-governmental organizations for human rights in Guatemala City.

Petitioners are legally represented by the International Human Rights Clinic at the University of California-Irvine Law School, directed by international human rights attorneys Paul Hoffman and Catherine Sweetser. The petition has been filed against the U.S. and Guatemala at the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights in Washington, D.C., claiming violations of the rights to life, health, freedom from torture, and crimes against humanity under both the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man, and the American Convention on Human Rights.

To the governments' credit, both the U.S. and Guatemala later apologized and issued reports about the unethical medical experiments. Under the direction of President Barack Obama, the U.S. established a Commission to investigate and expose the crimes, publishing a report in 2011 on the findings called "Ethically Impossible: STD Research in Guatemala from 1946 to 1948." However, the petitioners' attempts to hold the perpetrators accountable in U.S. civil courts was unavailing — the District of Columbia Court of Appeals decided that the victims were too late, since the accountable governmental authorities had already left office. Jessenia Ovalle, an attorney in Guatemala working for the Office of Human Rights for the Archdiocese of Guatemala, states that the ultimate goal of the petition is "truth and justice for the Guatemalan victims' families of these experiments through comprehensive and dignified reparations." Another federal case is pending in Baltimore against the private entities involved, but not against the government entities.

The petition also alleges the denial of a right to a remedy for human rights violations, as the victims have never been compensated. According to Citlalli Ochoa, a law student at UC Irvine School of Law who wrote the international petition with the International Human Rights Clinic: "Given that U.S. courts have denied victims a remedy, it was important for us to seek international avenues to hold the governments accountable. Keeping this issue in the public eye within a legal context is crucial for ensuring government accountability and preventing similar events from happening again."

According to Robert García, a civil rights attorney with The City Project / Proyecto del Pueblo, who is co-counsel on the petition and who was born in Guatemala, "Intentionally infecting Guatemalan people without their knowledge or consent, and leaving them untreated to the present day, is a crime against humanity. It violates international law, and domestic laws against rape and assault. Apologies are not good enough. Truth and reconciliation require treatment, compensation, and restorative justice. This can never happen again to anyone anywhere." The City Project / Proyecto del Pueblo is based in Los Angeles, CA.

Edwards takes lead in InsiderAdvantage Iowa poll

By Tom Baxter
Southern Political Report

December 18, 2007 —

John Edwards has leapfrogged over his rivals Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama, and leads the Democratic field in Iowa, according to the latest InsiderAdvantage/Majority Opinion poll. In the Republican caucus race, Mike Huckabee continues to hold a narrow lead over Mitt Romney.

The race among the three top Democrats is extremely close, with the potential for any of them to finish first – or third.

Edwards leads with 30 percent in a poll of Democratic voters who said they intend to participate in the Jan. 3 presidential caucuses, followed by Clinton with 26 percent and Obama with 24 percent. When the sample was narrowed to the most likely caucus-goers, based on several questions, Obama leads Edwards by less than a percentage point with 27 percent, with Clinton in third place at 24 percent.

Edwards holds a significant advantage, however, among a group who could be key to the first contest of the presidential year: those who say their first choice is someone other than the top three. Under Iowa Democratic Party rules, candidates who poll less than 15 percent in the first vote at each caucus around the state are eliminated, and their supporters get a second chance to vote for another candidate.

Under both screens, Edwards leads as the second choice of these voters, with Clinton trailing Obama.

"If Edwards is the second choice at this stage of those who intend to vote for other Democrats, then it would not be surprising if he produced a bit of a shock in Iowa," said InsiderAdvantage CEO Matt Towery.

Towery said the firm employed the same methodology with regard to asking the second choice of those who were voting for candidates other than those in the top tier, and obtained an accurate picture of John Kerry's lead.

The poll of 977 Democrats who said they will go to the caucuses, conducted Sunday and Monday has a error margin of plus-or-minus 3 percent. The tighter screen of 633 voters has an error margin of plus-or-minus 4 percent.

The Republican race is a duel between Huckabee, with 28 percent in this poll, and Romney, with 25 percent.

Rudy Giuliani, who has led most national polls of the Republican candidates, garnered only is in 6th place in this poll, behind Fred Thompson, with 10 percent, John McCain, with 9 percent, and Ron Paul, with 6 percent, in addition to the two frontrunners.

In the tighter voter screen, the frontrunners change places: Romney leads with 28 percent, to Huckabee's 25 percent.

The poll of 835 Republican voters who said they intend to go to the caucuses has an error margin of plus-or-minus 4 percent. The tigher screen of 418 voters has an error margin of plus-or-minus 5 percent. Both the Democratic and Republican polls were weighted for age and gender.

Dear all,

DC Water valve crew would be on site to shut down a water main on Thursday, 2/5/15 from 10:30 P.M. to 6:00 P.M. The Williams Library is the only building that will be affected. After this water main is connected, D.C. Water will demobilize until June 2015 when they return to work on a 30" water main connection. During the final tie-in this summer, only the Williams Library will be affected.

Subject:	The Phoenix Incident

Hi John,

I recently read your tweet from a year ago regarding the disclosure of sealed UFO files. With so many people currently talking about this topic, I honestly believe the landscape is ripe a social conversation to take place. There's a new film I'm hoping will lend an opening towards this conversation - THE PHOENIX INCIDENT, a heart-pounding extraterrestrial thriller about the unsolved mystery of the Phoenix Lights - the largest UFO incident in North American history!

Check out the trailer: http://www.phoenixincident.com/#!video/cgys

THE PHOENIX INCIDENT will make its U.S. premiere with Fathom Events in theaters nationwide on March 10th, 2016.

THE PHOENIX INCIDENT, being dubbed the "REAL" X-Files, is the debut feature film of writer-director Keith Arem. Arem, a native of Arizona where UFO sightings made global news, is an accomplished gaming industry veteran who has talented directed AAA franchises including Call of Duty, Saints Row, Ghost Recon, Spiderman, Tony Haw Pro Skater and Titanfall.

With the 19th anniversary of the Phoenix Lights soon approaching; and as you're already aware, with Presidential candidates such as Hillary Clinton vowing to investigate UFO's and Area 51, this film couldn't be more timely!

I would love to send you an advanced link of the film to view. Also, perhaps a conversation with Writer-Director Keith Arem could also be of interest to you.

I would love to hear your thoughts!

Best,
Gennifer

Synopsis:
INSPIRED BY TRUE EVENTS. THE PHOENIX INCIDENT is based on the largest UFO sighting in North America known as the Phoenix Lights. Blurring the line between fiction and reality, the fact based, sci-fi thriller revolves around a military conspiracy and the controversial missing person's case surrounding the infamous 1997 event.

Mothers of the Movement Event

Here's a summary, but for those of you that didn't watch...it was quite something.

She opened by acknowledging Herb Buhl, who she worked with when she was down here working for CDF in the 1960s. Told a funny story about not knowing how to drive a stick shift and him lending her a manual car.

She briefly told the stories of the mothers and the children they lost.

Guns are the leading cause of death among black men, more than the other leading 9 causes of death combined. There was an audible sigh in the audience.

Talked about Gabby Giffords, and the 9 year old girl shot along with the others that day.

No fly list.

Politics are hard, I know that. But sometimes the hard things are sometimes the things that are most important to do. President Obama wants to make guns a voting issue and I agree completely.

Please welcome these remarkable people who are taking this journey on behalf of all of us.

HRC turned it over to the guests.

Sabrina Fulton: "She walked in as a Presiodental candidate, walked out as a compassionate mother."

No one took notes fort her, she took notes for herself.

Maria Hamilton, mother of Dontre Hamilton, told her story.

Lucia McBath, mother of Jordan Davis.- told her story. I have watched her bring people and countries back into the fold back into the fray, and she has done a good thing.

Gwen Carr- Talked about all the outreach, how HRC came to them. Wondering what the catch was. "There was no catch, she was just genuinely concerned." I endorse her, because she endorsed us first.

Geneva Reed-Veal, Sandra Bland's mom. Did a wonderful rant on the media and how tired she was of them. Go out and vote. We have 9 months to put her in, she's the new baby."There are no secret emails."

Mark Kelly: X percent of children that die from gun violence in the developing world die in the US.

Gabby- Here to talk about Hillary Clinton, who is tough, she is courageous, she will fight to make our families safer. In the WH she will stand up to the gun lobby. Thanks why IU'm voting for Hillary. Speaking is difficult for me but come January I want to say these two words...Madame President.

Standing ovation from the room, someone stood up and yelled "Madame President!" Everyone went nuts.

HRC said thanks to everyone, talked about their courage. I hope this is a movement that lasts, and ended to work a rope line.

At the very end, she briefly spoke to Alex Wagner on the rope line who was there with The Circus. I'm not sure it checked the box for us, but they talked briefly about how amazing the mothers were, what a moving event

- She reiterated her commitment to fight for CIR with a pathway to citizenship; protect and implement DACA and DAPA; and explore other ways to protect undocumented people via executive action ("create new categories").

- She stated support for UFW's legislative proposal to expand overtime pay for farm workers in CA, so overtime is av. after 40 hours/week or 8 hours/day.
- She was asked to help in the dispute between the UFW and CA-based Gerawan Farming. She said she's do everything possible. After the meeting, she had a private conversation with Arturo and expressed caution b/c of campaign.
- She was asked about healthcare for the undocumented community. Stated her support for all undocumented people to be able to buy in the exchange, but acknowledged that most people don't have the resources to afford it. She also said she would work to make the exchanges available to all, including subsidies, but immediately linked it to CIR. Also wants to work with states like CA and the UFW to explore other ways to provide HC
- Re Central American kids, she said government funded legal counsel for UCs and working with El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras to take down drug cartels and build the region.
- She was asked if she would appoint Obama to the SCOTUS. She said he would be a very good candidate, but she wouldn't have that power...and he probably wants a normal life. It was a fun exchange bet. her and the farm workers.

Two SC radio interviews today:

1) We did a repeat with Cynthia Hardy that ended up being a very brief conversation HRC joined in progress about health disparities in communities of color.

2) She did a slightly tougher but ultimately very strong interview with Judi Gatson of 103.1 KISS FM. She asked HRC about her recent comments on not being in this for herself, and said that some doubt that. The answer was very strong, and invoked a little reflection on sexism. She asked about youth, but the framing was interesting, which was that BdB and Eric Garner's mom endorse, but children of BdB and Eric Garner's sister do not. The other question most of note was Judi observing that she hears people in the community say that HRC embraces Obama only to pander to the AfAm population. Interesting that that broke through, (Stephanie if you talked to her I'd be curious to hear more about how often she's hearing that), HRC's answer was good, she said that Senator Sanders claiming that was offensive, that she nominated him at the convention, campaigned for him, worked for him for 4 years, and that it "affects" her "personally" to hear Sanders and his supporters say that stuff.

Finance event in Atherton was largely uneventful. She did take questions. She dinged Uber when talking about the Kalamazoo shooter, which thrilled many in the audience here in Silicon Valley, I'm sure. No encryption questions.

One more finance event and then we're off to LA to spend the night.

Good live interview with Univision local this morning. Bernie was supposed to be on right after us but bailed late last night. She did her pitch, talked about immigration, no fireworks.

Left there and dos two back of house visits, Caesars and Harrah's. Bernie was at Harrah's immediately before us, stayed 5 minutes and left. We spent about 25 shaking hands and telling people where to caucus.

Left there and went to 2 caucus sites, the second of which she's working the (long) line at as we speak.

The Bernie folks are definitely here, but our organizers tell us these are very strong locations for us.

We visited the home of Vicki Early, a retired California utility company employee who moved to Nevada to buy her first home, and installed solar panels on the roof, which she could afford with the Public Utility Commission offsets on her fixed income until they got rolled back. She and her boyfriend Tyrone showed HRC the panels in the back yard and told her story. HRC had the press come in closer to listen and then dos brief remarks of her own on the importance of this issue for people like Vicki. Pretty great stuff.

Next we went to Youthbuild, an organization with a Nevada chapter that builds houses for Habitat for Humanity. We walked through a big warehouse where HRC individually met about 15 workers. She was intrigued by how most of them found the place, which was through Craigslist, and probed them on what they were learning and what they wanted to do next. Most wanted to continue in the building trades. She spoke briefly, and invited the Youthbuild and Habitat folks to speak as well.

We've also squeezed in two SC radio interviews. Both went well, talked about the Clyburn's endorsement, support for President Obama, her plans on college affordability.

Headed to the town hall with high school students now.

Women and Families Roundtable:

Very engaging discussion, topics ranged from early childhood education to food deserts to Flint. HRC brought up Flint proactively, and a woman stood up and said that she had family there, appreciated HRC saying that, her work there, and that her assessment was exactly right. Audience was diverse across the board, lots of millennials and lots of young people who work for various NGOs and advocacy groups with a lot of very good questions and passionate comments. At the end HRC commented on her life's work, figuring out how to make difference in people's lives as opposed to promising them the moon, and making sure lives are better when you're done than when you started. Wasn't too hot but poignant and noticeable following 45 minutes of discussing the importance of reading to your children every day.

We're now going to divert course and make a pit stop at a woman's house who has been affected by the Nevada Public Utility Commissions retroactive rate changes on people selling solar back to the grid. Pool is with us.

South Carolina was quite something. Good crowd of about 450/500 at Denmark-Olar Elementary School (home of the Vikings). HRC stuck largely to her remarks and outlined her $125 billion plan to improve underserved communities, and took questions on just about everything: social security, health care multiple times, body cameras, Flint, homeless vets, Trump, student loans, who she's pick for VP, and a little girl who gave her a drawing that said on it: "I'm not bossy I have leadership skills." It was a very engaged, high-energy affair.

Following the town hall and a long ropeline, we did 2 TV stand ups and a print interview. Discussion in both revolved around race relations, the state of the race, and education, which HRC discussed at length in a dilapidated older locker room with paint people off the walls in the background.

Our print interviewer, Princess Williams, was really impressive. She won an award last year for best student journalist in a college under 5000 students from the South Carolina Press Association. She was nervous but did a great job, asked HRC about education, what we can't do beyond government programs to help level the playing field, attracting young voters, and what life is like off the campaign trail.

We're in the air now headed back north to St. Paul for the Humphrey-Mondale Dinner.

HRC arrived to volunteers chanting "I believe that she will win!" and worked the crowd. She shook about 75 hands and took lots of photos, and then did an impromptu stand up with the morning show anchors. They asked her about how she's feeling and expectations, she just talked about how excited she was to be out talking to people and her love for New Hampshire.

We took a few more photos and talked to WMUR for a few minutes, which will air at noon.

Now we're in Nashua now headed to another location and on the phone live with Mike Pomp of WTSN radio. Good conversation, she's talking about her experiences up here, basically a perfect Election Day drive time interview.

More to come.

HRC and WJC stopped by Chez Vachon for breakfast. Nice greasy spoon with a French Canadian twist. HRC and WJC worked the tables, ran into some longtime supporters, took a lot of selfies. President Clinton was excited to see his photo still on the wall from when he visited last.

Dan O'Neil, former Dodd and O'Malley supporter but '92 Clinton supporter joined them for omelettes. Following breakfast, some more selfie-taking ensued as did a conversation with a couple of vets. Restaurant felt overwhelmingly supportive.

We went back to the hotel and taped 6 TV interviews with local and Boston affiliates. Lots about the state of the race here and the weather. Most asked about Warren which she handled well, a couple of transcripts questions and a good exchange with FOX on sexism in politics.

From there we went to Manchester Community College. Crowd of about 1100, she did a few things differently, including calling Bernie out for accepting DSCC money that came in part from Wall Street.

We taped Rachel Maddow after the event. It opened with the staffing question and then covered the waterfront...Flint, trust, attacks, transcripts. We let it go so Rachel would spend more time on the positive which she did.

After Maddow we went to the Velcro factory. She went table to table in their cafeteria which looked like a Johnny Rockets, shaking hands, sometimes sitting down for brief conversations. Press pool got some good stuff.

We're now back at the Radisson waiting to depart for WMUR where we'll do a quick live hit on WMUR, she'll simply make a one minute pitch to voters direct to camera.

The crowd was extraordinarily supportive. Her remarks were brief (12/15) but strong, with powerful response.

Afterwards she took photos, she did a very quick local standup in the sanctuary (all about Flint), met with a group of local pastors and went into the stakeholders/electeds meeting with the mayor.

On the way to the airport we called the editor of the National Newspaper Association, quick 5 minute interview on the importance of Flint and their being many other Flints. Transcript to follow.

Descending back into NH now, going to do an OTR at the Puritan Backroom (!!).

ANN KIRKPATRICK FOR ★ U.S. SENATE

John,

It's been over five years since the Supreme Court issued its decision in the Citizens United case. Five years since they swung open the gates and let special interest groups stampede over our elections.

That's five years way, way too long in my book.

Dark money groups have spent millions upon millions of dollars to influence elections since 2010. It has to stop.

We want to pass a constitutional amendment to reverse the effects of Citizens United. It's not a simple process, but we can do it -- as long as we have folks like you fighting with us.

Join my colleagues and me in calling for a constitutional amendment to end Citizens United. Add your name to our petition today.

It will take a huge effort to corral dark money groups. Especially the ones backed by powerful figures like the Koch brothers or Karl Rove.

But our democracy wasn't designed for them. It was designed for the people, by the people.

And it's up to us -- the people -- to take it back.

Add your voice to mine and thousands of others. Together, we can stop the damage Citizens United has caused.

Thank you for signing on today. I appreciate it.

Ann

And Who's Vetting McCain's Veeps? A Former Lobbyist, Natch

June 10, 2008 1:23 PM

And amidst all this back-and-forth, parsing and equivocating about Jim Johnson, the man who is vetting Sen. Barack Obama's vice presidential hopefuls, we now ask: who is vetting Sen. John McCain's would-be heirs to the throne?

The only reason any of us even know that former Reagan White House counsel Arthur Culvahouse is helping McCain vet his Veep possibilities is because Sen. Lamar Alexander, R-Tenn., told The Hill last month.

"It's Arthur B. Culvahouse, that's who's heading the search," Alexander said, spilling the beans.

Culvahouse is a partner at O'Melveny & Myers and despite McCain's past anti-lobbyist posture, A.B. Culvahouse has been in the past a quite successful lobbyist -- though he is not one currently.

According to lobbying reports (you can read them HERE), Culvahouse lobbied Congress, the Justice Department and the White House and Department of Justice for a group pushing tort reform, the Civil Justice Reform Group, which the liberal group Public Citizen says has worked to weaken the rights of consumers, describing it as "a coalition of general counsels from more than 50 of the Fortune 100 firms."

Time Warner hired Culvahouse in 2003 to lobby Congress to continue the moratorium against internet taxation -- which many states and localities say hurts their ability to provide effective government services, and many small business say is unfair, as once argued by Secretary of Health and Human Services Mike Leavitt back when he was governor of Utah.

Aerospace titan Lockheed Martin retained Culvahouse in 1999 to lobby for a Senate bill that would have enabled the Secretary of Transportation to give Lockheed Martin and other companies financing for the companies to develop "commercial space transportation vehicles with launch costs significantly below current levels."

Culvahouse has occasionally lobbied on behalf of Fannie Mae -- which Obama VP vetter Jim Johnson helmed, of course. Records indicate Culvahouse lobbied Congress, the Office of Federal Housing Enterprise Oversight, and the Department of Housing and Urban Development on regulatory issues concerning Fannie Mae. (This may be why we haven't heard the McCain folks hit Obama about Johnson's controversial time at Fannie Mae.) Culvahouse also lobbied the Senate to obtain approval by the Federal Housing Finance Board of Fannie Mae's Mortgage Partnership Finance Program, records show.

The McCain campaign would not agree to answer questions about the appropriateness of McCain -- who once described himself as having taken on the "iron triangle of money, lobbyists and legislation" -- securing the help of one of the rungs of that triangle in vetting his possible No. 2.

Hey Mr. Podesta,
Hope you and your wife are well. Bummer about the fall. I did not put any hardware in the finger. Only took out Dupuytren's fibrous tissue cords. Please feel free to email or text me a picture of the finger (cell: 301-787-1040). My biggest concern would be a fracture, as the stiffness of the soft tissues can put extra load on the bones with this kind of injury. If it's still hurting tomorrow night, I could scan it in the surgery center on Monday AM around 7:45 to check, but if it's getting more painful, would recommend an x-ray this weekend. Don't hesitate to call.

On a brighter note, I might have access to a few guaranteed entry codes for the Cherry Blossom 10 miler again. It's on April 12. If I can get one for you, are you interested?

I ran the Marine Corps Marathon this year, but I was really underprepared and only got a 4:55. Will have to budget more time to train in the future.

Take care, Mustafa

Subject:	Two Giants Pass

Dear Friend,

This week we saw the passing of two giants: Former Representative Louis Stokes and Julian Bond, Former Chairman of the NAACP.

Though their loss is felt both deeply and broadly, their efforts throughout their lifetimes fighting for African-Americans remain today. A co-founder of the Congressional Black Caucus, Congressman Stokes' establishment of the Office of Minority Health stands as a memorial to his work improving access to healthcare for minority communities. Julian Bond's young voice for civil rights helped to ignite a movement across the country that inspired a generation of young black men and women like me. His long career as a champion for civil rights and his resistance in the face of institutional racism will continue to inspire long after his death. These men were true American heroes.

We have come a long way, but we have many new battles ahead of us and unfortunately some of the same ones too. Voting rights of African Americans and minorities are still under attack in this country. Every day black men receive harsher penalties in court than their white counterparts. Our prisons are bursting with non-violent offenders while our schools are allowed to remain overcrowded and underfunded – these are intimately related.

The loss of Representative Stokes and Chairman Bond has left a hole in our movement we need to fill. Fighting for a fair and just society for everyone is not a task we can afford to leave to a few dedicated individuals. We all need to take part in the struggle for equality.

I hope you will join me and others as we carry on the legacy of these civil rights giants.

Best,

Glenn

What do folks think about this as a post-game statement she could make to press?

• I came here today to honor the service of four Americans killed in the line of duty and to contribute in every way I could to learning the lessons of Benghazi and better protecting our people in the field. That's why I answered every question the Committee asked for X hours.

• As I said at the outset, I hoped we would put aside partisanship and reach for statesmanship. After all, our cou ntry has a long history of bipartisan cooperation on national security. And to sustain our leadership around the world, we need responsible leadership here at home.

• Unfortunately, that's not what we saw today. I'm disappointed that the Committee wasted so much time on que stions with little or no relevance to the attacks in Benghazi or improvements we should make going forward. Co ming on the heels of seven previous Congressional investigations and a non-partisan Accountability Review Boa rd, it's hard to see how today's hearing added anything to our understanding of these important issues.

• As this eighth investigation now comes to a close, I think we can all agree we've seen enough political theater. It's time for Congress to step up and work with the administration to provide the resources and reforms we need to better protect our diplomats and ensure the United States can continue to be represented in dangerous place s.

• I am going to continue making the case for smart American leadership in the world and I will always be an advo cate for the brave men and women who serve our country.

Subject: CEA's analysis of today's employment data

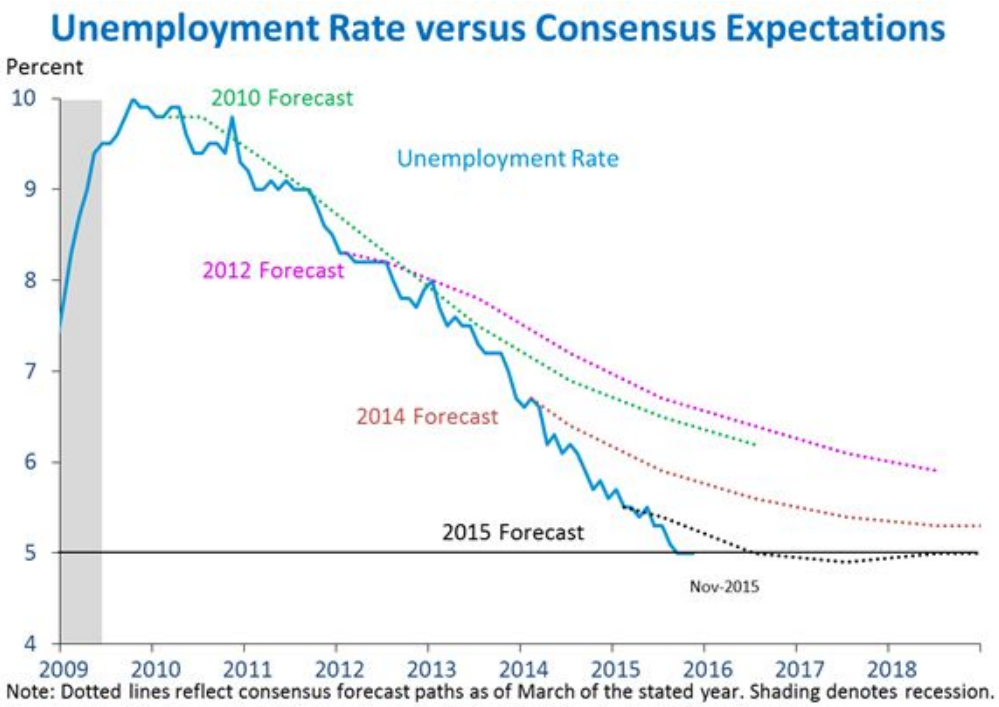
https://www.whitehouse.gov/blog/2015/12/04/employment-situation-november

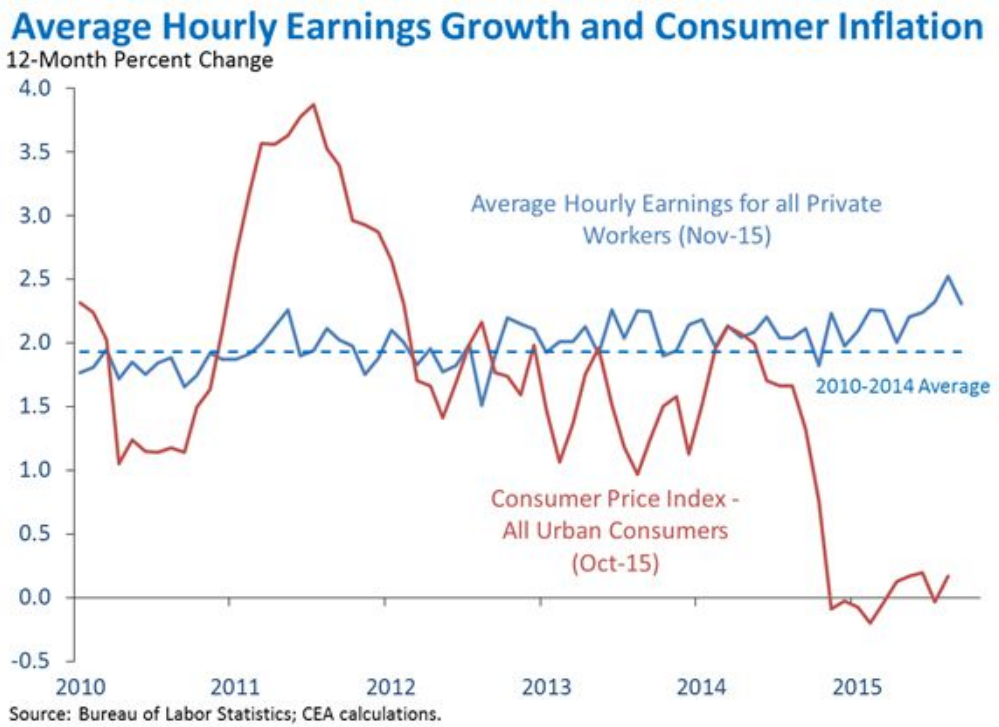
The Employment Situation in November

The strong pace of job growth continued in November as the unemployment rate held at its lowest level since April 2008 and labor force participation ticked up. We have added more jobs over the past three years than in any three-year period since 2000, and wages are continuing to rise. Nevertheless, we have more work to do to drive further job creation and faster wage growth. That's why Congress should take steps including passing a complete budget that builds on October's bipartisan budget agreement, approving the Trans-Pacific Partnership to open our exports to new markets, and raising the minimum wage.



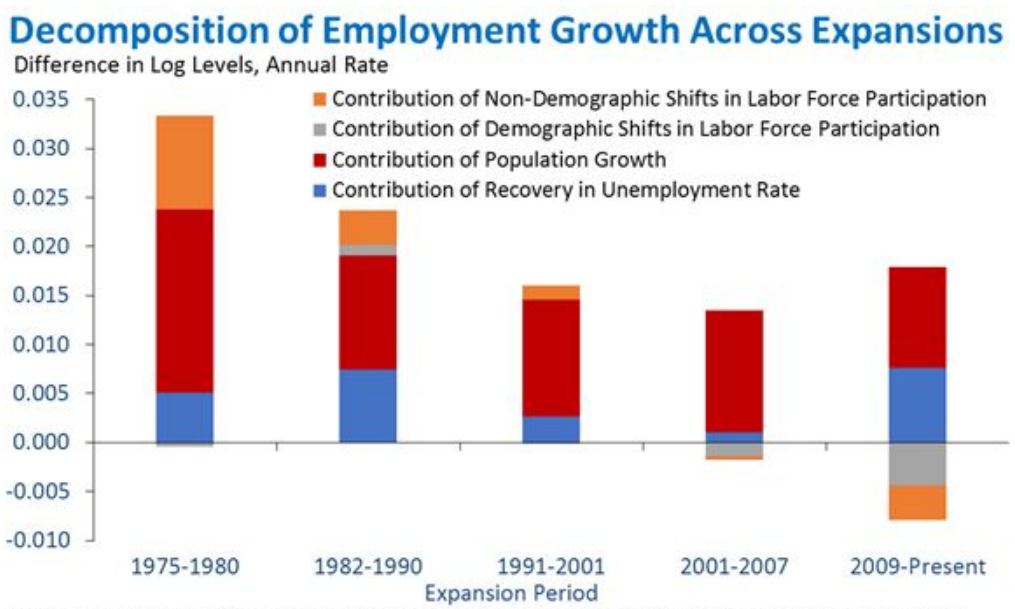
FIVE KEY POINTS ON THE LABOR MARKET IN November 2015

1. Our businesses have now added 13.7 million jobs over 69 straight months, extending the longest streak on record. Today we learned that private-sector employment rose by 197,000 jobs in November. Private employment growth in September and October was revised up by a combined 52,000 jobs, bringing October's growth to 304,000—the best month of the year so far. The unemployment rate held at 5.0 percent in November, even as labor force participation edged up to 62.5 percent. Wages continued to rise; nominal average hourly earnings for all private employees have now risen 2.3 percent over the past year. Overall, our economy has created 8.1 million jobs over the past thirty-six months, the fastest pace since 2000.



2. The unemployment rate has consistently fallen much faster than economists expected throughout this recovery, reaching 5.0 percent considerably earlier than projected. The chart below shows the median paths of the unemployment rate forecasted in each of the past four years by a large panel of private-sector economists. Each year the unemployment rate declined markedly faster than economists expected, a testament to the remarkable pace of employment growth observed throughout this recovery. As of March 2014, economists expected the unemployment rate to remain above 5.0 percent at least until 2020. Even as recently as March 2015, they expected unemployment to average 5.0 percent throughout 2016—but it reached that level just last month. Of course, the recovery in the unemployment rate does not tell the entire story of the labor market recovery, and important challenges (such as wage growth, discussed in point 3, and non-demographic components of labor force participation) remain. But the strong progress so far is encouraging evidence of the health of our labor market.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.



3. Average hourly earnings for all private-sector workers rose 2.3 percent over the past twelve months, a somewhat faster pace than the average over this recovery. Although earnings growth has not yet reached desirable levels, it increased amid the strong pace of employment growth over the past year. At the same time, declining energy prices have driven inflation to especially low levels, benefiting wage-earners by further boosting real (inflation-adjusted) earnings growth. Even over the past three years, real hourly earnings for production and non-supervisory workers have risen 1.6 percent per year, well above the average annual pace of 0.5 percent during the previous economic expansion. The recent uptrend in nominal earnings growth is an encouraging sign for the labor market, but because nominal earnings often grow between 3 and 4 percent during expansions, there is more work to do to boost wages as the recovery continues.

4. The demographic factors that boosted employment growth in previous decades have been less supportive during this expansion, but the recovery in our unemployment rate has been especially strong. Employment growth depends on three factors: population growth, the extent to which the population participates in the labor force, and the extent to which the labor force is employed. The chart below decomposes employment growth into contributions from each of these factors. It further decomposes labor force participation into shifts attributable to demographics (such as the changing age distribution) and shifts attributable to other factors (such as the increased participation of women). Demographic factors boosted employment growth in previous decades, as population grew faster than current rates and baby boomers reached working age. But in this recovery, demographic factors have been less supportive as overall population growth has slowed and the baby boomers have begun to retire. However, the sharp decline in our unemployment rate—reflecting the depth of the recession and the strength of our job market recovery—has contributed more to employment growth than in any of the past five expansions.

Note: Expansion periods are defined using monthly NBER business cycle troughs and peaks, except for the current expansion which extends through October 2015. Demographic shifts in the labor force participation rate (LFPR) are defined as the difference between actual LFPR at the start of the expansion and a counterfactual LFPR for the end of the expansion, constructed by assuming that LFPR within age-gender cells remained constant throughout the expansion. Non-demographic shifts in LFPR are defined as the difference between the actual change in LFPR and these calculated demographic effects.
Source: Bureau of Labor Statistics, Current Population Survey; CEA calculations.

5. Global headwinds weighed on manufacturing and mining job growth in November, while industries less sensitive to such factors continued to see robust gains. Above-average gains relative to the past year were seen in industries such as construction (+46,000), financial activities (+14,000), wholesale trade (+9,000), private educational services (+8,000), and utilities (+2,000). At the same time, manufacturing employment—which is especially sensitive to global growth—fell slightly (-1,000). Mining and logging employment, which includes oil extraction, continued to decline (-11,000) as low oil prices have slowed investment. Across the 17 industries shown below, the correlation between the most recent one-month percent change and the average percent change over the last twelve months was 0.85, somewhat above the average correlation over the previous two years.

Source: Bureau of Labor Statistics; CEA calculations.

As the Administration stresses every month, the monthly employment and unemployment figures can be volatile, and payroll employment estimates can be subject to substantial revision. Therefore, it is important not to read too much into any one monthly report, and it is informative to consider each report in the context of other data as they become available.

Act 116 of the 1987 Regular Session

Act 116 SB377

"AN ACT TO ADOPT THE DESIGN OF THE STATE FLAG AS DESCRIBED IN SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 11 OF 1913, AS AMENDED BY HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 4 OF 1923, AND HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 11 OF THE SECOND EXTRAORDINARY SESSION OF 1924."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF ARKANSAS:

SECTION 1. (a) The official state flag shall be a rectangle of red on which is placed a large white diamond bordered by a wide band of blue on which are twenty-five (25) white stars. Across the diamond shall be the word "ARKANSAS" and four (4) blue stars, one (1) above and three (3) below the word "ARKANSAS". The star above the word "ARKANSAS" shall be below the upper corner of the diamond. The three (3) stars below the word "ARKANSAS" shall be placed so that one (1) star shall be above the lower corner of the diamond, and two (2) stars shall be placed symmetrically, parallel above and to the right and left of the star in the lower corner of the diamond.

(b) The three (3) stars so placed are designed to represent the three (3) nations, France, Spain and the United States, which have successively exercised dominion over Arkansas. They also indicate that it was the third state carved out of the Louisiana Purchase. Of these three (3) stars, the twin stars parallel with each other typify that Arkansas and Michigan are twin states, having been admitted to the Union together on June 15, 1836. The twenty-five (25) white stars on the band of blue show that Arkansas was the twenty-fifth state admitted to the Union. The blue star above the word "ARKANSAS" is to commemorate the Confederate States of America. The diamond signifies that this state is the only diamond bearing state in the Union.

Bill Clinton

When the Confederate flag issue arose in the 2000 election, Matt Drudge reported that then-President Bill Clinton's spokesman Joe Lockhart was asked about the issue. Lockhart told reporters, "I've just never heard any discussion or any objections that the president has raised.

In 2000, Drudge reported Vice President and Democratic nominee Al Gore as accusing then-Texas Gov. George W. Bush of refusing to take a stand on the Confederate flag issue, which then was flying over the capital dome in South Carolina.

Drudge wrote :

The Gore campaign over the weekend repeatedly refused to comment on the vice president's silence when it comes to the flag flying over the Arkansas State House!

"The vice president will not be commenting on the Arkansas flag," a campaign rep told the DRUDGE REPORT.

The debate of the Confederate flag resurfaced after the terrorist attack on the Emanuel AME Church that saw nine people slaughtered because of the color of their skin.

Someone moved oppo research today designed to put WJC and HRC in a tough spot by noting that the Arkansas flag has a confederate star on it and WJC signed legislation making a Robert E. Lee holiday in 1987. I believe there is legislation in the Arkansas legislature to repeal the holiday.

There has been some limited activity on Twitter about this and we have only gotten one question from Jake Tapper. (We are not responding to him tonight.). So I don't think this is something we need to resolve tonight but the issue could hang around and HRC could get asked about it - so worth thinking about potential responses.

The Robert E Lee question has popped up now and then, going back to WH days. As far as we can discern, we have never engaged in a substantive way.

Team WJC - when ready, would you let us know your all thoughts on how and if we should engage on these questions? I imagine making a decision on the Arkansas flag and the holiday repeal may make for complicated politics back home - so understand this is tricky and could take time to figure out.

We will stand by on our end, or happy to do a call tomorrow to talk through.

HRC has an event at a black church on Tuesday in St Louis, for awareness.

Thanks, all.

John,

I know, it's that time of year again. And I understand you're just as tired of getting these messages as I am of sending them.

But here's the deal: my former opponent is getting in this race. She's already put in her own money, and right-wing PACs have already endorsed her. We pulled off a big upset in 2012, but I promise, this is going to be harder.

I wouldn't bother you right now, except we're still $2k short of our goal and we only have 10 hours. I really, really need your help before the midnight FEC deadline.

In the past you've been very generous – if you could pitch in $500 right now, it would be huge: we set up a page for last minute contributions here.

I can't tell you how much your support means to me. It's the reason we won last time and it's the reason we'll hold this seat when they come for us this time.

Thank you so much,

Sean

Bill,
Robby said that you might want to sit down again and talk policy. I could do something Wednesday afternoon, early Thursday afternoon and then I head out West for a week of vacation and a week of fundraising. If this week doesn't work for you, we can get together when I'm back or arrange something with Jake Sullivan and Maya Harris. Let me know if any of that works.

Dear all:

See above email list. Thanks for so many people helping put this list together.

This is the latest email list of individuals invited to our December 13 event. Please look it over and let me know if anyone is missing – or if there are errors in email addresses -- either White House Counsel's office or Political/Press office during the 1990s. As we get closer to December 13, will remind you about the need for final set of RSVPs – will send out reminder of details sometime in late November.

Also, one of our colleagues, Ron Klain, has been appointed Ebola Czar. I attach a link below of my weekly column, called "Purple Nation," writing about Ron's appointment – I thought you would agree with my perspective. (Also, if you want to be a regular recipient of my "Purple Nation" column via email, would be happy to add you to list.)

Here is my Ron Klain column – feel free to Tweet the link – given the cheap shots Ron has received, it would probably be good to do.

Ron Klain as Ebola Czar: The Right Person for the Right Job at the Right Time

by Lanny J. Davis

http://thehill.com/blogs/pundits-blog/healthcare/221221-ron-klain-as-ebola-czar-right-person-for-the-right-job-at-the

So does anyone doubt that if President Obama had appointed a medical expert to become the Ebola "czar" to manage the Ebola virus crisis, many Republicans would have criticized him for not appointing someone with experience in crisis management, media and political communications? Or if the president had appointed someone with those media/political skills, they would have criticized him for not appointing a medical expert?

Get the drift?

Ron Klain, whom I have known for over 20 years, is the right choice at the right time to bring order, management, discipline, media and political communications skills to helping the American people understand what is happening and not happening and why. My guess is Klain's approach will be, to reframe the familiar expression, "it's about communicating, stupid"; and/or "it's about winning trust, stupid."

Klain has followed a remarkable career path in Washington. He served as associate counsel to President Clinton; and chief of staff for Attorney General Janet Reno and Vice Presidents Gore and Biden. And famously, Kevin Spacey played Klain's part in the HBO version of the true-to-life drama of the 2000 presidential election recount in Florida, which Klain ran for Gore. In short, his career has followed the multidisciplinary path of skills — law, media, politics, communications — that is just what the country needs to demonstrate that our government and our president can manage and get out in front of this Ebola crisis. Klain's lack of medical expertise is certainly not as important as having these many crisis management skills, especially communications. Undoubtedly, he will rely on medical experts as part of his team.

So far, this crisis has been made worse by the absence of transparency by almost all involved. For example, recall when the supervisor of the Texas Health Presbyterian nurse, Amber Vinson — who treated the Ebola-stricken patient, Thomas Duncan — called the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) to ask whether Vinson should board a commercial flight back to Dallas. Here's what the CDC told us was its response: that Vinson "was not told she could not fly."

That is a double negative, last time I read English. What was she told, exactly, in plain English? By whom? Why? What procedures are in place to do better the next time? None of those issues were addressed by the CDC in plain English.

No doubt, Klain would have worded that CDC statement differently. He knows the basic rules of crisis management because he has lived through and managed multiple crises in business, politics and life by following these rules: Get the facts out, get them out yourself, clearly and plainly, and get everyone working together to fix the problem.

President Obama, you made the right choice. No matter that rabid partisan Republicans are criticizing you. It's "Groundhog Day" as far as that goes.

I only hope the president does what President Franklin Roosevelt did during the Great Depression — use the "fireside chat" on TV and radio to talk directly to the American people to reassure us that this horrible disease can be contained. We want, we need, to know everything, good and bad. Ron Klain will help the president do this, as I believe will the rest of his White House team.

And then there are Republican and Democratic candidates in campaign ads using the Ebola crisis to gain last-minute advantage in the coming congressional elections. Some Republican have accused Democratic candidates of favoring porous borders that make us vulnerable to the Ebola virus. And Democrats have blamed Republicans for supporting "cuts" in the CDC budget, and thus, undermining the anti-Ebola effort — a charge that The Washington Post Fact Checker gave the maximum of Four Pinocchios.

To these Republicans and Democratic candidates, I say: Shame on all of you.

Hello John, Herb, Steve, and Susan,

Larry and I just talked. He's submitting the paperwork for $1 million over three years — no promises, of course. This is great news! And, while he started by saying he could only do three years, he then talked himself up to five years before I could say anything. We'll see …

He also noted that our materials struck him as not leaning hard enough into what we call the "whether and how." I will take another pass through the documents in the coming weeks, but he said he was happy to send the pieces he has along to his folks.

Best,

Subject: Who is behind the Bad 3?

Dear Neighbor,

Who is behind the Bad 3?

They are trying very hard to make sure you don't know. And they're trying very hard to make sure you don't know what damage 60, 61, and 101 would do to Colorado.

Reporting this week in the Denver Post opened a window on the backers of these intentionally misleading, job killing measures as they attack the process of creating the "Blue Book," the state-prepeared voter guide. The only backer of these initiatives who will speak refuses to do so publicly. In fact, she will only communicate with the state by e-mail. The Post says this is because "proponents were not interested in meeting in person."

But the e-mails are instructive. In one, the backer likens the nonpartisan analysts in charge of developing the Blue Book to Joseph Goebbels, one of Adolph Hitler's top lieutenants. Seriously!

Pledge to vote NO on the Bad 3 .

The name on the e-mails is Natalie Menten, who bills herself as a champion of transparency. In 2009 when running for Lakewood City Council, she told the Denver Post that all workings of government "should be disclosed early on by using every method of notification available. Lack of information is misinformation." If transparency is so important to her, why won't she even show her face?

Good governance depends on transparency, so Colorado voters ought to ask themselves why proponents of a trio of tax-slashing measures are so stridently arguing to keep a fact-based analysis of them out of view.

—Denver Post Editorial (9/1)

The Post notes that the phrasing and use of capitalization in e-mails from Menten looks highly similar to two other e-mails the state received directly from Doug Bruce. That suggests Doug Bruce is just hiding behind Natalie Menten.

Bruce is accused of violating the state Constitution for failing to disclose who has financially backed the Bad 3. He's spent months making a mockery of our campaign finance laws—and the courts—by dodging process servers after repeatedly failing to appear in court.

The right wing is hell-bent on wiping out our campaign finance disclosure laws. Doug Bruce is their poster child. Who is backing the Bad 3? Is it out of state business interests trying to damage our economy to eliminate competition? Is it ultra-rich government haters like the Koch brothers who own land in Colorado and don't want to pay property taxes? Thanks to the devious behavior of people like Doug

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Bruce, we don't know.

What we do know is that Amendments 60 and 61 and Proposition 101 are opposed by Democrats, and they're opposed by Republicans. They're opposed by Colorado business, as well as labor. Liberals and conservatives. Rich and poor. The people pushing these attacks won't show themselves, and they are counting on voters who are angry about the economy not looking any deeper than having taxes cut during a recession. That's exactly what happened the last time Doug Bruce hornswoggled Coloradans into voting for one of his crackpot ideas—TABOR during the Bush recession of 1992.

We have to put a stop to this. Pledge to vote against these destructive initiatives.

Best regards,

Mike Ditto

No orders placed or spend estimates yet. But assume with a news-only buy that this wouldn't be a huge buy. Will update if we get anymore info, though.

For this request, the group didn't specify - the request was only for 'PAC - IE O'Malley', but the agency has been linked to O'Say Can You See. Unfortunately no more information just yet, but will let you know asap when we see more.

PROGRESSIVE TURNOUT PROJECT

That's a wrap on Republican presidential debates in 2015, John.

And not a word about voter turnout. Well, John, we can't say we're surprised.

Then again, widespread efforts to suppress voter turnout in Republican-dominated states and the millions that the Koch Brothers are funneling into their own right-wing turnout machine speak volumes.

Take just a minute to respond to our Presidential Survey. It will help us shape our strategy for fighting back against the Kochs and boosting Democratic turnout in 2016:

John,

Tonight , thirteen Republican candidates for president will take the stage for their fifth and final debate of 2015.

Four debates down, and yet not one Republican candidate has acknowledged this simple fact: too many Americans find voting too difficult.

But while they remain silent, the Koch Brothers are doubling down on strategies to increase Republican turnout and keep progressives from the polls. So John, while Republicans candidates "debate," we need your help strengthening our strategy for boosting Democratic voter turnout in 2016.

Click here to take our Presidential Survey and help us boost Democratic voter turnout in 2016 →

Remember: It's crucial that we obtain a strong scientific result with a low margin of error.

Time Republicans spent debating in 2015: 540 minutes
Time Republicans spent debating voter turnout: 0 minutes

John, Republicans know what happens when overall voter turnout reaches record lows in America -- they win huge majorities.

In 2014, record low voter turnout across America led to a Republican wave election.

But Republicans aren't just banking on Democrats staying home on Election Day. They're investing in their own voter turnout strategy. Already, the Koch Brothers have poured millions of dollars into a conservative voter turnout machine that's copying some of President Obama's best strategies.

They have teams of engineers and data analysts combing through the information that their volunteer army gathers on Koch-bought iPads.

We'll never match their billions -- but with our knowledge, we can fight back by using our expertise to increase Democratic turnout in some of the country's key races.

Take our brief Presidential Survey so we can better prepare our strategy for fighting back against the Kochs:

Subject: Election Night Gathering

Dear John,

Thank you!

Your passion, energy, enthusiasm, dedication and support is the reason we're here today.

At the beginning of this campaign, everyone told us this couldn't be done. With your hard work, we stood up for our convictions and took our message of accountable leadership all across this great Commonwealth.

There is much yet to be done -- DO NOT FORGET TO VOTE ... and remind your family and friends!

But now is the time to pay you the tribute you've earned. So, thank you. Thank you for your time, your hard work, your perseverance, your friendship, and your continued support as we work to bring the change that Pennsylvania deserves.

After the polls close, please join us for an election night gathering, a gathering that will celebrate a victory for the working families of Pennsylvania. Join us for a night you richly earned.

Subject:	A few questions

John and Chris,

We are having the personnel manual reviewed by lawyers at Perkins Coie. Below are some highlights that I think you will be most concerned with and so wanted to solicit your opinion/comments if you have any.

1) Hours of Operation: M-F 9:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m., Saturday 9:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m., and Sunday 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.

2) Holidays: Veterans Day, Thanksgiving Day, Christmas Day, New Year's Day, and MLK Day

3) No leave policy provided

4) Dress Code: "all employees are expected to dress in attire appropriate to their position and duties.

5) Business Cards: None provided

6) Travel - Hotel and Airfare/Train Fare (coach) covered. No meals. Mileage is reimbursed. Hotels are not be used as housing. Encourage all outside consultants/full-time volunteers coming to DC or Chicago to work to find housing.

7) We do have a Whistle Blower policy (as required of non-profits) and Conflict of Interest policy

8) Because we are following the OPM GS schedule for pay, regular staff assistants and mail clerk, etc. are eligible for overtime pay. Executive Assistants are not eligible for overtime given their level of responsibilities. We do have money apportioned in the budget for overtime.

9) With only 77 days, we are not following government on snow emergencies. We intend to keep the office open and encourage staff to arrive if they can. In the rare occasion that a geniune snow storm prevents metro from running, we will make an announcement via e-mail and phone greeting.

10) Health insurance is provided.

Hey John,

I'm just walking out of a meeting with Sean and I wanted to bring you up to speed.

Here's the deal: outside polling shows we're tied with 42 days to go. The Republican Party is already on air with attack ads. The special-interest money is out of control and it's only going to get worse.

We're on TV fighting back, but Sean and I agree - we need to up our ad buy and really take the fight to them right away. We just can't wait.

We need to raise another $30,000 by the end of the month, which is Sunday. I wouldn't ask if it weren't so important, but we really can't do it without you.

Give as much as you can. Even $20 will go a long way toward battling back against the GOP money machine. Click here if you can help us out.

I'll be back at the office soon, so feel free to call me there if you'd prefer. The number is (845) 831-9110.

As always, thank you so much for everything you do. We really appreciate it.

Tim

Hey There,

I wanted to make sure you saw Dorothy's email about the Republican Governor's Association making its fourth million dollar donation to Ken Cuccinelli's campaign in the last month.

If we're going to be able to match Cuccinelli's RGA-funded attack ad-for-ad, we need to close a key gap in our budget. That means raising $30,000 by midnight tonight — and we're just $4,565 away.

Will you donate $5 before midnight to make sure we cross the $30,000 mark and have the resources we need to fight back?

Thanks,

Please rush a $5 donation today to make sure we can fight back against the RGA's attacks on Terry.

I can't tell you how much I appreciate your support and work for Terry.

Thank you for continuing to step up when it really matters,

Attachments:	8-13-15 IA college town hall BULLETS 630pm.docx

Hi all -- with apologies for the short fuse, here are bullets for the Secretary's town hall tomorrow in Iowa. These are identical to her town hall in New Hampshire on Tuesday, except I've significantly chopped down the Republican hit, and I've added a few bullets on our help to student parents. I'm pasting the new bullets below.

I need to get these to the book by 7pm, so please send me any edits in the next 20 minutes if you can.

Help for parents:

And today, I want to talk more about one important piece of the New College Compact: giving more support to students who are also parents.

One of out every four post-secondary students in America is also raising a child. Think about that – one in four. Many are single parents. And many are working full- or part-time on top of that. So they're taking classes. They're up late studying. They're earning a living. And they're trying hard to be the best moms and dads they can be.

That's not easy. In fact, it's heroic. It's exactly what we want parents to do – get a good education so they can get a good job, earn a good living, and give their families a better future.

The financial benefits are clear. Students with college degrees earn more than half a million dollars over their lifetimes than students with high school degrees.

A soon-to-be-released study goes even further. It found that when a parent with young children increases his or her income by $3,000, their children's future earnings go up 20 percent. So the benefits of a higher-paying job pay off over generations.

Plus, when little kids see their parents working hard to get their degree – when they see the pride on their parents' faces when they ace a test, or hang their diploma on the wall – they understand on a gut level just how valuable and empowering an education can be. And that's something we want every American child to know.

But of course, getting an education while raising children isn't easy. Plenty of parents end up dropping out. And for many, the problem isn't that that they lack the drive or the discipline. It's because they can't afford to pay for college and childcare. It's just too expensive. But they end up paying a much higher price in the long run – because they miss out on all the benefits that higher education can offer.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Plus, on average, student parents who do graduate are saddled with more debt than other students – which has its own negative impact over time.

In the interests of those families – in the interests of our country – we've got to make it easier for student parents to afford for college.

Here's my plan. First, we're going to create a scholarship program for student parents. We're calling it SPARK – Student Parents in America Raising Kids. It'll give extra financial help for students who keep their grades up. It's not a lot of money, but it's enough to help pay for gas or a babysitter – just the kind of extra help that student parents need.

I created a scholarship just like this back in Arkansas. We helped nearly 40,000 parents pay for their educations. And we saw drop-out rates go down, and graduation rates go up. The program worked. And if it worked in Arkansas, there's no reason it can't work across America.

And second, we're going to increase access to quality childcare on college campuses. Now, childcare centers already exist on some campuses, thanks to a great program that specifically helps low-income student parents. I want to expand that program. We know it works – it's gotten proven results, in the form of higher graduation and retention rates. So let's give it a boost, so it can reach more families.

Here's the bottom line. It's good for our whole nation when student parents graduate. So we should be doing everything we can to make it easier for hard-working students to afford that degree. This is a no-brainer.

Here's a bit from the article:

The Foundation for a Secure and Prosperous America, a 501(c)(4) group led by veteran Republican operative Rick Reed, will go live with its campaign against Paul on Tuesday, while the senator is in Louisville, Kentucky, announcing his presidential candidacy.

This is not the first major campaign Reed has influenced from the outside. He was the architect of the 2004 "Swiftboat Veterans for Truth" campaign that attacked John Kerry's national-security record and credentials. His new campaign against Paul will be bigger than even that effort, he said. "Foreign policy has the potential to be as big in this campaign as it was in 2004 or even greater," Reed said. "To me, given the state of the world, that's a good thing."

Reed declined to disclose his group's donors. As a registered nonprofit, the group doesn't have to reveal its funding sources. But there has already been reporting that several big-dollar Republican donors are planning to open up their checkbooks to attack Paul on foreign policy, including as pro-Israel billionaire Sheldon Adelson.

Dear John,

The Republicans can see a path to taking the Senate in 2012, and they want nothing more than to defeat Kirsten and take control.

Kirsten is going to do everything she can to stop them, but she needs your help.

We're just $37,218 away from our goal of raising $100,000 by the March 31 deadline. You've been there for Kirsten before, and we thank you for that. Now we need to rebuild our campaign for the 2012 election so we can keep Kirsten in the Senate for six more years.

Click here to make your donation now. Just $250 or $500 today will help us reach our goal of $100,000 by midnight March 31 and will help us prevent the Republicans from taking over the Senate.

The GOP has already cut family planning funding, voted to repeal all the benefits of our new health care law, and tried to wreak havoc on the EPA's budget - and there's only more to come. That's why they are more determined than ever to complete their takeover of Congress and fully implement their extreme agenda.

This all means one thing: Kirsten is in for a really tough fight.

I know she can do it because she's done it before. But she's always had you to support her. Won't you stand with her again?

This March 31 deadline is a big one. It'll show Kirsten's opponents the strength of her campaign and what they're up against. Help us prove to the GOP that Kirsten's seat is out of their reach.

Click here to give $250, $500, or more to Kirsten's campaign and help her raise $100,000 by midnight March 31. We only need $37,218 more, and with your help we can reach this crucial goal.

Now more than ever, we need Kirsten in the Senate. And now more than ever, Kirsten needs you by her side.

Sincerely,

Ross Offinger

Created some contrast between HRC and Sanders re their Wall St. plans and how to handle the big banks. WJC stuck with the language he's been using all week, talking Dodd-Frank & shadow banking.

Created some contrast on health care. Said single payer has its kinks, and/but that ultimately the important thing to understand is that we can't start over, because it's not practical. That we don't have the votes.

Said we can go to 90 to 100 percent coverage with executive action.

Said HRC got President Bush to commit 20 billion for NY after 9-11, not to build building back, but to build people back.

Called Washington, DC pure LaLa Land.

Said he's received some texts from HRC's best friend today with updates on all of the people she's meeting while knocking doors in IA.

Joked that he's grown hoarse in the service of his candidate.

WJC pointed out that there's a piece of metal from the WTC here at IA Falls Fire Department. It was donated to the Department by Port Authority of NY and NJ, in meme of the 343 NYC firefighters that died that day.

Remarks

Pretty good looking site here at in Iowa Falls.

Secretary Vilsack gave a pretty good intro, and handed it over to WJC.

He started by framing what's at stake. Said the election is about how we move together and how we preserve and grow everything we've achieved under Obama.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Covered the issues of prescription drug abuse and the economy (brought out his charts).

Talked HRC's plans to combat prescription drug abuse and her plan for coal country.

Argued that she's the best change maker he's ever met. And made all of the biographical points he's been making.

Will circulate a transcript once I have it.

No fun facts, sorry.

Remarks

A pretty fired up WJC started by saying we need a President who can restore broad based prosperity - who can take everyone along for the ride. Someone who can protect our rights, keep us safe and strong. Someone who is smart and strong, and can make good things happen.

Talked about courting HRC and learning how much of a change maker she's been, her entire life.

Used his bit about good days, bad day and other days.

Talked about HRC growing up with a Republican father and a Liberal mother. Joked that she stuck with her mom's ideals, but kept her dad's hard head.

Talked about HRC seeing MLK.

And close by making a lot of the biographical points he's been making.

Easy breezy.

Created some contrast with Sanders:

Said congress won't pass free education. And used some of the same language from earlier today.

WJC just said that it's fine to say you're for a single payer system. He acknowledged that if we didn't have something to build on, maybe it's what we should be doing. But, that we can't afford to rip away the progress we've made - that we need to build on what we have.

He made the same Wall St. argument/contrast he did earlier today. He also used the bit on Bernie calling Planned Parenthood on others the establishment. Adlibbed a bit this time saying that just because people aren't for sure doesn't mean that they're the establishment.

Said people who can afford to pay for their children's education (i.e.: him) should not get it for free. That everyone should contribute their fair share. That it'd unfair to take away money from those who need it.

Said the 90's were good, but that we need to upgrade that to get similar results in new and challenging times.

Fun fact: As it turns out, and per WJC, watermelons aren't very good when they're north of 40 lbs - because they're mostly water. He offered as much after reminding the crowd here that the world record for watermelons stood at some 270 lbs, at one point. And, that it was grown in AR while he was Governor.

Remarks

About 350 more Iowans showed up to see WJC here in Muscatine.

The field organizer (Fernando) that introduced WJC was pretty good.

WJC shared a fun little story about watermelons & acknowledged that delicious wine is made in Muscatine.

Piggybacking off of what Fernando said during his intro, WJC started by talking CHIP and health care.

He transitioned and shared a couple of the stories of the folks he's met while out here.

He then spent some time framing the election and laying out what's at stake. Covered college affordability, ISIS, immigration, trickle down economics (we did it before, we can do it again), community-police relations, voting rights, and gun safety.

Had some fun with the GOP, saying they "name and blame." Used his cold/Obama line. And said they've now resorted to blame HRC.

He created some contrast with Bernie. (Insert language above).

Closed by delivering all of the biographical points.

Said the GOP would blame Obama if the sun didn't come up in the AM.

Said that in comparison to the GOP, Democrats occupy the real world when they debate.

Even though he never mentioned him by name, he took a couple of jabs at Bernie:

Summarized Bernie's closing argument as follows: "yeah, I'll break up the big banks, tax millionaires and billionaires, and give you free education." Called Bernie's argument pretty catchy. But, said we need real answers to real problems. That it may not be emotionally satisfying, but that it's the truth. And went on to articulate HRC's colleague affordability plan.

Said her opponent's health care plan is fairly new, that it was released a couple of days ago - ahead of the last debate. He then articulated HRC's plan and made the practical argument. Closed by saying that we need to "focus the power of the presidency to further improve the ACA."

Tackled Bernie's establishment comment as well. Argued forcefully that NOT Planned Parenthood, NOR the progressive papers, NOR any of the people who work on progressive issues, OR the progressive newspapers in IA and NH that have endorsed her are part of the establishment.

Said that he and Obama are the only two Presidents since Eisenhower to have Republican Sec.'s of Defense.

Said America's approval rating went up 20 percent while she was SoS.

Remarks

shared the stories of some of the folks he's met since being here, covering the issues of health care, prescription drug abuse, and immigration. Said he was telling these stories because the election was about them (the people).

He then dove into articulating what's at stake these elections.

Said most folks are angry because change hasn't caught up to them yet.

Said it isn't close. HRC's the best change-maker.

(Insert all of the Bernie language).

Covered the economy and said we need to recapture the American Dream. Brought out his charts, compared and contrasted his performance with Reagan's, and said only one person can get us back on track.

Covered ISIS, Muslims, and the GOP's fear-mongering.

Said the doesn't want to run against her, so they're constantly attacking her. And, went on to offer all of the biographical points he's been making.

Closed with his bit on Flint.

Said he's tickled that she's tagged as part of the establishment. That her opponent calls Planned Parenthood the establishment. And then went on to use his language on HRC going to Wall St. to call them out.

Remarks

Started by effectively articulating what's at stake & why people are apprehensive about the future. Said we need to finish the recovery started under Obama and that we need to bring back the middle class.

Said we can do it because we've done it before. (pulled out his charts and gave Reagan the business).

Said we shouldn't turn our backs on important issues or turn Muslims into demons. That we should be doing this together.

Covered BLM, immigration, prescription and heroin drub abuse, dark money in politics, and voting rights.

Said that while it's important not to let the GOP not to rip away all the progress we've made, we need to work together - that we need more friends and fewer enemies.

He then moved on to the issue of guns, which he fleshed out a little bit. And then ISIS. And the frustration folks are feeling.

After he made the turn, he spent a significant chunk of time on all of the good things HRC has made happen - as a private citizen, as a Sen., and as SoS.

Covered health care.

And, the sanction on Iran. He praised HRC's effort profusely and suggested that both Obama and Kerry have acknowledged how important they've been.

And, Wall St. (Insert color).

Closed by saying we don't have time to start over and try and get things done. Said we need someone who want to continue to build on the success achieved. That we need a change-maker. That we need HRC.

Said that he is indeed mad about all of the problems we're facing (i.e.: college affordability and kids being crippled by debt), but that ultimately what we need a change- maker. And that said change-maker is HRC.

Remarks

WJC was pretty fired up here in Washington, where WJC addressed 300 people, which I'm told is a pretty decent-sized crowd.

He started by arguing that we can't afford not to elect HRC, because she would lead with more friends and fewer enemies.

Talked about HRC's toughness, using the 11-hour Benghazi hearing as an example.

Forcefully pointed out that she's the only candidate to have gone to Wall St. to warn that if they didn't cut it out with home mortgage securities that they'd drive the economy into a ditch.

Pointed out the HRC's best friend from Chicago and dozens of people from AR are here knocking doors on her behalf, that it should tell you all you need to know. That she's isn't anything like the caricature that the GOP likes to paint.

He then dedicated a chunk of time speaking about all of HRC's accomplishments a private citizen, as a Senator from NY, and as SoS.

He also created a bit of contracts on health care, but stuck to what he's been saying this whole time.

Said she would make good things happen on the good days (i.e.: when he reversed trickle down economics or signed peace in Ireland), on the bad days (i.e.: the day President Obama must've had after San Bernardino), and also on the other days.

He closed by talking about Flint.

Said we dont have shared prosperity and that the American Dream isn't exactly alive for everybody. That job #1 for the next POTUS will be to restore broad-based prosperity.

Said the GOP can't kill or occupy or bomb everyone to the stone age.

Brought his charts out again. Seemed to work better here, with WJC drawing a few laughs.

Covered health care a little bit, making the practical argument about not having 60 votes in the Senate. Said that he believes that the Republican Governors that haven't taken the MedicAid Expansion money will eventually do so, because it creates jobs. Didn't mention Sanders by name, FYI.

Said that the success of a President depends on what your positions are and what you know, but that it also depends on what you can do and whether or not you can work with others — that there's a difference between a change-talker and a change-maker.

Said that his sick of all this cynicism and all of the yelling, because it has nothing to do with people. That if folks are sick of it too, they should support a change-maker. And, that's HRC.

Remarks

WJC started by articulating what's at stake, and why we can't afford to let Republicans reverse everything that Pres. Obama has accomplished.

In framing what's at stake, he used climate change, voting rights, immigration, ISIS, and the economy under him (VS Reagan) as examples.

He then went on to talk about some of HRC's plans and positions, particularly health care and drug abuse. (Insert contrast language).

Had a little fun with the GOP, reminding folks about their 3D strategy. And, how they like to blame others for all of our problems, mainly Mexicans, Muslims, and President Obama and HRC.

He closed strongly saying we need a change-maker and not a change-talker (insert change-maker language), and dove into all of the things HRC has done as a private citizen, as a Senator from NY, and as SoS.

HRC. WJC said that hopefully it meant good things because like HRC all that Whouley has touched he's made better.

He said trickle down economics is a failure and we can't go back. (He held up his graphs!).

Argued that we shouldn't resent success, but that we should rather move forward together.

Said it's slightly crazy that you only need to be 14 years old in IA to have a gun permit.

Said Liberal Republicans don't exist anymore.

Joked that he stared at HRC for several weeks before they actually met.

Remarks

Started by framing the election and articulating what's at stake. He also talked about America's potential.

He then covered clean energy, gun safety, voting rights, inclusive politics, and the Benghazi Committee.

He transitioned and made all of the biographical points he's been making, forcefully arguing that HRC has been a change maker her whole life.

He closed by making his Flint argument & by making the same points he made last night re her faith.

We're on to the next.

BILL CLINTON: Everything she ever touched, she made better, I'm just telling you, including me. It's like just second nature and it's why a lot of these people, they don't really know how to deal with her or cover her or anything, you know. But it's evident.

QUESTION: Do you think we're covering her wrong?
BILL CLINTON: I'll tell you another example. Her best friends from childhood are coming down here, I think starting tomorrow from Chicago to canvass for her. She hasn't lived in Arkansas since [inaudible] January? 90 of them almost, 89 are going to New Hampshire, just getting four days going door to door.

At their own expense and a lot of them can't afford the trip. But they're doing it because they know her and they believe in her and they have got [inaudible] personal stories of how she made a difference and what kind of person she was.

And that's all that matters. The rest of the stuff--

QUESTION: Do you think the general public knows the real Hillary?
BILL CLINTON: What?

QUESTION: Do you think the general public knows the real Hillary?

BILL CLINTON: I think they're getting to know it, I think seeing their -- I think seeing the debates helped. I think seeing her go through that 11 hours helped. Remember what that guy in the CNN Town Hall meeting? He said, "I was a lukewarm supporter of yours." He said, "I saw that 11 hours. I am done [inaudible]. Nobody else in America could have done that."

QUESTION: Do you think that [inaudible]?

BILL CLINTON: I think it helped.

BILL CLINTON: But I think it all helps. I think the more people see her, [inaudible] they'll know what she cares about. But I think having her friends out there helps.

QUESTION: Do you think that Benghazi testimony was the strongest moment of her campaign?

BILL CLINTON: No, I think she's had a lot of strong moments.

QUESTION: Senator Sanders has gone after your wife for holding a fundraiser tonight. What's your response to that?

She spends enough time in Iowa?

BILL CLINTON: I think the far more important thing is before this economy cratered, she's the only person running for president in either party who went to Wall Street and said "You guys are dragging the economy in the ditch. You'd better change."

QUESTION: Do you think [inaudible]?

BILL CLINTON: Thank you. What?

QUESTION: Are you surprised Bernie Sanders isn't gung ho about a debate in New Hampshire?

BILL CLINTON: I don't know. I haven't thought about it. I think she said she'd do it if everybody showed up. I think debates are good for people, because they flesh out, you get to hear people talk about why they propose to do certain things.
And I personally think she's right about the healthcare thing, based on my experience. I have a -- nobody ever even got a healthcare bill for universal coverage out of committee from Harry Truman to me. But we got it out of two committees.

[Inaudible] situation. [Inaudible] when the Affordable Care Act passed. I was doing handstands of ecstacy [inaudible]. It's a lot easier to from 90 to 100 than from zero to 100 through 60 votes in the Senate and the House has voted 60 times to repeal it.
So I think the debates, though, they let you answer whatever questions people have, whatever they have. The public decides what they think is relevant.

QUESTION: [Inaudible] pie in the sky, that it just isn't possible. Is she angry enough to win in an election that we've seen where anger really has paid off?

BILL CLINTON: What?

QUESTION: Donald Trump is pretty angry. He's resonating with voters. Is she angry enough to win [inaudible]?

BILL CLINTON: It's important, if you're in this position, to have no feelings about that except you're trying to help people. She's angry that so many Americans have not participated in the recovery, have had their own potential and their [inaudible], their children [inaudible].

She's angry that we haven't done anything for these areas that have been left out and left behind, like Coal Country. She's angry that we haven't done enough to help people in this prescription drug and opiate epidemic. She just thinks about -- it's like when she called the Mayor in Flint: "What can I do to help?" That's what drives her.

What I said tonight is exactly who she's been for ever since the first day I met her. Do all the good you can. Her instinct is not who can I attack, who can I blame? It's not that you shouldn't ask people to take responsibility when they make mistakes, but her immediate instinct is what can I do to make it better. And that's what we need right now.

QUESTION: President Clinton, when you think about the general election map if Donald Trump blows this thing out and it's a Hillary Clinton match against Trump, what should voters be thinking about this week in terms of what Bernie Sanders' candidacy would look like up against Donald Trump versus your wife?

BILL CLINTON: I don't think like that. I think what voters should be thinking about this week is who is most likely to make my life, my children and grandchildren's lives and this country a place of shared prosperity, a force of security and peace and a place where we come together around solving our common social problems like [inaudible]. Who would be better?

QUESTION: But do you--

BILL CLINTON: The politics will take care of itself if people make the right decision about who's the most likely to have a positive impact.
QUESTION: And do you think the conventional wisdom will matter here for Donald Trump. I mean, if you've got Cruz who's got a better ground game, but Trump's got five million Twitter followers?
BILL CLINTON: I have no idea. I have no idea. It depends on whether it's an evidence-free or an evidence-matters election. It depends on whether people vote for someone who has a real chance to help them make their lives better. Those things are imponderable.
Anger can be a good thing, properly channeled. Apprehensiveness can be a good thing, properly channeled. It depends on how it shakes out. All we can do, all she can do is be who she is, who she's been all her life. I think it will be in the end what the American people want.

QUESTION: Do you think those people who are really angry -- do you see an opportunity for a crossover between a Clinton and a Trump voter?

BILL CLINTON: Well, I think first of all she's the very first person to say, "Hey I know they vote Republican. We ought to do something for Coal Country." We have not done a good job in America in dealing with the areas that get hurt from globalization or from the rise of climate change or anything else.

Coal employment in American peaked 95 years ago. It's not like we just learned about this. Thousands of jobs were lost when President Bush, ostensibly a pro-coal president was in office because he couldn't stop the rise of natural gas.

QUESTION: Yes.

BILL CLINTON: And so look, I think there's an opportunity for everybody to get votes

That he and HRC were the first to do so. And that yeah they weren't successful, but that she ultimately got CHIP with Kennedy.

Said Newt told him that HRC was brilliant in the senate.

Said we have to deal with what we've got, i.e.: sixty Republicans in Congress.

Used his Flint bit, which got noticed.

References the Obama interview, saying he said that she's ready to be President.

Remarks

He started by covering a couple of issues, including climate change and immigration.

He then had a bit of fun with the GOP, saying that they're masters at labeling and blaming. (Insert 3Ds line).

Followed that up by making a lot of the biographical points he's been making on the trail. He talked about her time as a public citizen (insert health care line), as a Senator from NY, and as SoS.

Covered the economy: asked rhetorically: You don't mind if Warren Buffet makes money if he creates jobs, don't you? ; and made the case why HRC will make the economy work for ever American again. He also said she's the only person running for President that went to Wall St. to speak against speculation.

Talked Flint. (Used his usual line).

Hillary Clinton Calls for Universal, Automatic Voter Registration in Houston Voting Rights Speech

During a speech at Texas Southern University in Houston today, Hillary Clinton called for expanding Americans' voting rights while decrying Republican efforts to restrict them. Clinton's remarks centered on a call for universal, automatic voter registration for every American in every state when they turn eighteen--unless they actively choose to opt out. She also called for a new national standard of no fewer than 20 days of early in-person voting in every state, including opportunities for weekend and evening voting. Additionally, she urged Congress to restore key sections of the Voting Rights Act which the Supreme Court invalidated, among other proposals.

Clinton discussed her long history of fighting to expand voting rights – from her work in 1972 to register Latino voters in Texas' Rio Grande Valley to her advocacy as Senator for legislation to make Election Day a federal holiday, mandate early voting opportunities, and criminalize some forms of voter deception.

In her speech, Clinton also denounced Republican efforts to restrict voting, which have had a disproportionately harmful effect on young and minority voters and seniors. She specifically criticized actions by Republican governors Scott Walker in Wisconsin, Jeb Bush in Florida, Rick Perry in Texas, and Chris Christie in New Jersey that have reduced or prevented early voting, purged voters, or enacted harsh and restrictive identification requirements.

A transcript of her remarks is included below:

Wow! Thank you so very much. I cannot tell you how personally honored I am to be here with all of you, to be at this historic institution. Let me start by thanking President Rudley, everyone at Texas Southern university. It's a great treat to be here, to have heard just briefly from Dr. Rudley and others about the incredible programs and progress and the fact that you graduated more than 1,000 young people into the world not so many days ago. This institution is the living legacy, the absolute embodiment of Heman Marion Sweatt and the long struggle for civil rights. and for me, to be surrounded by so many here in Houston, Texas, and indeed from across our country, who were part of that movement is especially touching. I am delighted to be here with my friend, Sheila Jackson Lee, she has been a tireless champion for the people of the 18th district and state, and the country.

I have to tell you though I thought she would tell you about the most important news coming out of Congress. And that is she is finally a member of the Grandmother's Club. And as a member of now a little over 8 months it is the best club you will ever be a member of Sheila. I have to tell you I was excited to come here and to talk about an issue that is important to Barbara Jordan and should be important to all of us. But to do so in front of Dr. Freeman is a little daunting. I mean anyone who knows what this man has meant, not only to Barbara Jordan but to so many who have studied here who have been in anyway effected by his brilliant teaching, elocution and delivery would be a little daunted too. I noticed that both Dr. Rudley and Dr. Sheila both got off before Dr. Freeman came up.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

I also want to say my thoughts and prayers are with all the families in Houston and across Texas affected by the recent terrible flooding. And I am confident that this community will embrace them. I remember very well coming here after Katrina with my husband and in face we decided to invite along a young Senator from Illinois by the name of Barack Obama, along and with Sheila and other leaders in the community we toured the facilities that Houston had provided to those who were fleeing that horrific storm. And I saw how people had opened their hearts and their homes. This is a city that knows how to pull together and I'm confident you'll do so again on behalf of those who are suffering from this latest terrible disaster.

And it is also a special moment to be here knowing that Barbara Jordan was succeeded by Mickey Leland and the 18th District was so well represented for so long and I am delighted to be here with Alison and to remember the pioneering work he did on behalf of children and the poor and hunger. So many issues that he was the champion of. And I want to thank Rosemary McGowan and all the friends and loved ones of Barbara Jordan here today. This is such a particular honor for me because the award is in memory of one of my true personal heroes – a woman who taught me and so many others the meaning of courage and determination and justice.

I first met Barbara Jordan when I was a young attorney and had been given a position working for the House of Representatives Judiciary Committee investigating Richard Nixon, and it was such a profound moment in American history and there wasn't anyone who was a more effective eloquent inquisitor than Barbara Jordan.

As a 26-year old fresh out of law school, as some of you are perhaps now having graduated from the Thurgood Marshall school here at TSU, I was riveted and not a little intimidated to tell you the truth by this unstoppable Congresswoman from Texas. I got to talk with her, which was thrilling, I got to hand her papers, which was equally exiting but mostly I got to watch and listen to her.

At a time of shaken confidence, she stirred the entire nation with her words.

Remember what she said "My faith in the Constitution is whole, it is complete; it is total."

It was that passion and moral clarity that took Barbara Jordan from the TSU and the halls of Texas legislature all the ways to the halls of Congress. The first woman and the first African American ever elected to represent Texas in the House of Representatives.

And she defended and continued the civil rights legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and her friend and mentor President Lyndon Johnson – and in particular she was a staunch advocate for the Voting Rights Act, which had helped make it possible for her to be elected.

In 1975, in the face of fierce opposition, Barbara Jordan led the fight to extend the special protections of the Voting Rights Act to many more Americans, including Hispanic Americans, Native Americans, and Asian Americans as well.

And like every woman who has run for national office in this country in the last four decades, I stand here on the shoulders of Barbara Jordan and so does our entire country.

And boy do we miss her. We miss her courage, we also miss her humor, she was funny and most of all her irresistible voice.

I remember talking to her and Ann Richards one time. And between the two of them, forget trying to get a word in at all. And they were telling me about how they would love to go to the University of Texas women's basketball games. Right, and Barbara would be there by that time in her wheelchair and Ann would be holding court right next to her. And Barbara would be yelling directions like she was, you know, the coach. "Why are you doing that? Jump higher! That's not a pass!", you know all of those kinds of sideline comments. And so Ann was telling me this, with Barbara right there and I finally turned to her and said, "Barbara, encourage these young women, don't just criticize them." And Barbara turned around and said to me, "When they deserve it, I will".

We sure could use her irresistible voice. I wish we could hear that voice one more time.

Hear her express the outrage we feel about the fact that 40 years after Barbara Jordan fought to extend the Voting Rights Act, its heart has been ripped out.

And I wish we could hear her speak up for the student who has to wait for hours to vote…

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

For the grandmother who's turned away from the polls because her driver's license expired...

For the father who's done his time and paid his debt to society but still hasn't gotten his rights back.

Now we know, unfortunately, Barbara isn't here to speak up for them and so many others. But we are. And we have a responsibility to say clearly and directly what's really going on in our country – because what is happening is a sweeping effort to disempower and disenfranchise people of color, poor people, and young people from one end of our country to the other.

Because since the Supreme Court eviscerated a key provision of the Voting Rights Act in 2013, many of the states that previously faced special scrutiny because of a history of racial discrimination have proposed and passed new laws that make it harder than ever to vote.

North Carolina passed a bill that went after pretty much anything that makes voting more convenient or more accessible. Early voting. Same-day registration.

The ability of county election officials to even extend voting hours to accommodate long lines.

What possible reason could there be to end pre-registration for 16-and 17- year olds and eliminate voter outreach in high schools?

We should be doing everything we can to get our young people more engaged in democracy, not less.

In fact I would say it is a cruel irony – but no coincidence – that Millennials, the most diverse, tolerant, and inclusive generation in American history, are now facing so much exclusion.

And we need look no further than right here in Texas. You all know this far better than I, but if you want to vote in this state, you can use a concealed weapon permit as a valid form of identification – but a valid student ID isn't good enough?

Now, Krystal Watson found out the hard way. She grew up in Louisiana but came to Marshall, Texas to attend Wiley College. Krystal takes her responsibilities as a citizen so seriously that not only did she register to vote in Texas where she was living and would be for a number of years, she even became a deputy registrar to help other people vote as well. But this past year, when she showed up at her local polling place with a Wiley College ID, she was turned away.

Experts estimate that hundreds of thousands of registered voters in Texas may face similar situations.

And while high-profile state laws like those in Texas and North Carolina get most of the attention, many of the worst offenses against the right to vote actually happen below the radar. Like when authorities shift poll locations and election dates. Or scrap language assistance for non-English speakers – something Barbara Jordan fought so hard for.

Without the pre-clearance provisions of the Voting Rights Act, no one outside the local community is likely to ever hear about these abuses, let alone have a chance to challenge them and end them.

It's not a surprise for you to hear that studies and everyday experiences confirm that minority voters are more likely than white voters to wait in long lines at the polls. They are also far more likely to vote in polling places with insufficient numbers of voting machines.

In South Carolina for example, there's supposed to be one machine for every 250 voters. But in minority areas, that rule is just often overlooked. In Richland Country, nearly 90 percent of the precincts failed to meet the standard required by law in 2012. Instead of 250 voters per machine, in one precinct it was more than 430 voters per machine. Not surprisingly, people trying to cast a ballot there faced massive delays.

Now there are many fair-minded, well-intentioned election officials and state legislators all over this country. But this kind of disparity that I just mentioned does not happen by accident. Now some of you may have heard me or my husband say one of our favorite sayings from Arkansas, of course I learned it from him. "You find a turtle on a fence post, it did not get there on it's own." Well all of these problems with voting did not just happen by accident. And it is just wrong, it's wrong to try to prevent, undermine and inhibit American's right to vote. Its counter to the values we share.

And at a time when so many Americans have lost trust in our political system, it's the opposite of what we should be doing in this country.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

This is the greatest longest lasting democracy in the history of the world, we should be clearing the way for more people to vote, not putting up every roadblock anyone can imagine.

Yet unfortunately today, there are people who offer themselves to be leaders whose actions have undercut this fundamental American principle.

Here in Texas, former Governor Rick Perry signed a law that a federal court said was actually written with the purpose of discriminating against minority voters.

He applauded when the Voting Rights Act was gutted, and said the lost protections were "outdated and unnecessary."

But Governor Perry is hardly alone in his crusade against voting rights.

In Wisconsin, Governor Scott Walker cut back early voting and signed legislation that would make it harder for college students to vote.

In New Jersey, Governor Christie vetoed legislation to extend early voting.

And in Florida, when Jeb Bush was governor, state authorities conducted a deeply flawed purge of voters before the presidential election in 2000.

Thankfully in 2004 a plan to purge even more voters was headed off.

So today, Republicans are systematically and deliberately trying to stop millions of American citizens from voting.

What part of democracy are they afraid of?

I believe every citizen has the right to vote. And I believe we should do everything we can to make it easier for every citizen to vote.

I call on Republicans at all levels of government with all manner of ambition to stop fear mongering about a phantom epidemic of election fraud and start explaining why they're so scared of letting citizens have their say.

Yes, this is about democracy. But it's also about dignity. About the ability to stand up and say, yes, I am a citizen. I am an American.

My voice counts. And no matter where you come from or what you look like or how much money you have, that means something…. In fact, it means a lot.

I learned those lessons right here in Texas, registering voters in south Texas down in the valley in 1972.

Some of the people I met were, understandably, a little wary of a girl from Chicago who didn't speak a word of Spanish. But they wanted to vote. They were citizens. They wanted to exercise all the rights and responsibilities that citizenship conveys.

That's what should matter because when these rights are denied, it doesn't just hold back the aspirations of individual citizens. It holds back our entire country.

That's why, as a Senator, I championed a bill called the Count Every Vote Act. If it had become law, it would have made Election Day a federal holiday and mandated early voting opportunities. Deceiving voters, including by sending flyers into minority neighborhoods with false voting times and places, would have become a federal crime. And many Americans with criminal convictions who had paid their debt to society would have finally gotten their voting rights back.

Well today, with the damage to the Voting Rights Act so severe, the need for action is even more urgent.

First, Congress should move quickly to pass legislation to repair that damage and restore the full protections that American voters need and deserve.

I was in the Senate in 2006 when we voted 98 to zero to reauthorize the Voting Rights Act after an exhaustive review process.

There had been more than 20 hearings in the House and Senate Judiciary Committees. Testimony from expert witnesses. Investigative reports documenting continuing discrimination in covered jurisdictions. There were more than 15,000 pages of legislative record.

Now that is how the system is supposed to work. You gather the evidence, you weigh it and you decide. And we did 98 to nothing. We put principle ahead of politics. That is what Congress needs to do again.

Second, we should implement the recommendations of the bipartisan presidential commission to improve voting. That commission was chaired by President Obama's campaign lawyer and by Governor Mitt Romney campaign's lawyer. And they actually agreed. These are common sense reforms, including expanding early, absentee, and mail voting. Providing online voter registration. Establishing the principle that no one should ever have to wait more than 30 minutes to cast your vote.

Third, we should set a standard across our country of at least 20 days of early in-person voting everywhere – including opportunities for weekend and evening voting.

If families coming out of church on Sunday before an election are inspired to go vote, they should be free to do just that.

And we know that early in-person voting will reduce those long lines and give more citizens the chance to participate, especially those who have work or family obligations that make it difficult to get to the polls on Election Day.

It's not just convenient -- it's also more secure, more reliable, and more affordable than absentee voting. So let's get this done.

And I believe we should go even further to strengthen voting rights in America.

So today I am calling for universal, automatic voter registration. Everyone, every young man or young woman, in every state in the union should be automatically registered to vote when they turn eighteen – unless they actively choose to opt-out.

But I believe this would have a profound impact on our elections and our democracy. Between a quarter and a third of all eligible Americans remain unregistered and therefore unable to vote.

And we should modernize our entire approach to registration. The current system is a relic from an earlier age. It relies on a blizzard of paper records and it's full of errors.

We can do better. We can make sure that registration rolls are secure, up-to-date, and complete. When you move, your registration should move with you. If you are an eligible voter, and want to be registered, you should be a registered voter – period.

Now, Oregon is already leading the way modernizing its system, and the rest of the country should follow. The technology is there. States have a lot of the data already. It's just a matter of syncing and streamlining.

Now, all of these reforms, from expanded early voting to modernized registration, are common sense ways to strengthen our democracy. But I'll be candid here, none of them will come easily.

It's going to take leadership at many levels.

Now more than ever, we need our citizens to actually get out and vote for people who want to hear what is on their minds.

We need more activists working to expose abuses, educate Americans about their rights, and hold authorities accountable for protecting them. Some of the worst provisions in recent laws have been blocked or delayed by tireless advocates raising the alarm and filing legal challenges. But they can't do it alone.

We need more grassroots mobilization efforts like the Moral Monday movement in North Carolina to build momentum for reform.

We need more Justices on the Supreme Court who will protect every citizen's right to vote, I mean the principle underlying our Constitution, which we had to fight for a long time to make apply to everybody, one person, one vote and we need a

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Supreme Court that cares more about protecting the right to vote of a person than the right to buy and election of a corporation.

But of course, you know what we really need? We need more elected leaders from Houston to Austin to Washington who will follow in the footsteps of Barbara Jordan and fight for the rights and opportunities of everyday Americans, not just those at the top of the ladder.

And we need to remember that progress is built on common ground, not scorched earth.

You know, when I traveled around the world as Secretary of State, one of the most frequent questions I was asked was: How could you and President Obama work together after you fought so hard in that campaign?

People were genuinely amazed, which I suppose is understandable, considering that in many places, when you lose an election or you oppose someone who wins you could get imprisoned or exiled – even killed – not hired as Secretary of State.

And it's true, I was surprised when the President asked me to serve. But he made that offer, and I accepted it, because we both love our country.

So my friends, here at this historic institution let us remember that America was built by people who knew that our common interest was more important than our self-interest.

They were fearless in pursuit of a stronger, freer, and fairer nation.

As Barbara Jordan famously reminded us, when the Constitution was first written, it left most of us here out. But generations of Americans fought and marched and organized and prayed to expand the circle of freedom and opportunity. They never gave up and never backed down.

And nearly a century ago on this very day, after years of struggle, Congress finally passed the 19th amendment to give women the right to vote in the United States.

So that is, that is the story of progress, courageous men and women, expanding rights, not restricting them.

And today we refuse, we refuse to allow our country or this generation of leaders to slow or reverse America's long march toward a more perfect union.

We owe it to our children and grandchildren to fight just as hard as those who came before us did. To march just as far. To organize just as well. To speak out just as loudly. And to vote, every chance we get for the kind of future we want.

That's what Barbara Jordan would do. That's what we should do in honor of her.

Thank you, and may God bless you.

Subject: Elections 2016 Town Hall: ConsiderUsPowerful - Feat. Steve Phillips

Dear John,

Register today for Color of Change's digital town hall featuring PowerPAC+ Chair and Brown is the New White Author Steve Phillips on Tuesday, February 2 at 5pm PT/ 8pm ET!

Steve Phillips joins a panel of political visionaries for this timely and important digital Townhall to discuss his new book Brown is the New White, the 2016 election, and the political influence of voters of color.

US Senator Cory Booker will moderate the panel where Black, queer feminist organizer Charlene Carruthers (Black Youth Project 100 National Director); NY-based strategist Glynda Carr (Higher Heights for America Co-Founder); and former Obama for America organizer Arisha Hatch (Color of Change Managing Director) will be sharing insider election strategies for voters of color and our allies.

The conversation will be guided by new electoral data explored in Steve's book and together they'll discuss the impact people of color can have in the 2016 election.

We know that voters of color will play a pivotal role in the Presidential election, but did you know that our voting turnout will determine key races across the country? We have to send a message to Democrats and progressives, that it is possible to turn out voters of color even without Obama on the ticket. We must organize, engage and mobilize now to ensure that our voices, issues and concerns are a part of the agenda and plan.

This is why you have to join us on Tuesday. We need you to weigh in on insider strategies that will better your community. Sign up today!

See you on Tuesday, February 2nd.

Sincerely,

The PowerPAC+ Team

AB 1239 is a less restrictive version of the temporary tax brackets initiated by former Governor Wilson in 1991, and it impacts only those who make more than a quarter million dollars a year. AB 1239 establishes a temporary 10% income tax bracket for those with taxable incomes over $250,000 (single)/$500,000 (joint), and a temporary 11% income tax bracket for those with taxable incomes over $400,000 (single)/$800,000 (joint). [I was so proud to see] the O'Malley-Brown Administration pass the DREAM Act here in Maryland, opening doors of opportunity to students who work and study hard [and play by the rules], regardless of their parents' immigration status.

As a Senator, I was a co-sponsor of the national DREAM Act, and I remain a strong supporter of comprehensive immigration reform -- so I'm glad that Maryland is leading [where Washington is lagging].

Because there's so much more to do if we're going to fix our broken immigration system – if we're going to keep families together, treat everyone with dignity and compassion, uphold the rule of law, and respect our heritage as a nation of immigrants striving to build a better life.

Bringing millions of hard-working people out of the shadows and into the formal economy -- so they can hold their heads high, pay taxes, and contribute to our shared prosperity -- is one of the most effective steps we can take to accelerate our economic recovery. It also reflects the best values of an open and inclusive nation.

[The thought of families being torn apart… of fathers and mothers who have been here for years and contributed to their communities in so many ways, getting picked up and whisked away… children coming home from school to an empty house and nobody can say where their parent is – that is just not who we are as Americans.]

[Like so many others, I'm looking forward to President Obama taking action where Congress has failed, to do all he can within the law to reform and improve our immigration system.]

[But with Washington bogged down by gridlock and grandstanding, we're also looking more and more to states like Maryland as the laboratories of democracy. Under

Sara

I'm forwarding this memo to you for John as a follow-up to a discussion we had with him right before the election at the end of October.

Over the past month, a group of my colleagues from McKinsey have been volunteering in the transition. Their work here has focused on analyzing the specific opportunities related to how the government purchases and uses energy -- a specific topic of interest for John that we had discussed in the late October meeting.

I've copied Carol, Heather, David, and Todd as well -- my colleagues have already shared these findings with each of them in various meetings and other discussions.

Thanks as always

TCF Senior Fellow Barton Gellman Wins Two Emmys

Century Foundation senior fellow Barton Gellman was honored with two Emmy wins at last night's 36th Annual News & Documentary Emmy Awards ceremony.

Gellman was recognized for his work as an editorial consultant on PBS Frontline's documentary The United States of Secrets . The documentary, which took a critical look at the U.S. government's massive digital surveillance program, received an Emmy in two categories: Best Documentary and Outstanding Coverage of a Current News Story—Long Form.

"We were thrilled to hear of Bart's achievement," said TCF president Mark Zuckerman. "Bart has long been at the forefront of national dialogue on digital surveillance in America. His Emmy wins are just the latest in an impressive list of honors that Bart's groundbreaking research and reporting on the national security state has received over the years."

Watch the trailer for The United States of Secrets, and read more from Barton Gellman at tcf.org .

Neera and Carmel,

You may have read today that I am considering a run for Barbara Mikulski's Senate seat. I did in fact speak with the New York Times this morning, and I told them - off the record -- that I am considering it.

At this early stage, that is the extent of the truth. I have no definite plans to run, and I am only exploring the possibility. In the coming days and weeks, I hope to be able to consult with both of you about this decision.

Can you please pass this note along to John? I don't seem to have his e-mail address.

Hi, your tone and remarks were perfect on cnn the other night.

3 ideas:

- in the wake of mcconnell's announcement, HRC should rename them the Grand Obstructionist Party

- when it comes to Bernie, she should hammer on the theme that there is a big difference between Legislating and Governing, and between them she is the only one who has experience doing both. (He won't dare suggest that being a mayor of a tiny city compares to running the US government and agencies)

- Lastly, a time sensitive one. Not sure you are following the latest developments in the GMO labeling saga but Sen. Roberts is about to introduce a terrible measure that will strongly favor industry over citizens and specifically will pre-empt VT. We expect Bernie to speak out about this, which will also play to the millennials. It would be extremely smart for HRC to get out ahead of him by stating her support for protecting citizens' and states' rights. I could explain the language to someone in your policy team if you want to put them in touch with me.

Watchdog Group Calls For Federal Investigation Into Presidential Campaign Fundraising

Washington, D.C. – In a letter to Attorney General Michael B. Mukasey, Campaign Money Watch urged the Justice Department to investigate potential criminal fundraising activities regarding bundlers for Sen. John McCain's presidential campaign.

"Media reports over the past week have brought to public attention the possibility that supporters of Sen. McCain's presidential campaign have used 'straw' donors as a means to circumvent federal campaign contribution limits," wrote the group's director, David Donnelly, in the six-page letter. "We urge you to investigate two distinct cases where violations may have occurred – violations like those committed by Norman Hsu, who was swiftly indicted by the Justice Department earlier this election cycle after news accounts brought similar violations to light."

The letter was hand-delivered today with more than 12,000 petition signatures and comments collected over the weekend by MoveOn.org Political Action urging the Justice Department to investigate. In addition, the letter was faxed to U.S. Attorneys in three separate jurisdictions: Southern District of New York, Southern District of Florida, and the Central District of California.

A copy of the letter can be found at http://www.campaignmoney.org/doj-letter.

The cases, which both emerged in news coverage last week, include two high-profile connections to oil executives and companies:

* The letter urges a full examination of a series of unlikely donations from California that were bundled by a foreign national on behalf of a McCain bundler from Florida, Harry Sargeant III. While $50,000 of the Sargeant fundraising haul has been returned, he raised more than $500,000 in total. Sargeant and the foreign national, Mustafa Abu Naba'a, are owners of International Oil Trading Company, which holds a controversial contract worth roughly $1 billion to deliver fuel oil to U.S. military bases in Iraq.

* The letter also encourages Justice to investigate two $28,500 donations made by a Hess Corporation office manager and her husband, an Amtrak foreman, to the McCain Victory 2008 committee. The individuals, Alice and Pasquale Rocchio, have no federal campaign contribution history before giving to McCain. Hess Corporation CEO, John Hess, is a McCain bundler, and the company would likely profit immensely if McCain's proposal to expand offshore drilling, an idea he opposed until June, becomes law. Hess employees and family members donated more than $300,000 in June to the joint fundraising committee.

In the group's letter to the Attorney General, Donnelly argues that only an official investigation will get to the bottom of the matters.

"Campaign Money Watch is concerned the McCain campaign's approach is in effect a 'don't ask, don't tell' policy that seeks to limit political damage rather than to turn over to authorities those who may be violating the law," Donnelly writes in the letter. "These are not trivial matters. Individuals who are found guilty of making donations in the names of others face up to five years imprisonment for each violation."

Campaign Money Watch is a project of the nonpartisan Public Campaign Action Fund. The organization works to hold politicians who are against comprehensive campaign finance reform accountable for where they get their political donations.

Subject: Petition: Protect the right to vote

BENNET FOR COLORADO

Dear Friend,

There are a lot of reasons why Colorado is an amazing place to live, and not all of them have to do with our mountains and plains.

While state legislatures across the country have tried to make it harder for people to vote, Colorado is empowering our citizens by making voting easier. We've enacted same-day registration and automatically send mail-in ballots to all registered voters.

Today, we're calling on Congress and states across the country to follow our lead and defend the right to vote. Add your name to ours and sign the petition.

When it comes to voting, all Americans have an equal voice -- everyone's vote counts exactly as much as everyone else's. That's an important principle, and one we need to defend.

But the right to vote is under attack in a lot of the country. We've seen the examples - closing or moving polling places, purging the voter rolls, enacting rigid and stringent voter ID laws, and many more -- and all of them do damage to our democracy.

The right to vote is fundamental. No eligible voter should ever be prevented from voting -- stand up for voting rights and sign our petition.

Thanks.

Michael

House Passes Most Important Environmental Bill In History

Washington – Today, the House of Representatives passed the American Clean Energy and Security Act by a vote of 219 to 212. The act represents America's first comprehensive attempt to build a new, clean energy economy. It will create millions of jobs, reduce our dangerous dependence on oil, and mitigate the threat of global warming. The League of Conservation Voters considers today's vote the most important environmental vote ever taken by the House of Representatives.

"Today's victory will be remembered as a key moment in American history, the moment when America began to build the clean energy economy that fueled the 21st Century," LCV President Gene Karpinski said. "LCV thanks Speaker Pelosi, Chairman Waxman, Chairman Markey, Majority Leader Hoyer, Majority Whip Clyburn, and the other leaders who made this bill pill possible."

"We commend all those Members of Congress who voted for this bill, particularly those Republicans who stood in support of a new clean energy economy," Karpinski continued. "Their courage and foresight will be the foundation on which we build a safer, cleaner, more prosperous America."

"Passing this bill through the House of Representatives required the combined efforts of labor unions, environmental organizations, businesses, faith groups, and veterans," Karpinski concluded. "That powerful coalition will continue to work together to strengthen and pass this bill in the Senate as it moves towards President Obama's desk."

In light of the tremendous importance of this legislation, LCV made the unprecedented decision that it will not endorse any member of the House of Representatives in the 2010 election cycle who voted against final passage of this historic bill. LCV stands by that policy.

Here are my notes from our conversation just now. Let me know if anything doesn't look correct. We'll get a planning call set up for tomorrow with team Iowa to go through in more detail proposals for 1/18 and 1/20-21.

JAN 18:

Living room interview w/ KCCI in DSM

Smaller but packed looking crowd event (~200 people?) in a smaller community in a different media market but close to DSM

JAN 20:

Large crowd event in the evening

Possibly Burlington

announce ASAP

JAN 21:

Indianola: event at Simpson College

Vinton

Iowa City GOTC Event w/ Demi Lovato in evening at U of I (~1,000 people)

Goal to do smaller events/visits that maximize Iowa's organizing needs and get local press coverage (go to where working people are) during the day; large crowds in evenings

Find some of the original handful of people from first trip to Iowa to lift up in final few trips.

Continue recognizing organizers and precinct captains at events.

Incorporate campaign videos and Twitter conversation into events/pre-program

Subject: Abortion shutdown CRISIS

NARAL Pro-Choice America

All but NINE abortion clinics in Texas are about to be shut down, causing a massive crisis for abortion access--and a blueprint for attacks on abortion access in other states. Will you help fight back?

Chip in $15

Dear John,

Two years ago, there were more than 40 abortion clinics in Texas.

Soon there will be only eight or nine--in a state with more than 13 million women spread across 267,000 square miles.[1]

In the entire western half of the state there will be exactly none. Women will be forced to drive 10, 12, or even 16 hours round-trip for abortion care.

At the remaining clinics, waiting rooms will be packed and the phones will be ringing off the hook. There's simply no way that eight or nine clinics can meet the demand that used to be met by 41.

And yet according to the right-wing Fifth Circuit Court of appeals, that's not an "undue burden."

This is perhaps the greatest crisis for abortion access since Roe v. Wade. Will you chip in $15 to help fight back?

Yes, I'll donate $15 to help defend abortion rights and stop the Texas clinic shutdown crisis.

Unless we can overturn this wave of clinic shutdowns in Texas, it will become a blueprint for similar attacks on abortion access in other states. Already, states like Mississippi and Missouri are down to just one abortion provider in the entire state.

That's why Wendy Davis filibustered this awful bill for 13 hours. She knew the terrible impact it would have--and she knew she needed to do everything possible to sound the alarm.

We're calling on the U.S. Congress to step in right now and pass legislation to stop copycat clinic shutdown laws from going into effect in other states.

But it will take a major public outcry to stop these attacks on abortion access. Will you chip in $15 to help defend abortion rights and stop the Texas clinic shutdown crisis?

Yes, I'll donate $15.

Thank you for helping to make abortion rights real for all women,

MCCAIN'S POLICIES OUT OF TOUCH WITH WOMEN

McCain is losing support among women. According to the latest Gallup poll , since Clinton's exit, Obama's lead with women has grown by 7 -- Obama now leads McCain among women by 13 points. Obama has made significant gains with older and married women, groups McCain was eyeing.

McCain is out of step with women on the issues women care about. Millions of women are struggling with skyrocketing prices of food, gas and health care. And women are still fighting for civil rights and equal pay. McCain's policy agenda, like George Bush's, looks after lobbyists and big corporations, but disregards the needs of hard-working women.

- ECONOMY: McCain's economic plan, like Bush's, helps wealthy corporations and millionaires, but leaves families behind. While big oil and insurance companies get billions in tax breaks, middle class families get little.
- HEALTH CARE: McCain's plan, like Bush's, leaves families at the mercy of greedy insurance companies. His plan raises costs, does nothing for those without insurance and threatens the coverage of the 158 million Americans who get health care through their jobs.
- IRAQ: McCain has no plan to bring our troops home and will continue Bush's endless war in Iraq. Just this morning McCain said it's "not too important" when our troops come home.
  - MATT LAUER: Do you now have a better estimate of when American forces can come home from Iraq?

    JOHN MCCAIN: No, but that's not too important.
- CHOICE: McCain has a long and consistent anti-choice record. He wants to overturn Roe v. Wade and wants a Supreme Court with "clones of Alito and Roberts."

McCain To Visit Oil Platform Owned By Chevron; McCain's National Finance Co-Chairman Lobbies For Chevron

Today, Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) is touring an oil rig off the coast of Louisiana in order "to highlight his support for increased domestic offshore drilling." Although he will not join McCain today, Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal (R) promoted McCain's oil rig visit in an appearance on Fox and Friends this morning.

Making sure to note that the drilling platform McCain will visit is owned and run by Chevron, Jindal oddly suggested that the photo-op will "emphasize that drilling alone is not enough" to address America's energy needs. Watch it:

It should come as no surprise that the McCain chose to visit a Chevron-owned drilling platform, considering that lobbyists for Chevron both fundraise and work for his campaign:

Wayne Berman: Berman, the managing director of lobbying firm Ogilvy Government Relations, is McCain's national finance co-chairman and has bundled over $500,000 dollars for his campaign. Berman has lobbied for Chevron since 2004.

John Green: Green, who also works for Oglivy, has been the McCain campaign's chief Congressional liaison since March. Green has lobbied for Chevron since 2005.

Richard Hohlt: Hohlt, who is the leader of a group of Washington, DC insiders called the "Off the Record Club" that includes top McCain strategist Charlie Black, is a fundraiser for the McCain campaign. Holht has lobbied for Chevron since 2005.

In June, McCain went before oil executives in Texas to reverse his position on offshore drilling and lay out a set of policy proposals that add up to a big fat kiss to Big Oil. Since then, the oil industry has flooded McCain with money and McCain has begun promoting the advice of "the oil executives."

Update: The Chevron oil rig McCain is visiting is a joint venture with Exxon, which owns 38.38 percent of the project. Lobbyists for Exxon also work and fundraise for McCain's campaign.

Update: McCain's plan to cut the corporate tax rate would result in a $480 million per-year tax break for Chevron and $1.2 billion per-year tax break for Exxon.

Obama Campaign Launches New TV Ad on a McCain Lobbyist-Run White House

Ad and Events Across the Country to Highlight that a McCain Lobbyist-Run White House Would Bring More of the Same

CHICAGO, IL – Responding to a recent Time magazine report that John McCain tapped Washington super lobbyist Bill Timmons to plan his administration, the Obama campaign released a new 30-second TV ad called His Administration today. The new ad details how just like his campaign, a John McCain White House would be lobbyist-run with corporate special interests rigging the system against hard working Americans. See below for information on events across the country denouncing the McCain campaign's lobbyist ties.

The Ad-"His Administration"

His Administration will air on national cable and in key states across the country beginning Monday.

Conference: Setting the Climate Agenda for the Next U.S. President

Paul Brest Hall
Stanford, California
Friday, May 6, 2016

Regardless of who wins in November, the next President of the United States will be called on to confront the reality of climate change. Perspectives from both sides of the aisle will chart the path forward during a major conference at Stanford University on Friday, May 6, 2016. Speakers will include current and former high-ranking government officials, corporate innovators and leading scholars assembled to help identify strategies the next President might employ to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and accelerate the United States' pivot to a clean energy economy.

Hey everyone,

Thank you so much for your comments today. We had a productive conversation with the Secretary this evening who wanted to see more in here about solutions that will actually impact people's lives. I think we've delivered that while slimming down the policy section overall.

We changed the top so this doesn't start with criminal justice. She suggested we start with Flint... but first we put in Harlem so it's not negative right off the bat.

She also asked that we say positive things about all that was accomplished in the 90s. So we did that, while also adding a short paragraph (3 sentences) about mistakes in the 90s too. Please be sure to take a look at that.

The speech is at 3pm tomorrow so please get edits to us asap.

Thank you!
Megan + Dan

Subject:	how to really improve attendant jobs -- brilliant piece by caregiver Lynn Hsu

If the Department of Labor was sincere about turning attendant care into decent jobs for family and non-family members they would find a way to instead pay out sick pay and two-week vacations and enough emergency services for us to find someone to replace that attendant. Emergency services that really work with workers experienced with people with significant disabilities and Alzheimer's etc. must go hand-in-hand with these vacation and sick days or we will threaten seniors and people with disabilities with institutionalization. Making these three changes would help everyone. And of course the minimum wage must go up for all working people. It is so out of line with the cost of housing its laughable and tragic all at once.

Paying sick pay and two weeks paid vacation, would turn California's attendant job more into a real job. This would cost much much much less an overtime across the board which will not happen because the states Medicaid programs will still likely cap hours instead. We should tell Department of Labor to bring these jobs into alignment with real jobs by having sick days and paid vacation. It would cost a fraction of the money. It's one shot payment once a year instead of an enormous increase every month for some, and it helps every attendant. They have it in New York. The unions won't get more union dues by doing this but they will turn this into a better job by asking for far less money that will actually turn into a good for everyone instead of a pie in the sky request that will only result in caps on hours.

I have considerable firsthand experience with the IHSS system. On the one hand, the ability of people with disabilities to hire and manage their own caregivers is an essential component of making independent living in the community possible. (And keeping people out of institutions not only saves the state money, but also averts untold human suffering.) On the other hand, it's a lousy system to work for. A majority of the care providers are family members of the person they assist; and in those cases, IHSS is basically just providing a subsidy so that people can afford to be at home caring for their own loved ones. For people who work through IHSS as a "real job," it's no picnic. The pay is abysmal; the red tape is beyond incredible; and there's no job security or sick leave. It's hard for people with IHSS benefits to hire good caregivers, because the reality is that there are far better working conditions to be had outside the IHSS system for those with even the most minimal qualifications.

With direct care providers comprising one of the fastest-growing employment sectors in this country, there is every reason to fight for fair living wages and working conditions that give workers the same dignity and security that they labor to provide for their clients. However, simply slapping an overtime requirement on top of the existing system will not help anybody. The system will not pay overtime, so the real-world result will just be a cap on the number of hours a given provider can work with a given client. Providers will still have to work long hours without overtime; they'll just have to split those hours among multiple clients. Clients who have been able to rely on a few trusted caregivers will have to look for outsiders (in a system that, as I noted, attracts few truly qualified workers who aren't working as a "labor of love" for someone they care about) to fill in the gaps. Nobody will be any better paid or any more secure.

Enacting a law like this is a feel-good measure that circumvents the real work of finding the resources to compensate people providing essential services in our society fairly. It's all about the growing inequities in our economy, and our willingness to let the people doing the real work in our communities live in poverty while the wealthiest have the power to siphon off all of the added value our economy generates to multiply their own wealth. We have a "service economy" that does not value service fairly. Arbitrary rules with no resources to back them up will do nothing to correct that.

Staying at the Palomar 2121 P St NW – not too far from you, I think.
Please Email your address.

Amrita typically shops for fish/meats here at Costco where she knows where to find what she wants.
I see the closest one is at 1200 South Fern Street, Arlington, VA 22202
Maybe you have a preferred place closer to home that you could suggest?

Looking forward to seeing everybody on Sat, 06-Jun-2015 evening. Best, always. Ashok

John--
Thank you so much. I'm really glad you are able to come.
Yes, Kate did tell me what you said. We are all shaken, but especially our son Max, who is 20. Max and I had been trying to take good care of Dick this summer, but could not keep up with the fast pace of his decline. None of us knew he had prostate cancer that had metastasized. All the focus was on his Parkinson's. And suddenly, the bottom fell out. Even before we took him to the ER this month, the neurologists had begun saying it was n't Parkinson's but something worse, Multiple System Atrophy. And there were signs of dementia. And then the cancer, which he died without kno wing about.
Honestly, Dick was so done with it all. He had told me so many times I couldn't count them that he didn't want to go all the way to the end of the Par kinson's road. He couldn't stand to lose his speech, his mind, or any more of his dignity.
But his passing leaves a big hole.

Meg,
I was planning to come and would be honored to speak. As you know, we were shocked by the news. I hope Kate passed along my condolences. He was such a special man and a great friend and mentor to me. I loved him and miss him.

Friend,

Next weekend is the most important weekend of the entire campaign. It's also the final one.

It's going to take everyone pitching in -- whether you're a first time volunteer or an old pro. Now or never.

So say you'll volunteer to help get out the vote during the final weekend.

We know we have the support to win -- we just need to make sure folks make it to the polls. And you better believe we're giving it everything we've got.

This race couldn't be any closer. It's going to come down to which side has the most volunteers willing to roll up their sleeves and help win this fight.

Step up and be part of the biggest team of grassroots volunteers Illinois has ever seen, on the most critical weekend of the election:

CHIPPED IN TO TED'S CALL-TO-ACTION?

NO DONATION

Ted emailed you earlier this week asking for $5 -- roughly the price of a pint of beer -- to help his campaign.

Look -- we don't have much time. The end of the year is quickly approaching. Karl Rove and the Koch brothers are looking at our fundraising numbers for any sign of weakness. With the Koch brothers already spending millions against Ted, we can't fall short.

So now I'm asking.

If you are able to be one of the 63 supporters we need to hit tonight's fundraising goal, please use this link to make your donation immediately:

the right people. She seems comfortable migrating from a closed to a more open planning process, so I want to make sure we're incorporating everyone she wants.

Then we can move to hiring.

I'm thinking for each topic we could cover the following three things:

--Strategy next steps: review what planning has already taken place and what work remains to be done;

--Staff recruitment: who she wants us to connect with on staff recruitment

--Key action items: key next steps, from her perspective and ours

I'd propose going in the following order:

1. Technology/Digital

- Finance
- Communications (earned media)
- Paid Media
- Political
- Analytics
- States

Thoughts? Do we think this is something we could slot into her open times after Election Day?

Dear Friend,

We have more exciting news to share! Chelsea Clinton is scheduled to join us for her first campaign events in Northern CA on Monday, March 21st! Hillary will be here Wednesday, March 23!

Tuesday is known as "Mini Super Tuesday," and will likely be a very good day for Hilary and our campaign. Please be sure to reach out to your friends and colleagues for the two upcoming events in Atherton and Hillsborough with Hillary Clinton on Wednesday, March 23rd. As a special surprise, Michael Franti, the singer of Say Hey (I Love You) , will be joining us in Atherton.

While we continue to execute a smart, strategic plan to win delegates across the country, the primary race is far from over. Be sure to view and share this video from our colleague "Delegate Dave" at Hillary for America HQ explaining our delegate strategy: link .

We still have a lot of work ahead of us and we need your help. If you have any friends who haven't engaged with the campaign, NOW is the time. The prospect of a Trump or Cruz nomination is alarming, and many folks who have been waiting to get involved are ready to engage!

Below are the upcoming events for you to share with your networks. Please let me know if you have any questions and, as always, thank you for all you do!

Dear Friends,

Our campaign for Oakland is gaining momentum because of your support!

First, we surpassed a very critical reporting deadline on June 30th and I am proud to say we have over 300 donors that have invested in the campaign! From $10 to the maximum contribution of $700, it is truly a blessing to receive your financial support to get our campaign up and running.

We are well on our way to the November election, but we still need your help. It's not too late to contribute again to invest in our campaign. Please consider donating $35, $100, or $250 to help us open our campaign headquarters and continue getting our message out to Oakland voters.

Another big update is our full website is now live! Check it out at http://www.jenniferpae.com

And finally, we have been walking the neighborhoods and it is clear Oakland voters deserve a better choice. We will continue to hit the streets every weekend and weeknight and would greatly appreciate any volunteer time you could donate. Contact vote@jenniferpae.com to sign up for a volunteer shift.

If you're volunteering on a campaign for the first time or need to brush up on some organizing experience, it's not too late to come and participate in Camp Wellstone this weekend from July 30th – August 1st in the district at Laney Community College (900 Fallon Street, Oakland). As a former trainer for Campus Camp Wellstone, I can guarantee an amazing training. Don't miss this unique opportunity to participate in a high quality training focused on developing skills for making social change. Visit the Ella Baker Center for more information and to register!

Look out for more information about our Grand Opening of our Campaign Headquarters. I look forward to sharing with you more great news.

Together we can,
Jennifer Pae

A heads up:

My column tomorrow in The Hill which I will send later tonight or tomorrow will be constructively critical of where I think the campaign has veered off target. I omitted inflammatory points.
I suggested that instead of attacking Bernie over single payer she should support the public option. Suggested that she should organize a private chat with young women who support Bernie to hear them out, exchange ideas. And most important I suggested at the end that I would like to see Hillary and Bernie at the Convention side by side applauding Elizabeth Warren giving the keynote address to a convention roused to unity and delight.

To the degree that Warren as keynoter has appeal, now would be a good time for HRC to mention it, maybe even drop it in the debate.

Subject: Ted Cruz's misogyny isn't funny

Dear Activist,

When GOP frontrunner Donald Trump crossed the lines of vulgarity with Megyn Kelly and Hillary Clinton, condemnations were loud and strong. But when GOP runner-up Ted Cruz went from vulgarity to misogynistic "jokes" about violence, the silence was deafening.

Let's send a clear message to Cruz, his fellow Republicans, and the media that "jokes" about violence against women will not be tolerated, period.

Thanks for all you do!

Bob Fertik

Ted Cruz's misogyny isn't funny

Tell Senate Majority Leader McConnell:
"Censure Sen. Ted Cruz for his offensive and misogynistic remarks calling for Democratic presidential candidate and former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton to be spanked."

Dear Friend,

Last Friday, in a speech to a crowd of voters in Iowa, Sen. Ted Cruz suggested that Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton should be "spanked."[1]

No matter the political or policy disagreements Sen. Cruz may have with Hillary Clinton, there is no place for that kind of offensive, misogynistic, violent rhetoric in our public discourse. If Republican leaders in Washington are serious about casting off their image as a party waging a war on women, then they need to quickly and publicly rebuke Sen. Ted Cruz for his comments.

Tell Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell: Censure Sen. Ted Cruz. Click here to sign the petition.

After falsely accusing Hillary Clinton of lying, Sen. Cruz then made the following statement: "In my house, if my daughter, Catherine, the 5-year-old, says something that she knows to be false, she gets a spanking."

It's bad enough that Cruz is bragging in public about his use of corporal punishment on his daughter.[2] But for him -- a national political official running for president -- to use this type of language toward Hillary Clinton is simply beyond the pale.

Cruz's comments come in a long line of irresponsible public statements by Republicans meant to demonize women and women's health care providers in order to restrict women's rights, take away women's access to health care, and even minimize the prosecution of violence against women. This extreme anti-woman rhetoric has dangerous, real-world consequences, as we saw with November's attack on a Planned Parenthood clinic.

Senate Majority Leader McConnell himself has had a checkered past on the issue of violence against women, having been one of 22 male senators voting against renewal of the Violence Against Women Act before its eventual renewal in 2013. [3]

That's why it's time for Republican leaders like McConnell to put real action behind their attempts to repair their party's image with women and to take a public stand against Sen. Ted Cruz's inappropriate and dangerous remark.

New York Times: First Draft: “On Cuba, Hillary Clinton an Advocate for Normalizing Relations”

By Alan Rappeport

December 17, 2014, 11:54 a.m. EST

The move to normalize relations with Cuba was something that Hillary Rodham Clinton had been advocating for a while.

She wrote about it in her book, Hard Choices, and spoke passionately about it during an interview with Fusion last summer.

“I would like to see that end,” Mrs. Clinton said of the embargo. “I think it has been a failure.”

Mrs. Clinton argued that the embargo has propped up the Castro government because they can blame all of the country’s problems on the United States. Moreover, the embargo did not have any impact on freedom of speech, freedom of expression or on freeing political prisoners.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

The former secretary of state and potential 2016 candidate said that she would like to see the United States influence Cuba through commerce, trade and travel. She also noted that she hoped the Alan Gross situation would be resolved and that she could someday travel to the country.

Time: “Here’s What Hillary Clinton Had to Say About Alan Gross, U.S.-Cuba Relations in Hard Choices”

By Maya Rhodan

December 17, 2014, 10:43 a.m. EST

[Subtitle:] Former Secretary of State Clinton considers the U.S.'s failure to bring Alan Gross home one of her "regrets"

Former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton wrote in her recent autobiography one of her biggest regrets of her tenure was that she was not able to bring home an American who was held as a prisoner in Cuba. Today, President Obama will announce that Alan Gross, a USAID contractor who was arrested in 2009 for bringing satellite equipment to Cuba, will return to the U.S.

In Hard Choices, Clinton calls the Cuban government’s refusal to release Gross unless the U.S. released five convicted Cuban spies a “double tragedy,” saying in part:

“It is possible that hard liners within the regime exploited the Gross case as an opportunity to put the brakes on any possible rapprochement with the United States and the domestic reforms that would require. If so, it is a double tragedy, cosigning millions of Cubans to a kind of continued imprisonment as well.”

On the embargo, she had this to say:

“Near the end of my tenure I recommended to President Obama that he take another look at our embargo. It wasn’t achieving its goals and it was holding back our broader agenda across Latin America. After twenty years of observing and dealing with the U.S.-Cuba relationshiot, I thought we should shift the onus onto the Castros to explain why they remained undemocratic and abusive.”

Time: “Why Democrats Changed Their Minds on Cuba”

By Haley Sweetland Edwards

December 17, 2014, 12:29 p.m. EST

It used to be that national politicians of both parties would diligently travel to Florida during every election cycle and compete, in speeches and town hall meetings, over who could be more in favor of the embargo on Cuba.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

It was, after all, common political sense: Cuban-Americans were, for decades, a fairly monolithic voting bloc and their feelings toward the embargo were unequivocal. They were for it. No ifs, ands, or maybes.

But in the last decade, all that has changed. The reason is shifting demographics—the same trend that rocketed President Obama to the White House in 2008 and 2012 and that will do more to influence the outcome of 2016 than perhaps anything else.

Younger Cuban-Americans are less into the embargo than their parents' generation, and much more in favor of relaxing laws to make it easier to travel and trade with the island.

This shifting dynamic is going to play out in 2016, too. In fact, it already has. Jeb Bush, who announced yesterday that he is considering a run for the White House, takes the old-school hardline position. He's in favor of the embargo, full stop.

Meanwhile, Hillary Clinton's position has evolved over the years. In 2000, when she was running for Senate, and in 2008, when she was running for the Democratic nomination, she too took the old-school stance. In December 2007, she said rather clearly that the embargo was the law of the land, and it wasn't going anywhere anytime soon.

"Until there is some recognition on the part of whoever is in charge of the Cuban government that they have to move toward democracy and freedom for the Cuban people, it will be very difficult for us to change our policy," she said.

But then, as Secretary of State, her position began to crack, and then soften, and then flip entirely. She called on Obama to take a second look at the embargo, which she argued was actually helping Fidel and Raul Castro, not Americans. "It is my personal belief that the Castros do not want to see an end to the embargo and do not want to see normalization with the United States, because they would lose all of their excuses for what hasn't happened in Cuba in the last 50 years," she said in a 2010 speech in Kentucky.

New York Times: "Political Battles Likely as U.S. Shifts Stance Toward Cuba"

By Ashley Parker and Jonathan Martin

December 17, 2014

The startling announcement that the United States and Cuba will restore full diplomatic relations and open an embassy in Havana could fill in one of the most enduring fault lines in American politics and reshape the fight to win the vital battleground state of Florida.

For more than a generation, Republicans have taken a hard line against the communist nation, endearing themselves to the politically potent bloc of Cuban-Americans who have been a crucial force in deciding elections in the state. But those animosities have given way to generational shift, and younger voters who have family ties to Cuba — but no direct memories of the island under Fidel Castro — have been willing to support Democrats.

The Hispanic population of Florida is also increasingly made up of former residents of Puerto Rico, who typically vote Democratic. President Obama won the state twice, and Republican presidential candidates have an extremely difficult time winning without winning Florida's Electoral College votes.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Now the issues debated in the state are likely to change, even if those long simmering disputes about Cuba linger.

The news offered an early glimpse into the challenges facing Jeb Bush, the former Republican governor of Florida, who on Tuesday announced he was going to explore a 2016 presidential run.

While Mr. Bush praised the release of Mr. Gross on Tuesday, earlier this month, in a speech to a group of pro-embargo Cuban exiles at the Biltmore Hotel in Coral Gables, Fla., he called for the embargo to be strengthened.

“Will lifting the embargo change the fact that the government receives almost all the money that comes from these people that travel to the island?” he said. “Cuba is a dictatorship, plain and simple. The United States should only have a new relationship with Cuba when there is progress on basic human rights of the Cuban people, including the release of political prisoners, fair and free elections, the respect of the rule of law, the cessation of destabilizing countries in the region and the embrace of a free-market economy.”

Among the new generation of Cuban-Americans there is far less passion for the embargo. There is even less among those of Puerto Rican heritage.

“Each day that passes, the proportion of the Hispanic electorate that comes from embargo-era Cubans shrinks, and they are now vastly outnumbered by an explosion of new Puerto Rican voters,” said Steve Schale, a Democratic strategist in Florida who worked on both Obama campaigns there. “Moreover, the grandchildren and now great-grandchildren of those embargo era Cubans have a more open view towards the Cuban question.”

Even so, Senator Marco Rubio, Republican of Florida and a potential 2016 candidate, slammed the rapprochement Wednesday.

“Today’s announcement initiating a dramatic change in U.S. policy toward Cuba is just the latest in a long line of failed attempts by President Obama to appease rogue regimes at all cost,” Mr. Rubio, a Cuban-American, said in a statement. “When America is unwilling to advocate for individual liberty and freedom of political expression 90 miles from our shores, it represents a terrible setback for the hopes of all oppressed people around the globe.”

Mr. Rubio said “America will be less safe as a result of the president’s change in policy,” and promised to use his perch as the incoming chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee’s Western Hemisphere subcommittee to block Mr. Obama’s diplomatic efforts with Cuba.

Senator Robert Menendez, Democrat of New Jersey and one of three senators with Cuban ancestry, also criticized the president, who as part of a larger agreement with Cuba is releasing three Cuban spies who were arrested in Miami in 2001. Mr. Menendez, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, warned that the exchange sets a “an extremely dangerous precedent.”

“Let’s be clear,” he said, “this was not a ‘humanitarian’ act by the Castro regime. It was a swap of convicted spies for an innocent American. "This asymmetrical trade will invite further belligerence toward Cuba’s opposition movement and the hardening of the government’s dictatorial hold on its people.”

Senator Bob Corker, Republican of Tennessee, who will take over as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in January, was more reserved.

“The new U.S. policy announced by the administration is no doubt sweeping, and as of now there is no real understanding as to what changes the Cuban government is prepared to make,” he said in a statement. “We will be closely examining the implications of these major policy changes in the next Congress.”

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Ana M. Carbonell, a Cuban-American Republican strategist in South Florida, said Mr. Obama's move would place pressure on Hillary Rodham Clinton. "She's going to have to make a serious evaluation about this and decide which side of history she wants to be on," Ms. Carbonell said. Should Mrs. Clinton run for president, she said, her chances of winning Florida will suffer "unless she distances herself from this decision"

Ms. Carbonell rejected the idea that the generational shift among Cuban-Americans and the rise in Florida's Puerto Rican population had made the embargo issue less potent in statewide races. She pointed to this year's race for governor, in which the unpopular incumbent, Gov. Rick Scott, a Republican who backs the embargo, defeated Charlie Crist, a Democrat.

"Crist would have been the first Florida governor in history to openly favor normalizing relations and look at the results," she said. (Mr. Crist won decisively among Hispanics who were not from Cuba, but only narrowly among Cuban-Americans).

Mrs. Clinton has been advocating for a normalization of relations with Cuba for some time. She wrote about it in her book "Hard Choices" and spoke passionately about it during an interview with Fusion last summer.

"I would like to see that end," Mrs. Clinton said of the embargo. "I think it has been a failure."

Mrs. Clinton argued that the embargo has propped up the Castro government because Cuban officials can blame the United States for all the country's problems. Moreover, she said, the embargo did not have any impact on freedom of speech, freedom of expression or on freeing political prisoners.

The former secretary of state said she would like to see the United States influence Cuba through commerce, trade and travel. She has also said that she hoped the Alan Gross situation would be resolved and that she could someday travel to the country.

Politico: "Poll: Voters cool to a Hillary Clinton campaign"

By Lucy McCalmont

December 17, 2014, 7:27 a.m. EST

Voters are sharply divided about a Hillary Clinton run for the White House, although she still has sizable advantages over other potential Democratic and Republican candidates, a new poll shows.

Fifty percent of those surveyed said they could support Clinton, and 48 percent said they would oppose her potential presidential bid, according to an NBC News/Wall Street Journal poll released Wednesday.

Clinton's tenure with the Obama administration could also work against her, as 71 percent said they want the next president to take a different approach than the current occupant of the White House. Showing further voter fatigue, 40 percent said they want to see a Republican elected, whereas 38 percent prefer a Democrat.

Nevertheless, Clinton's numbers are still strong compared with those of the GOP hopefuls.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Only 31 percent said they could support former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, who announced Tuesday he is actively exploring a bid, while 57 percent said they couldn't see themselves supporting him. Thirty-three percent said they would back Mitt Romney, and 60 percent said they would not. Only 27 percent said they would back a run by New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie. Fifty-three percent said they'd oppose him.

Democratic voters also continue to swarm to Clinton, with 82 percent saying they would support her bid. Fifty-one percent would back Vice President Joe Biden, and 37 percent said they'd support Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren.

On the GOP side, Romney comes out on top of possible contenders, with 63 percent of Republican voters saying they would back another bid by the 2012 GOP presidential candidate. Fifty-five percent would favor a Bush bid, 47 percent would back former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee, and 47 percent said they would support Kentucky Sen. Rand Paul if he were to run. More Republicans would actually oppose a Christie bid — 43 percent — than the 40 percent who said they would support him.

The NBC/WSJ poll was conducted Dec. 10-14 and included 1,000 adults. It has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.1 percentage points, and a margin of error among all 836 registered voters of plus or minus 3.4 percentage points.

NJ.com: "Chris Christie will move up his 2016 presidential timetable, Christie Whitman says"

By Matt Arco

December 17, 2014, 11:19 a.m. EST

TRENTON — If Gov. Chris Christie is interested in making a bid for the Oval Office in 2016, everyone may find out about it sooner rather than later, says former Gov. Christie Whitman.

"I think he's probably going to have to move up his timetable," Whitman said.

Her statement follows news former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush will "actively explore the possibility of running for president" in addition to establishing a leadership PAC in January, Bush said on Tuesday.

"By setting up this committee it allows Jeb Bush to put money in the bank and since money is the name of the game, … you're going to want to lock people down," Whitman said. "They're going to try to make a move and they're not going to want to wait too long."

Whitman's comments comes on the heels of some national Republicans declaring Tuesday they're lining up behind Bush despite being an "admirer" of Christie, said Mel Sembler, a former Republican National Committee finance chairman.

Had Bush ruled out a run, "I absolutely would have looked at Christie," he said.

But to Republicans like Whitman, who previously doubted Bush would ever enter the 2016 fray, the recent announcement is "a clear signal" Bush is running – which has considerable implications to a Christie campaign, she says.

"Look at some of the big donors in the past and see who donates to Jeb's committee," the former governor said

"That will be the telling thing," she said, "They will be making a bet (that Bush will win the nomination)."

Two things.

It feels like a pretty retro view of unions vs. the private sector. There are so many people in the union movement today trying to innovate to be relevant for the future -- is there anything we can say about that?

Second, the complete assault on privatization seems off. I understand why it's popular here, but she did so many public-private partnerships at State, that I think this goes too far in demonizing all private involvement in government.

Ted Strickland for SENATE

Friend,

Today I delivered a major speech in Akron about the stakes of this election.

I talked about the values I learned growing up in the small town of Duck Run, Ohio -- values Rob Portman clearly never learned.

I believe that the first job of Ohio's Senator is to fight for Ohio jobs. Senator Portman thinks his job is to look out for the Washington power brokers.

Rob Portman called the auto recovery plan, "a lousy deal for Ohio." I supported it.

In the Senate, I'll stand up for vital programs that put college in reach for millions of Americans. Senator Portman opposed allowing students to refinance their loans at lower rates.

Chip in to support my progressive vision >>

I'm running to be the next senator from Ohio, and the first senator from Duck Run.

Rob Portman has spent six years acting like the senator from China. Or Wall Street. Or the banking industry. Or for the Washington power brokers.

So it's no surprise that one industry lobbyist said that "Portman's face belongs on the Mount Rushmore of the financial services industry." Rob Portman and his dark money friends have spent an estimated $11 million against me -- and that's why.

But I have news for the senator and his friends the Koch brothers: The people of Ohio are not for sale. And this senate seat isn't for sale either.

I need your help to prove it. We're just 351 donors away from reaching 30,000 total donors before the end of January. Step up and chip in today.

Let's get to work,

Ted

> Thank you for your letter. I am indeed proud of my advocacy on behalf of women and women's economic empowerment over several decades. I know that in today's economy, women are disproportionately bearing the burden of tough economic times. Women are disproportionately poor and tens of millions of women are financially insecure - just one paycheck away from poverty.
> It is in part because of my support for economic advancement of all women that I am a strong, and longstanding supporter of increasing the minimum wage, not just for some companies, but for all US companies. Currently 60% of all minimum wage workers are women, and many of them are moms. Raising the minimum wage to $10.10 should not be an issue subject to political polarization. It makes economic sense because those people who get a raise will spend it buying goods and services, fueling economic activity in their local communities. It also makes budgetary sense because it will reduce expenditures by the government. The Center for American Progress recently released a study that found an increase of the minimum wage to $10.10 an hour will reduce SNAP expenditures - popularly referred to as food stamps - by $4.6 billion a year. That means that companies that pay below the minimum wage are in essence relying on government subsidies to ensure their workers do not go hungry. I hope that those that rail against government spending would support this increase in the minim wage that will reduce such spending. But I also believe raising the minimum wage is the moral thing to do as well because I simply believe that in America, if you work a job full-time, you shouldn't live in poverty. I believe that should be a basic bargain for all Americans.
> However, I know wages aren't the only issue for women at the bottom of the economic ladder. Women suffer disproportionately from a lack of flexibility policies in American companies. Seventy percent of low-income women do not have access to a single paid sick day and the United States is the only developed d nation that does not require paid maternity leave. As a country, we need to do far better helping all parents balance their responsibilities at home and at work. Too often parents, especially low-income workers, have to choose and that is not good for our companies or our families.

These are policies that I am happy to discuss because they are the issues I have fought for over the course of my career. I am proud of my work to underscore the importance of a minimum wage increase for women the last time the federal government increased the minimum wage in 1996. And I continued that advocacy as a Senator from New York. I know these issues are central to both our economic growth as a nation and to the American promise of shared prosperity we all hold so dear.

Sincerely,

Dear Hillary Clinton,

As First Lady, Senator, Secretary of State, and in your recent work with the Clinton Global Initiative, you have advocated for the cause of women's empowerment around the world. Today we write to ask you to also join us in an important women's empowerment initiative here at home. It involves an area to which you have a special connection and thus presents you, specifically, with an important responsibility to make a direct difference in the lives of hundreds of thousands of American women and an indirect difference in millions more.

The Walmart Corporation is the largest employer in the United States, employing about one in every hundred Americans. Unfortunately, America's largest employer sets a horrible example with its miserly wage policy. Walmart pays hundreds of thousands of their workers less per hour, adjusted for inflation, than minimum wage workers made 46 years ago. With rising housing, health and transportation costs, Walmart workers cannot make ends meet on less than $10,

Mr. John Podesta
Ms. Valerie Jarrett

Dear Valerie and John --

Congratulations again on your appointment as Co-Chairs of President-Elect Obama's Transition Committee. We know your days are full and that you are dealing with many significant issues as you prepare the way for our new President, so we appreciate this opportunity to share with you some thoughts we have on the relationship between the federal government and our nation's metropolitan areas.

As mentioned to you last week, a group of Mayors have been working on our thoughts for what a new White House office dealing with urban issues could immediately undertake to enlist our nation's cities and metro regions as partners with the federal government in the job of economic recovery. Attached is a final paper with signatures from sixteen mayors of major US cities, all of whom are committed to working with you and your team throughout this transition and as new partners in putting our economy on the right track.

Thank you for your work on behalf of the nation and for your commitment to a new approach to urban issues. We very much look forward to working with you on making this new partnership a reality and stand ready to assist in any way we can.

Best wishes --

A helpful reminder that there was a spate of coverage in 2008 around time of income tax releases where pundits questioned whether her wealth would hurt her with voters. And we also had to combat stories about WJC income by pointing out how many free speeches and speeches benefiting charitable causes he made.

It could be true that few if any couples have helped raise more funds for more different causes than the Clintons. (Plus they are historically more generous than most in the percentage of income they personally donate to charity).

Most Believe Hillary Clinton Can Relate to Average Americans, Poll Finds (NBC News)
By Mark Murray
June 29, 2014
NBC News

Fifty-five percent of Americans say that Hillary Clinton can relate to and understand the problems of average citizens as well as other presidential candidates can, according to a new NBC News/Wall Street Journal/Annenberg poll.

By comparison, 37 percent of respondents disagreed, saying she can't relate as well as other candidates can. These numbers come after Hillary Clinton declared that she and her husband were "dead broke" after leaving the White House in 2001.

"We came out of the White House not only dead broke, but in debt," she said to ABC News, answering a question about the six-figure payments she and her husband command when giving paid speeches.

Bill Clinton has defended his wife, telling NBC News' David Gregory: "She's not out of touch, and she advocated and worked as a senator for things that were good for ordinary people. And before that, all her life – and the people asking her questions should put this into some sort of context – I remember when we were in law school, she was out trying to get legal assistance for poor people. I remember she was working on trying, believing in paid leave for pregnant mothers in the 1970s."

In a PBS interview, Hillary Clinton expressed regrets over her "dead broke" comments. "Well, I shouldn't have said the five or so words that I said. But my inartful use of those few words doesn't change who I am, what I've stood for my entire life, what I stand for today."

"Bill and I have had terrific opportunities, both of us, you know, have worked hard," she said. "But we've been grateful for everything that we've been able to achieve, and sadly that's just not true for most Americans today."

The NBC/WSJ/Annenberg poll was conducted June 26-28 of 592 adults, and it has a margin of error of plus-minus 5.1 percentage points.

Despite the media flurry over a couple of awkward remarks she made, most people will understand her situation pretty quickly — she wasn't born rich but has become very rich — and are unlikely to hold it against her. Mitt Romney did not lose the last election because of his wealth. Hispanics and Asians did not vote against him in record numbers because he was a successful businessman. Clinton's great challenge will be to decide whether she represents change or continuity.
> Clinton will make history in a big and dramatic way if she is elected — as the first woman president. But she will make history in a smaller, more complicated sense as well. She would join just three other non-incumbents since 1900 to win the White House after their party had been in power for eight years. She would be the first to win who was not the vice president or the clear protégé of the incumbent president.

The examples will clarify. Since 1900, the three were William Howard Taft, Herbert Hoover and George H.W. Bush. Six others tried and lost: James Cox, Adlai Stevenson, Richard Nixon, Hubert Humphrey, Al Gore and John McCain. Interestingly, even the three successful ones had only one term as president.

A caveat: Beware of any grand pronouncements about the presidency because in statistical terms there have not been enough examples, and if you vary the criteria, you can always find an interesting pattern. The Republican Party broke almost every rule between 1861 and 1933, during which it held the presidency for 52 of the 72 years.

But the challenge for Clinton can be seen through the prism of her predecessors — should she run on change or continuity? The three who won all pledged to extend the president's policies. They also ran in economic good times with popular presidents. That's not always a guarantee, of course. Cox promised to be "a million percent" behind Woodrow Wilson's policies, but since Wilson was by then wildly unpopular for his signature policy, the League of Nations, Cox received the most resounding drubbing (in the popular vote) in history.

Some of the candidates had an easier time distancing themselves from unpopular presidents. McCain was clearly a rival and opponent of George W. Bush. Stevenson was very different from Harry Truman, but he was, in effect, asking for not a third term for the Democrats but a sixth term — after 20 years of Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Truman. Shortly before the 1952 election, Stevenson wrote to the Oregon Journal that "the thesis 'time for a change' is the principal obstacle ahead" for his campaign. After all, if the country wants change, it will probably vote for the other party. "It's time for a change" was Dwight Eisenhower's official campaign slogan in 1952.

The most awkward circumstance has been for vice presidents trying to distance themselves from their bosses. Humphrey tried mightily to explain that he was different from Lyndon Johnson without criticizing the latter. "One does not repudiate his family in order to establish his own identity," he would say. Gore faced the same problem in 2000, though many believe that he should not have tried to distance himself so much from a popular president who had presided over good times. As Michael Kinsley noted, Gore's often fiery and populist campaign seemed to have as its slogan: "You've never had it so good, and I'm mad as hell about it."

Today the country is in a slow recovery and President Obama's approval ratings are low. This might suggest that the best course would be for Clinton to distance herself from her former boss. But Obamacare and other policies of this president are very popular among many Democratic groups. Again, the three people in her shoes who won all ran on continuity.

Clinton's recent memoir suggests that she has not yet made up her mind as to what course she will follow. The book is a carefully calibrated mixture of praise and criticism, loyalty and voice, such that she can plausibly go in whatever direction she chooses.

The world today is different. And Clinton is in a unique position, especially if she can truly mobilize women voters. But history suggests that choosing change or continuity will truly be her hard choice.

Dear Colleagues,

At this time of loss in our community, I am writing to let you know of the passing of two other members of our extended family, Dr. William E. Paul and Judge Richard Cudahy.

Dr. Paul was Naomi Mezey's father-in-law and an extraordinarily accomplished research scientist at NIH. As the New York Times obituary observed, he was "an immunologist who was credited with focusing the federal government's disparate AIDS research programs in the 1990s on developing innovative therapies that saved millions of lives."

Judge Cudahy and his influential opinions are well-known to many members of the Law Center. He was, as Vic Nourse wrote me, "the liberal lion of the Seventh Circuit." The Judge was the grandfather of Vic's children and, as she observed, "my dear friend and mentor."

I know you will join me in extending condolences to Naomi and Vic. Please keep Dr. Paul and Judge Cudahy in your thoughts.

Sincerely,
Bill

Skin Flint

Republican Rep. Paul Broun, of Georgia's 10th District, has called for a ban on the sales of Playboy and Penthouse magazines at military installments, no doubt getting thousands of soldiers stationed at Georgia's bases to snap to attention.

However, Broun expressed his libertarian views by voting for an amendment to bar the Justice Department from prosecuting the use of marijuana for medical purposes. He called the vote "a constitutional issue pertaining to 'restraining' the federal government from interfering with the rights of the states," and joined 14 other Republicans backing the proposal, which was defeated, 165-262.

Find these and many other interesting facts in The Almanac of American Politics. It also includes:

- In-depth profiles and photographs of every governor, senator and House member
- Updated demographic information for every district and state from the Census Bureau's American Community Survey
- More than 60 state and congressional district maps, census data and information on everything from campaign expenditures to voting records to interest group ratings and more
- A statistical breakdown of the 2008 presidential vote by state and congressional district

Subject:	deep dive proposal
Attachments:	deepdiveproposal.doc

Attached and to follow is a brief memo laying out our thinking on how to move forward on the next step of the vetting process or the "deep dive." As you will see by the proposed dates, we will need to move forward quickly in assembling the legal teams necessary to carry out this process, so we hope to chat with you about it tomorrow following the transition meeting if possible.

Memo

To: John Podesta and Mike Froman
From: Cassandra Butts and Christine Varney
Date: October 3, 2008
Re: Deep Dive Proposal

For all individuals selected to go through the deep dive (the "subject"), we recommend the following:

Process:

1. The subject be contacted by a senior official and asked if they are interested and willing to go through the deep dive process described below in order to be considered for a Tier I position.

2. The next contact with the subject will come from the senior outside lawyer leading the deep dive team for that individual. The lead will explain the process to the subject, including:

- provide the subject with a copy of all required forms that must be completed, including the SF86 for the FBI background check; the appropriate committee questionnaires, the SF 278 Financial Disclosure; and schedule an interview for the subject with the lead lawyer of the deep dive team (the interview team) [?and a transition representative?].

- notify the FBI to begin the background check with the completion of SF86 (if that has not already been done in connection with obtaining security clearances for the transition effort);

- have the subject sign a consent form to provide access to credit reports, driving, court, medical, and other relevant materials needed beyond the required forms;

- ask the subject to compile needed tax returns;

3. The deep dive team will proceed to pull together and review credit records, bankruptcy, liens and judgment data, court records, driver records, etc. prior to the interview.

4. The deep dive interview team will interview the subject, covering all the material provided and retrieved prior to the interview. The interview will go into an in-depth and candid review of all issues that could impact confirmability or job performance, including family life, finances, medical history, etc. The interview will be conducted using a standard comprehensive outline of questions and topics.

5. As necessary and appropriate, the team will conduct a follow-up interview and interview references.

6. The lead lawyer on the deep dive team will then report orally their findings to the appropriate senior transition representative. The oral report will be accompanied by a written summary.

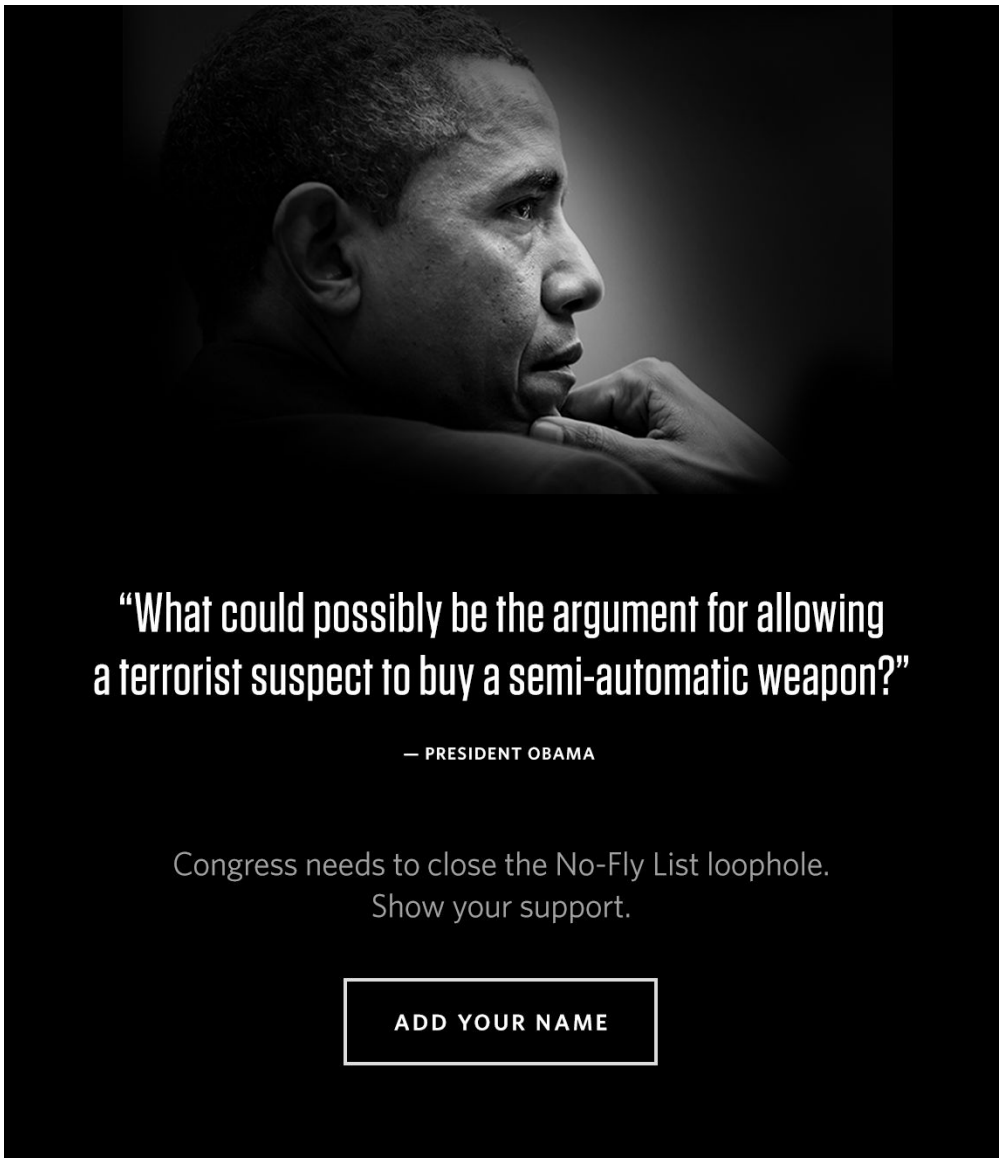
Structure:

We recommend having ten teams up and ready to go as soon as practicable. Each team would have a lead and be assisted by three or four attorneys. The leads would be senior lawyers, primarily in Washington, who are well-known to the campaign/transition, have experience in the vetting process, and can make the time commitment. Each lead would, in turn, assemble a team of three to four attorneys – in consultation with the transition – to assist in the deep dive. We envision a deep dive to take approximately ten days, depending upon the responsiveness of the subject.

We propose assembling ten teams by mid-October and doing trainings with the team leads no later than Saturday, October 25th. With a goal of making a limited set of announcements shortly after the election, we would like to begin the first six to eight deep dives by October 26, at the latest, in order to conclude by November 5th. We estimate we can then do up to 10 names every seven to 10 days thereafter in order to have approximately 30 senior appointments ready for confirmation as soon as possible after the inauguration. We expect to grow the number of deep dive teams needed to expand our post-election capacity.



A senior transition group (we propose to take the lead working with Mike) should coordinate handing out assignments to the team leads, following up on status, and answering questions from the team leads. When the deep dive is done, the lead lawyers will prepare both a written and oral report to be delivered directly to John. All paper will then be destroyed.

We strongly recommend that this process maintain a flat management structure that consists of the team leads reporting directly to the designated senior transition leads.

NH top-lines and Pete's memo attached.

We're scheduled to review both this survey and IA next Thursday – as we really want to give both polling teams ample time to analyze this data.

And we'll have top-lines from our Battleground survey on Monday.

Thanks.

No ballot alarms but we clearly need a strong economic focus and to make an effort to show HRC wants to help people.

Subject: You v. Kochs

The Koch Brothers have done it again, Friend.

The infamous Tea Party super donors are putting their skin in the game for Ken Cuccinelli. Tonight, they are his special guests at a fundraiser in New York City.

I consider this a challenge to all of us: Will we stand idly by and let special interest Tea Party donors prove their failures last year were a fluke? Or will we band together again and show them that grassroots support is what really matters?

With tonight's midnight pre-primary fundraising deadline rapidly approaching, we can show them what we're made of. And we're just $29,817 short of our $100,000 goal.

Will you put your skin in the game by donating $5 before midnight?

We did it in 2008. We did it in 2012. And I'm certain we can do it again in 2013.

President Obama, Senator Warner, and Senator Kaine all showed that the Commonwealth can stand up to the Koch Brothers.

Virginians wouldn't stand for it then. And I'm banking my campaign on you not standing for it now, either.

While Ken Cuccinelli is catering to the wealthiest Tea Party donors in New York City, let's show them what our grassroots movement in Virginia is capable of.

Donate $5 before the midnight deadline and tell the Koch Brothers they can't buy this election.

If we're successful tonight, the press and political pundits will have nothing but good things to say about our financial report when they compare it to Cuccinelli's.

Thanks for having my back,

Terry

Granholm uninterested in an appointment to Obama administration

By CHRIS CHRISTOFF
FREE PRESS STAFF WRITER
LANSING – Gov. Jennifer Granholm has no interest in an appointment to President-elect Barack Obama's administration, her spokeswoman, Elizabeth Boyd, told the Free Press today.
"The governor has made it clear she does not want to be considered for an appointment at this time," Boyd said, although it was unclear if Granholm conveyed that sentiment to Obama's transition team.
Still, it was Granholm's strongest denial of a possible path to Washington, in the middle of her four-year term as governor.
Speculation has swirled that Granholm might receive a presidential appointment, given her high-profile inclusion as part of Obama's team of economic advisors and her support for Obama during the campaign. Most recently, that speculation centered on an appointment as U.S. secretary of labor.
Granholm has said numerous times – most recently on the television news show "Meet the Press" -- that she is looking forward to being governor with a Democratic president to help Michigan.
Granholm originally supported Hillary Clinton for president, but she became an ardent Obama campaigner after he clinched the Democratic nomination.
Asked if Granholm knew whether she was undergoing a background check for a possible Obama appointment, Boyd replied, "That's immaterial because she's not interested."

As I mentioned, Heather Zichal and I spoke to Phil Barnett and other Waxman staff about Sec 115, and, after asking a few questions about timing and what they were hoping to achieve, they seemed to think that it would make sense for them to do a little more research and then have some additional consultations with State and EPA before making a big public push. Phil said he was going to talk Waxman and so you may be hearing again from him about this possible new course, so I just wanted to give you a heads up. --Pete

John: Great Supreme Court decision this morning! I'm sure everyone is pleased and relieved. I have now finished my grading and I'm trying to figure out what to do this summer since I'm not teaching summer school. I could be in LA or DC beginning next week until October 1. I would love to help you on the campaign so long as it's useful and modestly compensated. For you, I would carry your briefcase or whatever else might be needed. I could do any number of things well, including being a persuasive surrogate to help raise money and/or organize to get people involved and committed. I'm great with students and millennials, not to mention our baby boomer contemporaries. I'm familiar with all the issues -- no training required. I could jump right in and I'm available.

Also, thinking a little longer term, I'd like to talk to you about a couple of opportunities at CAP, most particularly the Director of the Federal Courts Program.

Let me know what I can do for you and the campaign, when and where.

I was in touch with Ted Kaufman and people in the VP's office, but for obvious reasons, at the service, I was not able to see the VP or any members of the Biden family and I wasn't able to sign the memorial book because it had been taken away when we came out of the church. I would just like to be able to send Joe and Jill a personal card and note that they would actually see and that would not get lost in the general White House mail. Any ideas on how to accomplish that would be much appreciated.

http://www.huffingtonpost.com/2015/04/22/bernie-sanders-fast-track_n_7118242.html

WASHINGTON -- Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-Vt.) is filibustering President Barack Obama's trade agenda -- sort of.

Early Wednesday, Sanders forced the Senate Finance Committee to abandon a legislative hearing on a bill that would grant Obama so-called fast-track authority on trade agreements. Sanders invoked an arcane procedural maneuver, objecting to a rule that allows committees to meet during legislative sessions. By doing so, Sanders has prevented the Finance Committee from dealing with the trade bill until at least 4:00 p.m.

That's significant because Senate Democrats, including Sherrod Brown (D-Ohio), have prepared dozens of amendments to the fast-track bill, which will take several hours to address in committee. If the panel can't finish its work Wednesday, or just decides to call it a day early and resume its business tomorrow, Sanders can raise the same objection again, potentially delaying the process for several days.

It's not quite a filibuster, but it's an aggressive maneuver to stall the trade package for as long as possible while Democrats and many Republicans marshal votes against it.

Sanders explained the motivation for his procedural gambit in a lengthy speech on the Senate floor.

"I think it's time we slowed down fast track," Sanders said. "It is basically insane to keep going with the same type of trade policy that has failed and failed and failed."

"It's a very brave tactic," said Lori Wallach, director of Public Citizen's Global Trade Watch, one of the leading opponents of Obama's Trans-Pacific Partnership deal.

Democrats have been howling about TPP for years, concerned that the agreement with 11 other Pacific nations will exacerbate income inequality and undermine key regulations in the U.S. and abroad. Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) has been particularly critical of a clause that would empower multinational corporations to challenge domestic laws and regulations before an international tribunal, which could jeopardize key environmental, financial and public health protections. The Obama administration treats TPP negotiation drafts as classified information, but leaks of parts of the pact have only heightened Democratic concerns.

The deal has opened a major rift between Obama and the rest of his party, including Senate Minority Leader Harry Reid (D-Nev.) and Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-N.Y.), who is next in line for the leadership position. TPP is one of the more contentious issues for Hillary Clinton in the Democratic presidential primary, and Sanders is considering challenging Clinton for the nomination.

Republican leadership in both chambers of Congress supports the trade pact, arguing it will boost U.S. exports and economic growth, but a host of tea party members in the House oppose the pact, arguing that it undermines American sovereignty.

The fast-track bill would strip Congress of its power to amend or filibuster TPP and other trade pacts for several years, and is widely viewed as essential to getting TPP approved. Under fast track, Congress sends the president negotiating objectives on trade as a set of non-binding instructions, which would be all but immaterial to the substance of an agreement the Obama administration has been negotiating for years. While most Republicans in both chambers support fast track as a means to enact TPP, many in the House oppose ceding Obama additional executive authority on principle.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Fast-track supporters had hoped that passing the bill by a wide margin in the Senate would pressure opponents in the House to change course. Efforts by Sanders, Brown and other Democrats to block the bill are intended to embolden House Democrats to vote against it. To date, only a handful of House Democrats have come out in support of the fast-track legislation.

The quasi-filibuster is not without risk. If committee chairman Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) decides to keep the Senate Finance Committee in session deep into the night, Sanders could be blamed for forcing everyone to lose sleep. Hatch and Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) could also devise their own procedural tactics to retaliate against TPP opponents.

This article has been updated with an additional quote from Sanders.

Governor Bentley's insistence that the decision—which came a year after the state's voter ID law took effect—has nothing to do with race, the parallels are inescapable: Alabama is living through a blast from the Jim Crow past.

It's hard to believe that 50 years after Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. marched and Rosa Parks sat and John Lewis bled, Americans are still fighting to exercise the most fundamental right in our democracy. Meanwhile, Governor Bentley is offering the same excuses we've heard for half a century to justify laws that disproportionately affect people of color, low-income people, women, young people, and seniors. It reminds me of a saying from Arkansas: "You find a turtle on a fence post, it did not get there on its own."

But for every Republican governor working to dismantle voting rights, there are Americans determined to keep marching forward. I'm proud of the outcry in Alabama from people who have come together to demand better. It's time for Governor Bentley to listen to your voices and reverse the decision to close DMV offices in the Black Belt and other rural counties. But the reforms shouldn't stop there. Alabama is one of a handful of states with no early voting—that needs to change. Alabama should also eliminate the discriminatory and demeaning state requirement that people provide proof of citizenship along with their voter registration forms—a law modeled on one that has stopped more than 30,000 would-be voters from registering in Kansas. And they should make sure that Americans who have served time should have their voting rights restored once they're released.

Unfortunately (but not surprisingly), Alabama isn't an outlier. Over the past few years, many states have passed laws that make it harder to vote. Since the Supreme Court gutted a key provision of the Voting Rights Act, a dire situation has gotten even worse. And there are those—including many of the Republican candidates for president—who would continue to push our country in this shameful direction.

Jeb Bush says he wouldn't reauthorize the Voting Rights Act—because it's gotten easier to vote since it was passed. As Justice Ginsburg has said, that's like throwing away your umbrella in a rainstorm because you're not getting wet. Marco Rubio has supported harsh voter ID laws. John Kasich restricted early voting in Ohio—a state where 77 percent of early voters in 2008 were African American. What part of democracy are they so afraid of?

Many of the people who fought and sacrificed for the right to vote are no longer alive to witness these abuses. But we are. And we have an obligation to stop the systematic and deliberate effort to disenfranchise voters.

First, Congress should put principle ahead of politics and pass the Voting Rights Advancement Act—a bipartisan bill that would restore the full protections of the Voting Rights Act.

Second, we should set a standard across this country of at least 20 days of early, in-person voting—including opportunities for weekend and evening voting.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Third, we should go even further. We need universal, automatic voter registration—so that every young person in every state is automatically registered to vote when they turn 18, unless they choose to opt out. I applaud California for implementing this measure last week—an incredible victory in our most populous state.

These steps alone won't solve all of the challenges we face. But we owe it to future generations to fight back against attacks on voting, and to meet this moment with the bravery and determination of those who have come before us. It's time for leaders in every party, at every level of government, to be on the right side of history.

Yes, I have been in DC for a several months.
There is no chance Podesta would do Buzzsaw. He doesn't do any such shows. He wouldn't do RT.
The only contact info I have for him since he has now left the Center for American Progress is his Georgetown U. email address. May not be active.
podesta@law.georgetown.edu

BTW, noted that Tyrel is getting some quality RT time subbing for Abby. Cool.

How long are you in DC?

We are on fire for HRC!
I was in MN on Saturday with HomeCare provider and early childhood teacher, today I was with a security officers and hospital worker.
Today, I heard the hospital leader describe how she has moved voters in NOVA. Hillary knows us. She knows our community, she knows "It Takes a Village".
" I read her book in 1996. - she has faced hard times, she knows rejection, I got tears in my eyes reading it. That's why I'm out here fighting for her - she knows what it's like to work about whether/when your daughter will next eat. "

I thought HRC speech in Miami spoke directly to her tonight.
Well done. Thanks John.

Let's change 1st one to: Great news on #post2015 sustainable development goals--the agenda to extend extreme poverty agreed to by reps of 193 countries.
Then the 2nd one could be. New goals will seek to end poverty, secure gender equality, ensure food security by 2030. Kudos to youth advocates who lobbied governments for more just and sustainable societies.

Subject:	I knew it wouldn't be easy

Friend,

When I made the decision to take the minimum wage challenge -- living on the minimum wage for seven days -- I knew it wouldn't be easy.

Mostly it's the big things -- housing costs, groceries -- that make living on just $8.25 an hour the struggle that it is today.

But sometimes it's the little things that can trip you up and throw you off course.

Sunday was my niece's birthday, but with only $79 to live on for the week after housing and transportation costs, I couldn't afford to buy her a card.

I wrote her a letter instead, and gave her $1.00. Usually I give her more, but she understood.

Lessons like that -- not being able to buy a gift for a child -- are the reason I'm taking the minimum wage challenge.

For the rest of my week, I'll be talking to people who are struggling to get by on the minimum wage -- sitting down to dinner with them, visiting them at work, meeting with them in their communities.

That's what this challenge is about -- it's a chance to understand your neighbors a little better.

And after this week is over, I won't stop fighting for a higher minimum wage until we get the job done.

I hope you'll join me -- for our workers, for our families, and for our state.

Thanks.

Governor Quinn

This is it, John.

This is the last week of Barack's last campaign, and today is your last chance to chip in and help strengthen it for the final (and most difficult) stretch.

Our final budget deadline is tonight at midnight, and that means our final decisions will be made tomorrow based on what we have in the bank. In a race as close as this one, every single dollar will play a role in whether Barack wins or loses.

I don't plan on waking up on November 7th wishing I had done just a little bit more when I still had the chance.

I hope you don't, either -- so please don't wait any longer to take ownership of this campaign. Donate $5 or more today:

Thank you for everything.

Sandy Berger & Stephen Hadley co-authored an op-ed in today's Washington Post on Israel/Gaza.

A return to Gaza

Demonstrators hold up anti-war banners as thousands of Israelis protest during a left-wing peace rally in the coastal city of Tel Aviv calling for the Israeli government to negotiate with the Palestinian Authority on August 16, 2014. Israeli and Palestinian negotiators are poised to resume indirect talks with Egyptian mediators on reaching a more permanent ceasefire before a current truce expires at midnight on August 18. Samuel R. Berger, Stephen J. Hadley
August 20, 2014
Samuel R. Berger was National Security Adviser to President Bill Clinton from 1997-2001. He is now chair of Albright Stonebridge Group. Stephen J. Hadley was National Security Adviser to President George W. Bush from 2005-2009. He is currently chair of the Board of Directors of the U.S Institute of Peace.

Afragile cease-fire has temporarily stopped the violence in Gaza, and Israeli and Palestinian delegations have made efforts to negotiate a more permanent resolution. The only way they can succeed is to let the Palestinian Authority and its security forces back into Gaza.

The Hamas terrorist organization forced the PA out of Gaza in 2007. But in the West Bank, the PA's security forces have proved relatively effective in maintaining security. There has been good cooperation with Israeli security forces, and considerable progress has been made in building the governmental institutions of a potential Palestinian state.

By contrast, Hamas's rule in Gaza has been disastrous for its people — producing economic failure, brutal governance, human hardship, little hope and three wars with Israel in six years .

Both sides in the most recent Gaza conflict have their requirements for peace. Israel wants an end to rocket and missile attacks from Gaza (as well as terrorist tunnels) and the demilitarization of Hamas and other terrorist groups. Hamas wants the opening of crossing points with Egypt and Israel, the return of prisoners and the rebuilding of Gazan infrastructure, including an airport and seaport.

These requirements can be met only by reintroducing the PA and its security forces into Gaza, supported by the international community. Recent polling suggests that Palestinians in Gaza would favor such an outcome.

Hamas must recognize that Israel and Egypt are not going to open the crossing points unless a reliable party is there to ensure that what crosses into Gaza will not be used to rebuild tunnels and other terrorist infrastructure. The only such party Hamas is likely to accept is the PA, perhaps reinforced by an international presence. Hard for Hamas, no doubt, but discontent among Gaza's citizens, Hamas's international isolation and the need to get the Gaza economy going again may be sufficiently persuasive. And some saving of face may be provided by the pact established last April between Hamas and Fatah (the party headed by Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas that is committed to nonviolence) — and the unity government they formed in June.

For Israel, the PA's return to Gaza offers the best hope for preventing the resumption of rocket, missile and tunnel attacks on Israel. Over time, PA security forces could take control of the heavy weapons now in the hands of Hamas and other terrorist groups and begin to disband their militias — steps that are fully consistent with Abbas's avowed goal of "one authority, one law and one gun." Any prisoners Israel agreed to release in return should be turned over to the PA government, not Hamas.

As part of a more permanent cease-fire, the PA unity government should appoint a cabinet-level team to oversee the rebuilding of housing, factories and public facilities that were destroyed by the war. This team should simultaneously be charged with reform of Gaza's governmental institutions to make them more accountable, effective and aligned with those in the West Bank.

Implementing a permanent Gaza cease-fire along these lines could open up opportunities on the West Bank, where Hamas has gained in popularity because it was seen as taking on Israel. It is important now to strengthen the position in the West Bank of Abbas and other PA leaders who have stood against violence. The most important step would be enhancing the prospects of the two-state solution — with the state of Israel and a state of Palestine living side by side in peace and security. For even as mistrust has deepened, a majority of each community still supports this goal.

Direct negotiations between Israelis and Palestinians are too hard politically for both communities right now. But Israel could take steps on the ground — in close but quiet coordination with the PA — that could preserve and even advance the two-state objective. Israel could cut back its security operations in areas in the West Bank where security responsibility is in the hands of the PA. More Palestinian business activity could be permitted in areas that remain under Israeli control. Some areas now under Israeli control could be transferred to the PA. And Israel could gradually pull back its military forces to the positions they held before the last intifada in 2000 .

Why should Israel take any unilateral steps? First, they would not be truly unilateral. In parallel, PA security forces would be keeping Gaza quiet and assuming more security responsibility in the West Bank. Second, it is in Israel's interest for Palestinians to see the PA assume more control. It will enhance Palestinian confidence that the two-state solution can become a reality and strengthen the prospects of Fatah — rather than of Hamas — in future Palestinian elections.

This has been an exhausting period for Israelis and Palestinians. It is tempting to turn away even from modest steps. But today in the Middle East, standing still is sliding backward.

Samuel R. Berger was national security adviser to President Bill Clinton from 1997 to 2001. He is now chair of Albright Stonebridge Group. Stephen J. Hadley was national security adviser to President George W. Bush from 2005 to 2009. He is currently chair of the board of directors of the U.S. Institute of Peace.

Dear Megan.

Thanks for the additional opportunity. Since I am at a family wedding outside St. Louis. I am unable to do line edits, as I did before. So permit me to make the following comments on what is genuinely an excellent speech.

First, the speech lacks a critical element; a clear statement that Hillary will use military force, if necessary, to deal with violations that threaten the agreement, not just the pablum that all options are on the table. Iran must know now what the consequences are of cheating. It does not mean this would be the first recourse.

Second, please add o the weapons sytems for Israel (I suggested the BBB and MOP): "And I will work with Congress to provide Israel with the weapons she needs to defend herself against any possible attack from Iran."

Third, add to the reference to Schumer. Senator Cardin (and Senator Menendez).

Fourth, add a reference in the Syrian section to expedite the very slow, disappointing vetting, training and arming of the opposition.

Fifth, in the references to "Death to America", "Death to Israel" to add to the gravity. This could come later in the speech when she refers with enphasis to the threat to Israel.

Thanks, again, for the opportunity to comment. This kind of subatantive speech is also the best antidote to the other diversions.

Best wishes,

Stu Eizenstat

Amb. Eizenstat -- thanks again for your edits to the earlier version of this speech. It's been through a few iterations since then. Jake asked that I send you the latest version, in case you have time to look again... we'd really appreciate it.

You'll see a lot of the changes you suggested added here. If you see that we didn't take some change that you suggested and you feel strongly about it, please re-flag for me and I'll go back to Jake with it.

Thank you thank you!

Subject:	An Interview Request from Yale University

Dear Mr. Podesta,

My name is David Steiner and I am a junior at Yale University, where I am the editor of Yale's political magazine, The Politic. We frequently feature interviews with public officials, scholars, and authors, and I am writing to you today because I am wondering if one of our staff writers could speak with you over the phone for an interview.

Here's a little background on our magazine:

The Politic is Yale University's undergraduate journal of politics. Since 1947, this storied publication has provided an outlet for the politically inclined on Yale's campus, with past Editors-in-Chief including Fareed Zakaria, Gideon Rose and Robert Kagan. Publishing four times a year, The Politic features long-form, investigative articles. This magazine prides itself in speaking with this country's—and the world's—foremost public servants, policy makers, and intellectuals. In the past, The Politic has interviewed President Obama, Secretary Kerry, President Zedillo of Mexico, and so many more. We recently concluded the largest project in the organization's history, interviewing over 100 United States Ambassadors in a series entitled "Diplomatic Discourse," which has received international attention from the U.S. Department of State, to media outlets worldwide.

We would be most grateful for any amount of time that you could offer. I look forward to hearing back from you, and I hope you have a nice weekend.

All the best,
David

No doubt he is wonderful person and looks to have some solid work experience, but at the same time his hire is confusing and underwhelming. Where was Hillary on this hire? It feels and looks like she had no part in this hire and that is extremely upsetting!

important ruling for LGBTQ civil rights in the history of our country, while the LGBTQ community is splintering into progressive equality movements of race, immigration, transgender, women's issues, and other forms of discrimination facing everyone else, except for the exclusive white and affluent gay male community that dominates the LGBTQ D.C based organizations. The optics of this hire are highly problematic within a rapidly changing political environment in the LGBTQ community.

The feedback from my friends, many of whom are highly involved in the discussions and debates that are currently happening along the lines of gender, race, immigration, homeless youth, HIV, Trans-persons, etc. view this hire with cynicism, reacting with “eye roll” and accompanied by significant disappointment over the lack of any boldness in this choice.

The feedback about this hire from my friends who are donors is deep disappointment because he appears to lacks requisite gravitas expected when soliciting political support and money from a highly sophisticated community.

Optics – of this hire evokes the exclusionary white male dominated Human Rights Campaign. Even at the HRC gala this past weekend in D.C people, were expressing their disappointment to outright anger with respect to the audience, which had very little diversity present.

Where are the 'movement' hires? Surely there were folks with credibility and breadth of experience who applied for this very important hire? I know from a grassroots perspective, many of us have experience working with Jeff Campagna. Even my contacts in Labor and Equality California seemed behind Mr. Campagna, so I'm confused as to why someone like Jeff would be overlooked. Was this an oversight? I'd think if Hillary was serious about the LGBTQ community she would have had a role in this very important hire, and it feels and looks like she had no part in this hire and that it was left to perhaps the talent director and that doesn't feel or look good.

Wouldn’t a campaign task force for the LGBTQ community with a strong director at the helm be more appropriate to aggressively court and tie in the various components to build and consolidate community support for Hillary? I see no evidence of this reality. It must happen.

3: Second concern: The figure of $1,700 is the AVERAGE campaign donation from Illinois, reported for last quarter. That is a PROBLEM! As a grassroots organizer and a max donor and someone who helps raise money and has also attended a number of the high dollar events, it's my observation that these events are missed opportunities and leave a considerable amount of money on the table. These events should be opened up to:

10 $1,000 spaces (this would allow for greater diversity at these events);

5 spots for local volunteers/ college leaders/organizers - the infusion of youth and the energy they bring really makes the event better and inspires Hillary's hardest and most important workers to carry on;

Small Business Host Events $500/small business owners - this is affordable by a number of small business owners/many bring women employers;

4. Low Dollar fundraising needs support - each state/finance team should have a staff person dedicated to supporting these events and help get the lower dollar surrogate events going for the $50 - $250 a head;

Create an incentive for Hill-Raisers/Blazers to recruit and help low dollar fundraisers that commit to raising $2,700 for these events (do $5,400, $10,800 levels as well);

Reinforce that incentive for those low dollar fundraisers that raise $2,700 by inviting them once they reach their goal to a high dollar event to meet Hillary/photo op :);

The emails asking for donations need to get on a cycle that works with everyday

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Americans, like $5 Fridays.

The amount of emails and follow ups asking for more money makes it feel like my contribution isn't enough, that's the impression the experience leaves one feeling badly;

5: Ethnic Outreach: Would it be possible to get a brief audience on November 2nd with some of the Chicago ethnic leaders: re: Maureen Pikarski who you met in Chicago. I see Hillary has a window in her busy schedule from 3-6 p.m. Also, it seems we have had little traction on the Bosnian American outreach and that is a HIGHLY strategic in Iowa and Missouri and enthusiastic supporters of Hillary. Our Missouri HRC super volunteer has asked the Midwest Fundraising team to schedule a side meeting with Hillary and the leadership of the St. Louis Bosnian community during her next trip to Missouri. The feedback I'm hearing is that folks have mixed feelings about the campaign's response so far and I recommend hiring asap and engage aggressively through the Ethnic Outreach department - more of a TASK FORCE with liaisons to court and engage the diverse constituencies with the sensitivity and respect they deserve. It would be most unfortunate to see another young D.C organizational hire that isn't up to the task for each of the assigned 10 desks.

6: Hillary's 2007 delegates - have they been contacted yet? I shared an updated list with David Huyhn at the DNC Summer Meeting and I hope outreach is happening. I think it would be a wonderful gesture to do some special outreach there. (update David Huyhn says that is underway! :))

Consider the following issues:

7: Messaging: Hillary's four fights seem to get lost and aren't front and center (we need easy print outs for folks to hand out that are shrunk down so you can print and cut a page into 4 that has four fights on it).
Hillary lacks a slogan like Trump: Let's Make America Great Again or Bernie: Not for Sale etc. etc. perhaps Hillary: A fighter in your corner (you get the idea) Bernie has cornered the market on income equality but Hillary can really pounce on Civil Rights and Social Justice as part an parcel of good economic policy. (As of today, a four fight print out was provided for the debate watch night! THANK YOU!)

8: Disability outreach and mobilization - again that should be a special task force - especially targeting caucus states and swing states. Getting them engaged in volunteer activities and identifying ways to get them to the polls! Dr. Janice Lehrer Stein in San Francisco has spoken to you and Robbie I believe on this matter.

9: Many people would like to contribute to this campaign in other ways that do not include money. CREATE incentives! Like 1,000 sign-ups gets someone an autographed book by Hillary! 5,000 sign ups by one person gets them to a high dollar event, 10,000 sign ups gets the person a professional autographed and framed photo with Hillary and 50,000 sign ups gets you a dinner with Hillary (have this set up like Hillraisers and Hillblazers with recruitment so that folks get credit for the efforts of their recruits)

10: Create another incentive for merchandise: Like Hillraiser Links - provide HillMerchandiser Links so that folks get an incentive/credit for every sale made via purchases on those links...this helps encourage folks to sell and promote the merchandise store! Again - a certain number of sales gets someone free merchandise, an even greater amount of sales gets you an invitation to a fundraiser event with Hillary or Bill or Chelsea, etc.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

11: St. Louis is the largest Bosnian American community in the U.S. --around 80,000. Angie Acree, HRC Super Volunteer and the Clinton Campaign volunteer rep in Missouri has asked the Midwest Fundraising Team to arrange for a side meeting between Hillary and the Bosnian American leadership in Missouri during her next fundraising trip. It is the belief of Ajla Delkic, the executive director of the Advisory Council for Bosnia and Herzegovina (based in D.C.) that it would take little attention by Hillary to light this community on fire. Mr. Vajrovic is the leader and is locally connected to the Democratic Party. But no one has ever met with them from the Democratic Party at a senior level. Barack Obama lost Missouri to McCain by 3,903 votes in 2008. These votes are to be SOUGHT aggressively.

12: At the recent Ethnic Council Meeting with Amy Dacey, CEO of the DNC here in Chicago, the talk among the ethnic leaders of Chicago area was the lack of outreach to their constituencies....People were highlighting the absence of aggressive outreach since Bill Clinton's campaigns in 96 and Obama's in 2007 - November 2nd - Hillary is in Chicago ALL day for fundraisers - would be nice if an Ethnic Round Table could be arranged (small one) with Maureen Pikarski who could help make that happen 1-312-718-9351 and if it could be filmed by various news outlets that cater to these constituencies - would be huge in audience reached and for mobilizing the ethnic communities to help in IOWA and in IOWA!

13: Lastly swag: I know and appreciate how much frugality is being exercised in the primary (in stark contrast to 2007) but if perhaps something could be worked out so that grassroots point people in each state are not encumbered with the expense of providing the basics like bumper stickers (that provides free advertising!) lapel stickers at a minimum. This would be for commit to votes/commit to caucus but would really help at the tables/booths so many volunteers do (which many cost money to do) and provide incentives. It really is what is required in getting sign ups. The most successful efforts over the summer were ones that had folks who could afford to buy supplies like this for handing out in exchange for sign ups.

Thank you for your time reading this. Line item one is a very personal observation that has been shared with me from a number of sources involved in the LGBTQ movement/leaders etc - particular midwest to west coast. The rest are number of observations and feedback I've heard from multiple folks along the way.

Thank you for all you do to support Hillary's historic campaign for the presidency. Those of us in the grassroots and a growing contingent of volunteers continue to work hard for our Champion, she is worth it!

Best regards,

John West

I know we've been in touch with all of your assistants, but I just wanted to confirm that everyone is holding July 11-12 on their calendars for a strategic retreat in NYC. A draft agenda will go around later in the week for feedback. But the basic idea is to take a weekend to discuss big picture strategic issues, review IA/NH research, paid media/polling plans, early state plans, etc. – an opportunity for the SR Staff and the consultant team to step back from day-to-day issues and dedicate time to longer term strategy.

Thanks.

Dear John,

Once again, I am overwhelmed by your astounding generosity.

You, the grassroots of our cause, have always powered this campaign. We set a goal of raising $25,000 during May and, once again, you rose to the challenge and put us over the top. Thanks to your donations, we have bolted out of the gate and are ready to face next year's important election head on.

Today, I wanted to let you know about our new project that launched just last night: OffTheSidelines.org . I've fought tirelessly to be a voice for women across New York and our nation, and Off The Sidelines is the next step in our cause.

Too often, we see women in our communities – our friends and neighbors – stay on the sidelines while their voices are drowned out. OffTheSidelines.org is devoted to encouraging women everywhere to get involved in politics, business, and throughout their communities. By providing important advocacy and resources, our voices can be amplified and we will be heard.

Will you join the movement today?

Please take a look at OffTheSidelines.org , and as always, I welcome your input. Together, we are making a difference every day.

Sincerely,

Kirsten

Hillary Clinton praises DOJ probes of police shootings

By MAGGIE HABERMAN

12/4/14 3:32 PM EST

Hillary Clinton on Thursday praised the Department of Justice for probing the cases of two black men who died during encounters with the police in Missouri and New York, saying there are “hard truths” about how African Americans are treated by police.

The likely 2016 presidential candidate called for criminal justice reform and commended President Barack Obama for forming a task force on policing, but the Democrat, a favorite of police unions in New York State when she served as a senator, also praised “decent, honorable, brave” police officers throughout the country.

Clinton made the comments at the 2014 Massachusetts Conference for Women in Boston, where she delivered a keynote address before a crowd of several thousand women. They were her first remarks on the issue since grand juries declined to indict the white police officers accused in the two deaths.

The Boston event came the day after a grand jury in Staten Island, New York, chose not to indict a police officer in the death of Eric Garner, who was placed in a choke-hold during his encounter with the police. The decision sparking a series of protests throughout New York City and headlines questioning the judicial process just days after a grand jury last week refused to indict a police officer accused of shooting 18-year-old Michael Brown in Ferguson, Missouri.

Clinton’s comments on the DOJ probes echo calls from a number of civil rights leaders, such as the Rev. Al Sharpton, and her former New York congressional colleagues, who have urged the feds to take a close look at both cases.

“I know that a lot of hearts are breaking and we are asking ourselves aren’t these our sons aren’t these our brothers,” Clinton said. “I’m very pleased that the Department of Justice will be investigating what happened in Ferguson or Staten Island. Those families and those communities and our country deserve a fair and full accounting as well as whatever substantive reforms are necessary to assure quality justice and respect for every citizen."

"More broadly," Clinton went on, "each of us has to grapple with some hard truths about race and justice in America. Because, despite all the progress we've made together, African-Americans — most particularly African-American men — are still more likely to be stopped and searched by police, charged with crimes and sentenced to longer prison terms."

She added that "a third of all black men face the prospect of prison in their lifetimes — what devastating (consequences) that has for their families."

"The United States has less than 5 percent of the world's population, yet we have almost 25 percent of the world's total prison population," said Clinton, a former secretary of state. "Now, that is not because Americans are more violent or criminal than other (people) around the world, but it is because we have allowed our criminal justice system to get out of balance, and I personally hope that these tragedies give us the opportunity to come together as a nation to find our balance again."

She praised the "creative and effective police departments" around the nation that demonstrate "that it is possible to keep us safe and reduce crime and violence."

"There are decent, honorable brave police officers out in our communities every single day, inspiring trust and confidence rather than fear and frustration," she said. "So let's learn from the best examples."

Clinton also tackled an issue that's risen in the wake of the Ferguson shooting: whether to demilitarize police forces. She called for keeping the good and getting rid of "weapons of war that have no place on our streets and contribute to unnecessary force or arrest."

As for the president's task force and proposals for new funding streams for training and technology, Clinton called those "important steps."

But going forward, she said, will require understanding other people's struggles.

"The most important thing that each of us can do is to try even harder to see the world through our neighbor's eyes, to imagine what it is like to walk in their shoes, to share their pain and their hopes and their dreams," she said. "These tragedies did not happen in some far away place. They didn't happen to some other people. These are our streets, our children, our fellow Americans and our grief."

And she quoted Brown's father in saying, "We are stronger united."

Clinton gave extensive remarks about Brown's death and the days of rolling protests a few weeks after he was shot to death by a police officer who claimed he was attacked by the 18-year-old. At that time, in a paid speech, Clinton urged people in the crowd to try to imagine what they would feel like if they faced the same statistics of being stopped by police as black people face.

It was not immediately clear if Clinton's appearance at the Boston conference was a paid speech.

I don't love the "how could this happen in America" line. The ferguson case is highly complex. And this has been happening in America since the beginning. I think earlier on you should make the point about how these men are someone's sons, someone's friends, someone's neighbors. They are part of our community.

I'm glad that the Department of Justice is investigating what happened in Ferguson and Staten Island. These communities – and our country -- deserve a full and fair accounting and substantive reforms that ensure equality, justice and respect for every citizen.

A third of all black men face the prospect of prison during their lifetimes, which has devastating consequences for families and communities across our country.

The United States has less than five percent of the world's population, yet we have almost 25 percent of the world's total prison population. That's not because Americans are more violent or criminal than others around the world – far from it. It's because we have allowed our criminal justice system to get out of balance.

I hope that out of these tragedies, we can come together as a nation to find our balance again.

All over the country there are creative and effective police departments demonstrating that it is possible to keep us safe and reduce crime and violence without relying on unnecessary force or excessive incarceration. There are officers out there every day inspiring trust and confidence rather than fear and frustration.

We can learn from these examples, invest in what works, and make sure that federal funds to state and local law enforcement are used to bolster best practices rather than buy weapons of war that have no place on our streets or contribute to unnecessary force or arrests. The President has announced a task force on policing that will make recommendations in about 90 days. He's proposed funding for police body cameras and training. These are important steps.

And as we move forward, perhaps the most important thing each of us can do is to try even harder to see the world through our neighbors' eyes. Imagine what it's like to walk in their shoes. Share their pain – their hopes and dreams – make them our own.

These tragedies did not happen in some far-away place. They didn't happen to some other people. These are our streets. Our children. Our grief.

Here in Massachusetts you've always called yourself a "commonwealth," rather than a state. Because we're all in it together. And that's true for America as well. As Michael Brown's father said, we are strongest when we're united.

So it's in that spirit that I'm pleased to be with you here today in Boston, where our American experiment began and where you are doing so much to showcase the best of what i would really want more personal in this but can't do it b/c in a meeting.

it goes to my point re the larger context and not just walking in other's shoes - it's understanding that they are not "other" but ourselves.

Subject:	Benghazi - paid media update

Just wanted to send a quick update on where we are following today's HRC call:

- All three TV firms are script writing, we'll review drafts tomorrow afternoon. Research had pulled for us some of our best news clips. The trick, of course, is to connect Benghazi to emails in a way that's credible. But we discussed different ways to do it.

- The difficult part here is testing – if we want to ship something early next week, our testing options are very limited, and I feel like we really need to understand whether voters will believe that we can credibly conflate Benghazi and emails. But we do have groups tonight and tomorrow afternoon – so tonight, we're testing some video clips tonight in the groups and this spot that the digital team mocked up: https://app.frame.io/f/2Kh530dn

- GMMB is working on a more polished spot for tomorrow afternoon's groups.

Looking ahead to next week, I think we still need to resolve whether this is limited to a national cable buy or whether we're really going into IA and NH with this (currently mixed opinions on team). To do the latter, we'd be pulling other spots off the air before otherwise planned.

Please let me know if you'd like to further discuss any of this.

Oren

Can I give you a call today on this and a couple other topics? Just need 5 minutes. Let me know what time might work.

John - hope you're well. Thanks for Greece suggestions. Spoke to Phil Angelides and Mike Dukakis reached out. Brief readouts below. Miss you here - look forward to catching up soon. JZ Angelides is not close with Tsipras, but noted that Tsipras visited with him and other prominent Greek-Americans during a trip to the US when he was opposition leader, and they've kept in touch intermittently since. He is talking with Jamie Galbraith, a college classmate who he's known for about 40 years, this evening about how they might help reinforce our Plan A messaging to Tsipras-namely, that while Tsipras has his political imperatives domestically so too does Merkel and he needs to come forward with a credible reform plan. Angelides said in the event of an exit, he wanted to be helpful and offered to help mobilize the Greek-American community to provide assistance.

Dukakis offered to mobilize Greek-American community for whatever purpose. Noted he doesn't know of anyone who has strong ties to Tsipras directly. I emphasized our focus now is on Plan A of getting a deal done, and for him to dig deep into networks and think of anyone who can help move Tsipras. In longer-run, he had idea of lending American expertise to help Greece overcome skepticism about ability to implement reforms (e.g. former IRS to help them collect taxes). We agreed to stay in touch.
